

John Andrews.

5. 2. 11

PRESENTED TO THE LIBRARY

OF

PRINCETON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

BY

Mrs. Alexander Proudfit.

SCC
2391
v. 4

John Andrews
1789

A DEFENCE of NATURAL and REVEALED
RELIGION: BEING AN ABRIDGMENT
OF THE SERMONS

Preached at the LECTURE founded by
The Hon^{ble} Robert Boyle, Esq;

V O L. IV.

L O N D O N:
Printed for ARTHUR BETTESWORTH and CHARLES HITCH, at the Red-Lion in Pater-noster Row. MDCCLXXXVII.

Dr. BURNET's
DEMONSTRATION

OF

TRUE RELIGION.

PART II.

IN the first Part I gave a general View of the Design and Method of the Divine Providence in the Government of the World, demonstrated from the Natures and Reasons of Things; from hence I inferred, that if there be any History of the Government of the World agreeing with these Notions, it must be so far esteemed a credible History.

Now I have shewn the Scriptures to be such a History; which are wrote to give us a Knowledge of the various Circumstances of Mankind from time to time, and of the various Methods of God's dealing with them according to those Circumstances.

And as in this Book the whole Design of Providence is set forth to be what we shew'd it must be, that of making the World happy, by that only way of making them holy:

And since the Method for this Purpose is represented to have been by various Revelations at different Times, according as different Occasions called for them, this is so far a rational and consistent History, and on this Account it carries in it not only a general Credibility of the History it self, but also of those Revelations contained in it, as being of such a Nature, and given for such an End, and in such a Manner, as, according to our foregoing Arguments, it is reasonable to expect they should be.

Thus far I have gone in the Proof of the Scripture History in general:

I come to consider it more particularly, and examine it Step by Step.

And as it is, as I have said, a History of Providence; so since the whole Design of Providence is the Happiness of his Creatures; I will consider what Account this History gives us of Mankind, what Circumstances they are here said to have fallen into from time to time; and what Methods of Providence we can reasonably think such Circumstances might stand in need of, and whether it informs us of any such Providence made for them. And if we find it answer in these Particulars, we have all that is requisite in the Nature of the Thing, to demonstrate it a credible History.

In order to this Inquiry, it is necessary, that I remind you, that had the World continued innocent, there could have been no other Method of Providence necessary for its Happiness, but Preservation: And therefore as it was Sin that let in all those various Manifestations of the Divine Wisdom, Goodness and Power, that are necessary to the Government of the whole World, so as this History is apparently a History of Providence, it must inform us of the Rise and Progress of Sin, and of the several Methods that have been taken for the Happiness of the World, according to the different Circumstances that Sin has brought them into, and their Necessities called for.

And therefore as it is natural that it should, so it does does begin at the first Sin, if it gives us such an Account of this Sin, and the Consequences of it, and of such Methods taken for the Happiness of the World, as the Nature of their Case required, agreeable to the Reason of Things, this must be a credible Account.

Now in order to judge of this we will inquire what Reason can find out, and what Light it can discover in these Particulars, in order to compare it with this History.

The first then we are to enquire into, is the Origin of Sin.

The Origin of Sin.

The best way to find out how Sin came into the World, is to enquire into the Time when it began.

That it was of early Date, is certain by the Effects that are seen of it in all Mankind.

For before Sin entered into the World, Human Nature was otherwise, than we find it now.

Our first Parents, we have shewn, were made in a State of Perfection, Happiness, and Immortality.

But we are in a State of Imperfection, in respect both of our rational and bodily Faculties.

So that there is evidently a Change wrought upon our Natures.

And 'tis likewise evident that in all Parts, this Depravation is the same: As we may thence naturally conclude, that Depravation is something inherent in our Natures, and therefore must have been derived from that common Stock from whence all Mankind derived their Natures.

So on the other Hand, if it was the Effect of Sin, as we have shewn it was, it must have been the Sin of our first Parents. And as they must have been depraved in their own Nature, before any Depravation could be imparted to their Children, this Sin, which was the Cause of that Depravation, must have been committed before they had Children.

Thus far the Case is clear, as to the first Sinners.

4 Demonstration of true Religion.

But yet considering the State of Perfection our first Parents have been proved to be created in, the Question is, how they could be capable of falling into Sin ?

For though Man was in his own Nature capable of Transgression, yet there was nothing in his own Nature to incline him to it.

His Will, in his State of Perfection, was, as we have shewn, made subject to his Understanding, and therefore he could will nothing but as Reason should direct. The Body likewise was then subject to the Understanding, so that this could not carry him to any Thing, but what his Understanding should approve, and therefore if Man's Fall was owing to himself, it must have proceeded from some Error in his Understanding.

But this we have proved to be perfect, and capable of finding out Truth, so far as it lay within the Compass of Reason :

And therefore if the Understanding was mistaken, it must have been in something that Reason could not perfectly comprehend.

But 'tis hard to conceive, how this could be ; for that which by being mistaken, could produce such sad Effects, was doubtless necessary to be known : And we have shewn, that what was necessary to be known, and yet not knowable by Reason, was necessary to be known by Revelation ; and therefore we must conclude, that if the Sin of our first Parents was owing to any Mistake of the Understanding, as that must have been in something above Reason ; so it must have been in something that had either been commanded, or forbidden by Revelation.

And if so, then, since there were required a Revelation even in a State of Purity, relating to their Food, Marriage, and Language, the first Sin was committed through some Mistake, relating to one or other of these.

How

How this could be, is still hard to conceive. For the same Necessity, that required a Revelation to inform them, what they wanted to know, did require that it should be such a Revelation, as they could not be mistaken in. And therefore whatever Mistake they fell into relating to any Revelation, it could not arise from any defect in the Revelation itself, or any Ignorance of what was pretended to be revealed to them.

So that if they fell into Sin, it could be only for want of a due Consideration.

But how they could be wanting in this, is still hard to conceive.

And therefore as it could not arise from any want of Information, and as nothing could incline them to it, we must conclude they must have been drawn into it by something from without.

And as it could not be from God who is good, we must conclude, that if there are any evil Beings it must have arisen from them.

But further, if, as we have shewn, that Mankind was made for Happiness, and this Happiness consists in being like God, from hence it will follow, that as the first Sin must have arisen from some Mistake, so that Mistake must have been in something that they were made to think would make them like God.

And since we have shewn, that this Likeness to God must consist in acting according to right Reason which we call Holiness, and that so long as they continued to act so, they would be immortally happy.

From hence it will follow, that as our first Parents had no Inclination in their Will to act contrary to Reason, and therefore could be in no danger of losing their Happiness, they had nothing to take care of, but that their own Reason should be always right; that is, that they should always make a right Judgment of Things, so as truly to discern between Good and Evil; and if they could be sure of such Knowledge, they could not fail, both of Happiness and Immortality, and in this respect of being perfectly like God.

6 Demonstration of true Religion.

And then, as the only Thing our first Parents could desire, in order to immortal Happiness, was to be sure of such a Knowledge of Good and Evil; so this seems in Reason to be the only Thing they were capable of being tempted in, and therefore the Hopes of this Knowledge, seems to be the only Thing possible for them to be drawn into Sin by.

And if to all this we add, what we have proved, that in a State of Purity whatever was done, was done out of a Principle of Duty to God, we may farther conclude, that as the first Sin was owing to some Mistake, and that Mistake in something our first Parents thought would contribute to their Happiness in making them like God, so it must have been done out of a false Imagination, that it was what they must do, out of Duty to God.

Thus far we stand upon the Reason and Nature Things.

But yet, since we have shewn that the first Sin must have been committed against some former Revelation, it is hard to conceive, how it could be possible for our first Parents to think, that any thing could contribute to their Happiness, which they knew to be contrary to a revealed command, unless they had some Notion of a second Revelation commanding them to act contrary.

For to do any thing out of Duty to God, supposes that it is the Will of God that it shall be done.

And therefore if our first Parents sinned against a known Revelation, that Mistake must have arisen from some false imagination of a second Revelation enjoining them to do that as necessary to their Happiness, which by the former they were commanded not to do.

But

But yet it is hard to conceive how they could be drawn into such a false Imagination :

And therefore since it is a Matter of Fact, and is known by History, whatever History we have of this Event, which agrees with these Reasonings, and yet accounts for these Difficulties, we must not only conclude that History to be credible, but the more, by how much these Difficulties are by Reason the more unaccountable.

Now such a History we have in the first Book of Moses.

In which we are no sooner told of the Creation of one Man and one Woman, who were placed in a Garden, were they had suitable Objects to every Appetite ; but we are told of a Revelation concerning their Food, in which they have a Power to eat of every Fruit of the Garden but one, which is forbidden under the Penalty of Death, as being dangerous to be eaten.

Against this Revelation, they are represented to have sinned, by being drawn into a Mistake by the Insinuations of the Serpent.

What this Serpent was is not here told: But however that by the Serpent could not barely be meant the Animal so called, is certain ; because such Things are spoken of it which can belong only to a rational Creature.

And since that History tells us, there was no other rational Creature of Human Kind, but one Man and one Woman ; therefore by the Serpent Moses must have meant some wicked Spirit, who either appeared under the Disguise of a Serpent, or else actuated the real Body of that Creature, or else is represented by this Expression, as a figurative Character.

And accordingly in other Places of Scripture we are told, that this Serpent was that evil Spirit called the Devil.

And here it is to be observed, that this evil Spirit, according to Tradition, was originally created an happy Angel. But how great soever his Happiness was, he is nevertheless said to rebel against God, and thereupon to be cast, with his wicked Companions, into some Regions of Dishonour and Unhappiness.

When this happened we are not told: Whenever it was, 'tis natural to conceive, that the Motive which might induce him to destroy Mankind might be his Envy of their Happiness, and a Desire to revenge himself on God, by defeating his Intentions in the Creation of Mankind, by drawing them into Sin and Misery.

This might be the Motive that induced him to this wicked Enterprize; for the compassing of which he is here said to have come as a Serpent; and whatever the Expression means, it represents to us a Design formed to deceive. And with this View he is said to have addressed himself to the Woman, endeavouring to persuade her that there was no Danger in eating the forbidden Fruit, insinuating, that as they wanted nothing to make them sure of everlasting Happiness, but to discern between Good and Evil, so that was what this Fruit would give them; and by consequence they could then want nothing to make them like God, and free them from Death and Misery.

And as he urges this Motive to them, on the Consideration of the Lord's knowing it to be true; so without doubt he pretended to come from God to inform them of it. Of which Pretence though the Scripture is silent, yet it is reasonable to suppose, that unless it had been ushered in by some previous Pretence to gain him Credit, our first Parents could not have been capable of so much as lending an Ear to that which was an evident Contradiction to a positive Revelation of God.

And though the History does not directly say this, yet it is implied by the Abruptness of the Words in the

the

the first Verse of the third Chapter, that there had been some precedent Parly between the Serpent and the Woman.

The Words in the Original run thus. [Not as we translate them ; yea, bath God said?] But, yea, because, bath God said? ye shall not eat of every Tree of the Garden :

Which is as much as if he had said, yea, for this Cause, viz. because God bath said ye shall not eat of every Tree of the Garden.

Now these Words are plainly spoken, as an Answer to something that had been said before, which made the Woman ask a Reason for what he had pretended to her, as if she had inquired, whether the Thing was really as he pretended, and what was the Reason of it.

To which he answers, yea, and that this was the Reason of it, because God had not given Liberty to eat of every Tree.

Now what can we imagine more natural, than that he had pretended, he was sent from God ; the Reason of which, when she inquires after, he tells her was about the forbidden Fruit. For says he, bath God said, ye shall not eat of every Tree of the Garden?

To which the Woman replied in the Affirmative. [V. 2, 3.] To this the Serpent answered, ye shall not surely die, for the Lord knows, that in the Day that ye eat thereof, your Eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Gods, knowing Good and Evil.

If any should be prejudiced against this Notion of the Serpent's tempting our first Parents to sin, under the Pretence of his being a Messenger from God, he may see it fully confirmed by St. Paul, 2 Cor. xi. 3. where he cautions the Corinthians against a false Teacher, that came to them as an inspired Person, and as a true Apostle sent by God, when he really was a Minister of Satan; and he makes a Comparison between between Eve and those People, and represents them in the same Condition she was in, when she was beguiled by the Serpent.

And again, on the other Hand, makes a Comparison between Satan and his Ministers, and represents these as acting the same part with the Corinthians, as Satan did with Eve. And as he expresses his Fear lest the Corinthians should be beguiled by the Ministers of Satan, as Eve was by the Serpent: So he explains how that was; For, says he, as Satan transforms himself into an Angel of Light, so his Ministers are transformed into Ministers of Righteousness. And by this it is implied, that if the People should be beguiled by such Ministers, under such a false Appearance of Ministers of Righteousness they would then be beguiled as Eve was by Satan, under the false Appearance of a Messenger from God.

Thus you see what Authority I have for this Opinion, that as our first Parents were seduced by an evil Spirit, so he did it under the Appearance of an Angel of Light, and as a Messenger from God: And as he thus applied himself to the Woman, it is said, that when she saw, that is, was convinced that the Tree was good for Food, and since it was desirable to look unto, and a Tree to be desired to make one wise, she did eat.

These Things being thus, you may here see what a wonderful Agreement there is between this History, and our foregoing Reasonings.

The Effects of the first Sin, and the Methods of Providence necessary in the Case.

By knowing the Circumstances Mankind were brought into by the first Sin, we may find out the necessary Methods of Providence, that their Happiness might require, considering those Circumstances, and whether this History agrees accordingly.

The Origin of the Depravation of human Nature.

We have shewn that Mortality and the Depravation of human Nature must have been the Effect of some Sin of our first Parents, before they had Children; but whether it was the Effect of one, or more Transgressions, and whether this was inflicted as a Punishment, or produced by the natural Causality of Sin, is proper Matter of Inquiry.

'Tis evident, the History of Moses agrees with Reason, in ascribing the Certainty of Death to Sin; and as this is here represented as the first Effect of it, so it is said to be the Effect of the first Sin.

But though this gives us an Account how our first Parents came to die, yet it does not inform us how their Posterity became mortal, and so depraved, unless it were the natural Effect of the Fruit forbidden and therefore forbidden to be eaten, as being in its own Nature dangerous and destructive.

The Depravation of human Nature not included in the bare Denunciation of Death.

For if this Death threatened to our first Parents was only an arbitrary Punishment, and did not depend upon the Nature of the Fruit itself, the eating of it could only make them liable to the Execution of the Sentence, and could reach no further than the Sinners.

And therefore, though it gives us an Account how they became liable to Death, yet it leaves us in the Dark as to the Depravation of human Nature.

This Corruption we derive from our first Parents, and was the Effect of Sin.

But if the Death here threatened was a bare arbitrary Punishment, it is hard to conceive, how this Corruption of Nature could be the Effect of this Sin.

For the Punishment threatened is Death, and 'tis evident that a mere outward Sentence of Condemnation to Death, does by no means imply any inward Altera-

Alteration of the Nature of the Person condemned.

Much less can it imply, that the Flesh shall lust against the Spirit. And yet this, as I have said, we derive from our first Parents, and what they contracted by Sin ; and as this could not be included in the Denunciation of Death, so neither 2dly, Could it arise from their Sin of eating the forbidden Fruit, merely as Sin.

For if their Sin was only owing to a Mistake of their Understanding, here was nothing in the Nature of Man, or his Operations, amiss, thus far.

As the ruling Principle of the rational Nature approved and directed, so the Will inclined to chuse and act. And this was as it should be.

And from acting according to Nature can never arise any unnatural Tendency to Dissolution ; and when the Body is governed by the Understanding, this can never beget a Lusting of the Flesh against the Spirit.

And therefore this Corruption of human Nature could not proceed from the Sin of our first Parents, considered merely as Sin ; nor 3dly, Could it arise from any Frequency of Sin ;

For if our first Parents were capable of sinning only through Mistake ; and if the Obedience of the inferior Faculties to a mistaken Judgment cannot change the human Constitution, we cannot conceive any such Change should arise from any such Mistake, though ever so frequent.

But if it might, we have no Reason to suppose any such frequent Mistakes in our first Parents Case :

For all that they could be mistaken in, was, either such Things as their own Reason was not able to find out, or such as Revelation was to inform them of.

But as for those Things their Reason could not find out, they were necessary to be made known by Revelation, and how they should mistake in Things that they knew is not easy to apprehend. And 'tis what we could never have understood, had not this History resolved the Difficulty.

And though we see, how they were drawn into Mistake once, yet we must think they would be more cautious for the future, and we have no Reason to doubt but they were so.

And therefore since that Depravation of their Nature, which they derived to their Children, was the Effect of some Sin before they had any Children; and since they were not capable of sinning, but by mistake, and not easily capable of mistaking often; we may thence conclude, that as this Depravation of human Nature was the Effect of Sin; so it was by consequence of, the first Sin.

And if so, it will follow,

First, That it was either inflicted on our first Parent as a Punishment of that Sin, or else,

Secondly, That it was the natural Effect of eating that Fruit.

If we suppose it a Punishment, considering that a first Fault, especially if owing to Mistake, is usually looked upon as Matter of Mercy: And considering how long-suffering God appears now to be, one would think, that he would hardly inflict a severer Punishment, than he had threatened for a single Fact of this Nature.

For all that was threatened was Death, but if the moral Depravation of their Nature was inflicted too, this was a more severe Punishment than Death.

To punish Sin of any Kind with Death alone might be proper for the Support of God's Authority, and therefore might be thought convenient as a Warning to the succeeding World.

But to suppose, that a holy and good God, who does no otherwise incline to preserve Sinners, but as he desires their Happiness, and as a means of that, their Reformation; and who will not do this without

out some means to discourage the Innocent from imitating the Sinner :

I say, to suppose that such a Being would punish such a Sin as this was, with such a Corruption of Nature, as was in itself an unholy State, would seem to be an unholy Act.

And therefore one would rather chuse to account for this Corruption,

Secondly, By supposing it to have arisen from a natural Cause, that is, the Fruit itself might have been the Cause of it in a natural Way.

Now that it was so, as we have very good Reason to believe, from what we have observed; so if it does also appear from those Effects which were produced by the eating of it, in the Bodies of our first Parents, even according to this History itself, it will be a further Addition to its Credibility.

Now the first Effect that we are here informed of, is, that upon the eating of the Fruit, their Eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and sewed Fig Leaves together to make them Aprons.

Now by their Eyes being opened, must be understood the discovering something, which they had never seen. And by their knowing they were naked, must be meant, that they found themselves under a Necessity of being clothed.

They saw such uncomely Motions and Disorders in their Bodies, as they were ashamed of, and therefore thought it necessary to hide. And Adam is represented as making this Excuse for hiding himself from God.

And if so, we cannot be at a loss to account,

How the Depravation of human Nature might be produced by a natural Cause.

For these Effects which the Fruit produced in the Bodies of our first Parents, do shew a manifest Depravation of human Nature, both as to that moral and natural Perfection, which they were created in.

Till

'Till the eating of this Fruit all the Appetites of the Body were under the absolute Command of the Mind.

But as soon as ever they had eaten, 'tis plain the Body became immediately ungovernable, because we see its Motions were such, as Reason condemned, but yet such as they could not subdue, and therefore were forced to hide.

And then as to the natural Perfection of the Body. As soon as ever this Fruit was eaten, its natural Equability of Temper was broken, and new and disorderly Motions were excited; the Blood was visibly inflamed, and the animal Spirits not only disturbed, but probably augmented too, by the new Juices of this Fruit; which being incorporated with the Blood may be conceived to create, not only an unnatural, but also a corruptive Fermentation in the whole.

For the Health, Vigor, and Stability of the Body consists in a due Combination of its Parts. And therefore it being composed of several Parts, in various Motions, of diverse Natures, and discordant Qualities, while these continue in a due Mixture, a just Proportion, an equal Temperature, and regular Operation, as there is a natural Harmony, so there is a perfect Health and Vigor maintained. But when this natural Harmony is broke, the Constitution must unavoidably be injured.

Now that this was the Nature of this forbidden Fruit, that as it had excited strange Disorders in the Body, so it would likewise beget Corruptions and Death, is further probable from this very History.

For we are here told not only of this Tree of Knowledge, but likewise of a Tree of Life, which, after our first Parents had transgressed, they were excluded from.

And as they were not allowed to eat of the other, lest they should die; so on the contrary they are deprived of this, lest they should eat of it, and live.

Now

Now from hence, as we may argue on the one Hand, that this Tree of Life was of a fanative Virtue, which would naturally preserve Life :

So on the other Hand, we may as reasonably conclude, that the Tree of Knowledge was of a noxious Quality, which would naturally bring Corruption and Death.

For since they were denied the Use of this Tree of Life, lest they should eat of it and live. As it is thence evident, that the eating that Tree would have prevented their dying ; so it is equally evident that this Death was purely a natural Effect, in that it might be cured by a natural Cause.

Now from all this put together, it does sufficiently appear, how the human Nature came to be depraved, according to this History of Moses ; wherein it is set forth as the natural Effect of Sin, and that too the first Sin of our first Parents, and that Sin committed upon Mistake, and that too in a Matter of Revelation, and that too in respect of something, which they thought their Duty to do, as necessary to their Happiness in making them like God.

In all which we see a wonderful Credibility, as there is an evident and exact Agreement between this History, and our forgoing Reasonings.

Why God did not prevent the Depravation of human Nature, answered.

And though it may seem strange that God should permit such a fatal Event, as this, to come to pass ;

Yet if we remember, what has been proved, that God governs all Things according to their Natures, there is nothing in this Event but what may be very fairly accounted for.

For as Mankind are rational Creatures indued with Understanding, and Will, if they be governed according to their Natures, it must be in such a way as is suitable to these Faculties.

And

And by consequence, they must not only be provided with all the necessary Means of Knowledge of every Thing necessary to be known, and with sufficient Motives to chuse and do whatever is necessary to be chosen and done, but they must also be left to their own Freedom.

And therefore, when God had forbidden the eating of the forbidden Fruit, as being in its own Nature dangerous to be eaten; and had forewarned them of the Danger under the Notion of a Penalty, and that too expressed in such a manner as though he had engaged his own Veracity to see the Execution of it.

After they had been thus informed what was necessary for them to do; what could there be wanting in their Case to a rational Nature, but to leave them to chuse according to their Reason?

And if after this they do eat of this Fruit, what can Reason expect, but that as God likewise governs natural Things in a natural Way, the Fruit should be left as a natural Cause to produce its natural Effect, as this History tells us that it did? And therefore, what can we desire more consistent with the Natures and Reasons of Things, and by consequence more worthy to be received by reasonable Men, than this Account of Moses's, so far as we have considered it?

Thus we have a View of the Effects of the first Sin, and of the Origin of the Depravation of human Nature.

The necessary Methods of Providence upon the first Sin considered.

For the more exact Inquiry into these, it will be necessary to look back, and consider the Case of our first Parents; and

The first Thing we may observe in it, is, that, whereas they were, before they transgressed, in a State of Perfection and Immortality, they were now sure to die.

And as Death was contrary to their Nature, and that Happiness they were made for, so if we conceive the Goodness of God disposed to consult their Happiness in this Case, we must suppose some Method would be provided for their Preservation, so far as they were capable of it.

Now we have shewn already, that a Sinner in this Case might be capable of Preservation, so far as any suitable means could be found for the Prevention of a future Disobedience, and the Maintenance of the Honour and Authority of God.

What Methods are most proper for this End, God alone is Judge. But it seems not unsuitable to Reason, 1st, That God should let the Sinner feel some ill Effects of Sin; and 2^{dly}, That he should shew some token of his Displeasure at it, by inflicting some suitable Punishment for it, to affright the Offender from a further Disobedience, and discourage others from following his Example.

And therefore since our first Parents were subject to certain Death on the Day they eat of the forbidden Fruit, and might have been put to Death immediately; we have reason to think, if they were not put to Death, that there was some Provision of this kind made.

And as this is a Matter of Fact, and can be known only in History, if this History of Moses gives us any suitable Account of this, so far 'tis a credible History. But,

2^{dly}, Though our first Parents might be preserved from Death by the Goodness of God, yet here another Question will arise, how long that Preservation might be supposed to last? For that it could not be a total Preservation from Death, we have reason to think from the Natures of Things.

For though they were originally made of such a Constitution, that, while they continued innocent, they were capable of living for ever; yet if upon eating

ing the Fruit, their Nature was changed; then since God governs all Things according to their Natures, natural Things in a natural Way, by leaving natural Causes to produce their natural Effects, we may hence conclude, that God would not so far preserve our first Parents from Death, as to exempt them from dying.

Besides, according to this Account of Moses, God seems to have put them under a moral Necessity of it, by giving his Word, that it should be so.

And though it may be disputed in such Cases whether Lawgivers are obliged by such Expressions to a literal Execution of such Penalties; yet considering that the total Exemption from this Penalty might incline our first Parents or their Posterity to think God regardless of his Word, there seems to be a Necessity it should be executed.

But then as they could never be sure they should be put to Death, and by consequence could never be sure God would perform his Word, so long as they were preserved, unless they had some further Revelation concerning it; from hence we may infer the Necessity of a Revelation concerning their Death.

But then as the Reason of their being preserved at all, is, their Happiness, and as no Man can be happy under the Expectation of Death; so from hence it will follow, that as there was a Necessity in our first Parents Case, to assure them of a Certainty of Death, so there was likewise a Necessity of another Revelation to assure them of a Deliverance from it, and of their being restored to Life again.

And thus we have a View of several Revelations that seem necessary in the Nature of Things, upon the first Act of Sin, considering this first Effect of it, the Certainty of Death.

And if to this we add, how this Sin of our first Parents came about, viz. by the Instigation of the Devil; if it was, as 'tis probable it might be, attempted by him out of Envy at the Happiness of Man, and in Opposition to the Wisdom and Power of God: Here is a great deal more required in this Case: Here is not only the Honour of God, in respect of Man to be provided for, lest he should think God regardless of his Laws and his Word; but here is also something to be done in relation to the Devil, lest he should seem to be too hard for the Wisdom of God, as if he had defeated his Design.

And as from hence we may conclude, that if we have any true History of Providence in this Case, we must have some Account of this Kind; so it is a very material Character of the Credibility of this History of Moses that it agrees with all this.

For in this History of Moses we are no sooner told of our first Parents Sin, and the Death they were exposed to, but we are told of their Preservation; but lest this should encourage them to Sin, 1st, For the Prevention of their future Disobedience, we read, that they were left to bear the ill Effects of their past Transgression, and for that purpose, as they were now become mortal they were shut out from the Tree of Life.

2^{dly}, That God might convince them of the great Regard he had to the Observation of his Laws, we have next an Account of the most likely means possible, to give them a likely Apprehension of God's Displeasure: For,

1st, God is here not only represented as banishing them from Paradise, and cursing the Ground for their sakes; but as also denouncing a personal Judgment upon them. And

2^{dly}, Lest they might have some Hopes to be exempted from Death, he tells them, that as sure as they were made of Dust, so surely they should return to Dust.

3^{dly}, The more effectually to prevent their future Disobedience, it is very probable there was an Institution tution of Sacrifices at this very time, and the Skins of the Beasts to be offered to God were appointed for Clothing ; the immediate End of which Institution was to preserve a just Idea of their Sin and Danger in their Minds, because by this means, whenever they should put on or off, or even but look upon their Cloaths, they must be put in mind of the sad State they had brought themselves into, and by the dying Struggles of the Animals they slew, they must not only be taught what was meant by dying, but also by this means the Dread of it must be continually kept alive in their Thoughts, and they must naturally be afraid of sinning again, lest the Repetition of that which brought them under the Certainty of Death at first, should provoke God to a speedy Execution of it. And,

4thly, Because the Devil was the great Contriver of this Mischief to Mankind, here is likewise a Denunciation of Vengeance against him. [See Gen. iii. 14, 15.]

Which Denunciation though spoken as to a Serpent, I conceive to relate only to the Devil ; and when it is said, that he shall go upon his Belly, the Words seem to be intended to express a Condemnation of the Devil to an ignoble State.

And as for the other Expression, that of bruising the Serpent's Head, this must denote, when applied to the Devil, his Destruction. And as the Head is the Fountain of Policy, so when the Devil's Head is said to be bruised, it must naturally denote the Destruction of his Works.

And as the Heel of a Man is an inconsiderable Part, and a Wound in it is usually capable of an easy Cure ; so when it is said that the Devil shall wound the Heel of the Seed of the Woman, it must mean, that he shall only do him some inconsiderable Mischief.

This seems to be the natural Meaning of these Expressions, and they were probably spoken in Opposition to the several Aims the Devil might have had in engaging in this wicked Enterprize : As they might likewise be intended for the Comfort of our first Parents : So that,

1st, Whereas it had been threatened to our first Parents, that in the Day they should eat of the forbidden Fruit, they should die, it is not improbable, that the Devil might imagine, that upon the very first Act of Disobedience, they should be destroyed : And therefore as he thought to make an end of them at once ; so 'tis here promised in Opposition to this vain Imagination, that the Woman should live to have Seed, and so his Hopes should be defeated in this respect. And,

2^{dly}, Whereas he seduced the Woman into Sin and Misery under a Pretext of Friendship, in Opposition to this, a War is here declared against the Devil and his Seed, which should end in the Ruin of them and their Devices. And,

3^{dly}, Whereas the particular Policy of the Devil in this first Temptation, was to deprive them of that Happiness they were made for ; so in Opposition to this, since 'tis here said, that the Devil's Policy should be here defeated by the Seed of the Woman, here is implied a positive Promise, that through this Seed some Means should be provided, whereby Man should be reconciled to God, and being freed from that State of Imperfection, Death and Misery, they should be restored to a State of Holiness, Perfection, and everlasting Happiness.

If this be allowed to be the meaning of the Promise, what better Provision could there be in Reason for this great End of Providence, the Prevention of future Disobedience, and the Encouragement of Virtue and Holiness, than this ?

But if over and above all this, it shall appear, that this general Promise was not only explained to our first Parents ; but God entered into Covenant with them them for the Performance of it on his Part, upon the Condition of Faith and Obedience on theirs, and not only sealed this Covenant with them by Sacrifice, but appointed the Observation of such Sacrifices as a sacramental Sign and Seal of the Benefits they were to expect by this promised Redeemer, when he should come: If, I say, this shall appear, and that too from this very History, here was such a Provision made against Sin, as that there seems to be no room for future Guilt, so far as Reason could be wrought upon.

For as it must be the greatest Comfort to the dejected Sinners labouring under the Sense of what they lost, and the Fear of that Death they looked for, to be assured of being delivered from it into everlasting Happiness; so no stronger Motive or Encouragement could be given to persuade them to a holy Life, than to have it made the Condition of everlasting Life, and the Remembrance of this continually kept up by the frequent Returns of Sacrifice.

Now that there was some Explanation made of this great Promise of a Saviour, and of the Method of Redemption by him, we have very strong Reason to think, even from this very History, and that from several remarkable Instances. As,

A Covenant made with our first Parents of Faith and Obedience.

1st, In the very next Chapter after this Promise [Gen. iv.] we read of Sacrifices.

Now upon what probable Grounds could bare Reason have suggested, that a good God, would be pleased with that, which, unless he had appointed it for some wise Ends of his Providence, appears to be full of Horror and Cruelty; or, that he could be pleased with shedding the Blood of the most innocent and useful Creatures?

We have already shewed, that the killing of Beasts was not the Dictate of Reason, but must have arose from Revelation, unless Necessity can be supposed to have obliged Men to it for Food ; But this cannot be imagined in our first Parents Days: For we are immediately told after the Fall that they were clothed in the Skins of Beasts, and that God appointed them to be used in that manner. And since every Thing was made perfect in its Kind, we cannot suppose any Thing should die naturally so soon at least after the Creation ; so we must conclude that those Beasts were put to Death by the Order of God. And since we so early read of Sacrifices, 'tis natural to conceive, that the first killing of Beasts might have had its Original from that Institution, and that that Institution was ordained just after the Fall ;

I say 'tis natural to conceive this, from what we have taken notice of ; but it will be much more so if we consider the several wise Ends of Providence it might serve.

The Institution of Sacrifices explained, and the several Reasons of it.

As, 1st, Our first Parents had been threatened with Death, but what Notion could they have of dying? And therefore Sacrifices were intended to preserve in their Minds what was meant by Death, and what they must expect for their Transgression. But,

2^{dly}, As they were threatened with Death for their Disobedience, so they had the Promise of a Redeemer to deliver them from it ; and 'tis very reasonable to suppose this early Institution might have some Relation to this Promise. For if it shall appear hereafter that this Redemption from Death was to be effected by the Death of the promised Seed, and that this Death would be accepted by God, as an Atonement, through which they should be restored to the Favour of God, and rendered capable of everlasting Happiness, Happiness, it is more than probable, that Sacrifices might be appointed in remembrance of this Sacrifice of the promised Seed.

For since 'tis evident from the Scriptures, that God did not intend this promised Redeemer should come till many Ages after the Promise made; 'tis reasonable to imagine, that he would appoint some Means to keep up a Remembrance of him: And if this Method of Redemption was to be by his Death, there is nothing more natural than to suppose, that Sacrifices were ordained by God as a sacramental Sign and Representation which the World was to observe in the Faith and Expectation of the Death and Sacrifice of the promised Saviour to come, as Christians celebrate the Christian Sacrament in Remembrance of his Death and Sacrifice already past.

This is a very easy Account of this Institution. But this is not all;

We may further observe, that since this promised Saviour was not to come, till many Ages after, there was some Assurance to be given, that the Virtue of his future Death and Sacrifice should be as effectually convey'd to all Ages before his Coming, as to those who should live to see him come: For otherwise they might suspect whether they should have any Benefit by him.

Now to assure them of this might be another End of this Institution of Sacrifices; and as the Method of God's declaring his Acceptance of Sacrifices was by Fire from Heaven to consume them, so whenever they should find their Sacrifices thus accepted, it was to be looked upon as an Assurance of God's Favour, and of their Acceptance with him through the Death and Sacrifice of the Saviour to come.

And if so, this Institution was not only intended as a sacramental Sign, but also as a sacramental Seal, to assure the World of all the Benefits of the Sacrifice of the promised Redeemer till his coming. What can can be more rational than this? And if this be so, what can be more irrational than to imagine that God should appoint an Institution for such great Ends and not acquaint Mankind with the meaning of it, when the fulfilling the Ends, depended upon the Knowledge of them? All this therefore we may conclude might be revealed to our first Parents.

Secondly, Sacrifices also were used to seal and confirm Covenants, and if so, 'tis probable that God might enter into Covenant with our first Parents upon giving this Promise of a Saviour, and this Institution be used as a Seal of that Covenant.

We do not read of any such Covenant, but it seems to be implied where God is represented as saying to Noah, Behold I will establish my Covenant with thee: In which Expression the Words my Covenant, do naturally betoken some Covenant then known to be formerly made with some other, which should be renewed and confirmed with him.

And if so, when can we in reason imagine that Covenant to have been struck, or with whom so well as with our first Parents, upon the giving this Promise of a Saviour?

For what can be more reasonable than that when God promises a Favour to Sinners in Relation to their Happiness, he should do it upon such Conditions, as are necessary to be performed in order to their Happiness; and what time can be more seasonable to prescribe the Conditions than when he makes the Promise?

From hence we may conclude that when God made this Promise of a Redeemer to Mankind, he did it upon some Conditions to be performed by them; and that for the Performance of these Conditions, he entered into Covenant with them and sealed that Covenant by Sacrifice.

Of this we have a further Evidence from the Old Testament.

For

For in that very Place where we read of Sacrifices first, we find Abel's Offering was accepted, and Cain's rejected.

Cain being angry at this, God is represented as reasoning the Matter with him, If thou doest well, shalt not thou be accepted? says he; but if not, Sin lieth at thy Door. Which Words are an Appeal to himself, whether he did not know what would recommend him to God's Acceptance, and whether he had not been wanting in it.

In what he was in fault Moses does not tell us, but if the New Testament be of any Authority, it expressly says, that Cain's Sacrifice was not accepted for want of Faith, Heb. xi.

And since he is accused of Sin for want of Faith, as Sin is a Transgression of a Law, it is thence evident that Faith had been enjoined as a Condition of Acceptance with God.

And that it was so, we may see, Heb. xi. 7. where Noah is said to become Heir of the Righteousness, which is by Faith; that is, according to St. Paul's Phrase, of the Covenant of Righteousness by Faith, or that Covenant formerly made with our first Parents, the Condition of which was Righteousness, or the Obedience of Faith.

Why this of a Saviour was so darkly expressed by Moses might be; because it was a Thing universally known in his Time; and therefore it was enough for him to make mention of the general Promise only, the meaning of which, as they had kept to his Time, he had no reason to suspect they would forget; and that not only, as being of great Importance to remember, but especially when they had an Institution of Sacrifices on purpose to keep up the Remembrance of it.

If then there was such an Explication of this Promise, as seems to appear from these Observations, this must give credit to this History.

For we cannot imagine any Method of Providence more suitable to our first Parents Circumstances, and more proper to prevent their after Disobedience, and maintain the Honour and Authority of God as a Law-giver, than the Revelation of a Sinner so explained to them; and therefore as this History so far agrees with our Reason, we have so far reason to believe it true: And if so, many great Consequences will follow that will give us a further View into various Revelations afterward, that Mankind would stand in need of and which we might expect to find some Account of in any regular History of Providence.

The Necessity of various Revelations.

As, first, If it be true, as we have shewn, that upon the first Act of Sin, God made a Promise to our first Parents of a Saviour: As this was a promise of great Importance; so it was, by consequence of the highest Importance to them, that this Promise should be kept in Memory:

And as we cannot conceive that God would be wanting in any necessary Means of its Preservation, so it is reasonable to expect, in any authentic History of ancient Times, several Methods made use of for this purpose.

2dly, Since so much depended upon this Promise of a Saviour, and yet nothing here said when he should come; there seems to be a Necessity in the Nature of the Thing, that there should be, some time or other, some Information given of the determinate Time, as likewise some Marks of him, whereby he should be known. And,

3dly, Since 'tis said he should be the Seed of a Woman, 'tis natural to conceive, that some Time or other, some Means should be provided for the Examination of this Matter, and the certain Proof of his being so. And,

4thly, Since this Promise was of great Importance, 'tis

'tis natural to conceive that all Mankind, at all times after, would be eager for its Completion; and by this means, as they must meet with continual Disappointments, which would make them uneasy, there seems a Necessity of a frequent Confirmation of this Promise to support their Hopes; and the longer it was before his coming, so much the oftner ought this Confirmation to be made: And by Consequence we may conclude, that if there has been any Revelation of this kind, there have been many.

And if so, then a History of Providence must not only be a History of the Rise and Progress of Sin, and of proper Methods taken for the Prevention of it, but also of various Revelations and Prophecies relating to the promised Seed, if he was not to be born till long after.

And by Consequence, as we can have no regular History of Providence without some such Prophecies and Revelations: So it will be a particular Mark of the Credibility of the Scripture History, that it agrees in all these Respects: But this shall be proved hereafter.

The Method of divine Providence after the first Sin.

Having considered the Origin of Sin, and how Mankind became liable to Death, and how far our first Parents were capable of Preservation, after they had sinned, and the Necessity of various Revelations upon that Account, and the exact Provision that was made accordingly.

So let us now enquire, what Effect these Revelations had upon Mankind according to this History.

As the first and great End of God's Providence in his Dealings with Sinners, as such, is the Prevention of Sin, Sin being the only Thing that can prevent their Happiness, the Question is, whether these Revelations, vouchsafed to our first Parents, prevented all after Sin, or not? And if not, then we must must enquire, what Account this History gives us of them; what their Circumstances and Occasions were, from Time to Time, and what Methods of Providence they or their Children stood in need of, and whether it tells us of any suitable Provision made.

As for our first Parents, this History makes no mention of any after Transgression on their Part.

But as for their Children, we soon find it otherwise; one Brother murdering another, because the Offering of the one was better accepted than that of the other.

Why this should occasion such a Resentment, we are not told; but whatever the Reason of the Fact might be, it was of so heinous a Nature, that there seems a Necessity of some Method to be taken, suitable to the Nature of the Case.

Death had been already threatened to Sin, but Death does not seem so natural a Punishment, whilst the World was yet so very small; and yet some exemplary Punishment might justly be suspected, for the Prevention of future Transgressions of that kind, which were more particularly to be prevented then, whilst Men were so few.

And therefore as we may expect some Account of this nature, in a credible History of Providence relating to this particular Fact, so this History of Moses tells us, that Cain was not put to Death, but preserved to feel the natural Stings of his guilty Conscience. The Ground is cursed for his sake, and here his Family are banished from the Society of those, whom God intended to favour with his Presence.

This severe Punishment, 'tis probable, our first Parents understood as an Exclusion of him and his Posterity from any Pretence of having the promised Saviour descend from any of them.

This Notion so far prevailed in the Family of Seth, and they were so confident that this Promise was to be fulfilled in them, that they distinguished themselves elves by the Title of the Sons and Children of God, in Opposition to the Posterity of Cain, whom they reproachfully stiled, the Sons and Daughters of Men, Gen. iv.

And upon this Account the Family of Seth seems to have kept themselves a separate People.

When this Separation was enjoined is not said; but as Cain and his Family were banished, it does not seem consistent with that Punishment, to leave the rest of the World at Liberty to converse with them; and because their promiscuous Marriages with them was afterwards said to be one Reason of the Flood, it seems therefore to be implied, that this was one Part of their Disobedience, and by Consequence, that God had commanded a Separation.

And as they were at last universally blended together with that accursed Seed; and as this extraordinary Change of Things, begat a Necessity of some new Methods of Providence suitable to this Occasion, we may expect to hear of in a credible History, so we are here told of a new Revelation made to declare God's Intention to destroy them all.

Various Means of Reformation tried before the Deluge.

But before the World came to this Condition, we cannot conceive, but something had been done for the Prevention of this Wickedness. Moses indeed says nothing of it; but the New Testament tells us of various Methods taken of divers Prophets sent to preach Righteousness to them. [See 2 Pet. ii. 5. Jude 14.]

And with these, and perhaps many other external Means of Reformation, 'tis intimated to us, that God was not wanting in any inward Assurances of his holy Spirit.

But when all these Means were ineffectual, then 'tis said that God sent the Flood upon the whole World, sparing only Noah and his Family, and such a Number

a Number of Creatures of every Kind, as his Wisdom thought fit to be preserved.

This is the Account we have from Moses, and as this is a very rational Account, so 'tis obvious to every Understanding, that according to this State of Things, there were several new Revelations necessary, with which this History agrees.

Several new Revelations necessary at the Deluge.

As 1st, 'Tis evident if the World was to be destroyed by a Flood, and God had determined, that Noah should be saved, 'twas necessary he should be timely informed of it; and accordingly we are told of a Revelation given him, with Instructions to provide himself an Ark, and the Manner how to make it.

And, 2^{dly}, As the Time of going into, and coming out of this Ark depended on the Will of God, so it could not be known without his Revelation; and accordingly Noah is here said to have received Directions.

And, 3^{dly}, Since, when he came out of the Ark, 'tis natural to suppose, he might be discouraged from a necessary Industry, suspecting it would be all in vain; the History tells us that God assured him, that he would not any more drown the World.

4^{thly}, As Noah and his Family might be afraid, considering the quick Increase of other Creatures, lest they should be destroyed by them, we are told, that the Dread of them should be upon every living Creature, and that they themselves should multiply exceedingly.

5^{thly}, Because the Fruits of the Earth were now become useless, or perhaps were not now capable of affording a proper Sustenance; as there was a Necessity of some other Sustenance, so here we read of a Liberty given them to eat Flesh.

But then,

6^{thly}, As they were allowed to feed on Flesh, since they could not thence know, but they must eat it raw, which might naturally make them savage; and because the very killing of the Beasts for Food, might by degrees train them up to Cruelty, and so make them less averse to Murder, as 'tis natural to conceive there might be; so 'tis here said, there was a positive Prohibition of eating Blood, and Murder is forbidden under the Penalty of Death, and every one is commanded to avenge it. And,

Lastly, Because 'tis natural to conceive, Mankind would upon every rainy Weather be fearful of the like Devastation, 'tis reasonable to expect that God would satisfy them in this Particular.

And accordingly we are told of an Assurance given, that God would not destroy them in this Manner any more; and that he made the Appearance of the Rainbow in the Clouds, a standing Memorial of his Promise. And what a Goodness was this in God, that he should make this a standing Token of their Safety, which in the Nature of Things would ordinarily be presented to them at that Time, when they would have the greatest Apprehension of Danger.

The necessary Methods of Providence to the new World.

Being now come to the Beginning of the new World, we are next to inquire what might be necessary in their Case either for the Incouragement of Obedience, or the Prevention of Sin, or the Preservation of a due Faith in the promised Seed.

As for the Incouragement of Obedience, and the Prevention of Sin, nothing further could be necessary after so remarkable a Difference made between the Righteous and the Wicked; and therefore we read of no other Means at that Time:

But as to the Promise of a Saviour, we may expect to read of something more, to strengthen and support their Faith in this Promise; for the Belief of it was so far sunk even in the Family of Noah, that the Sin imputed by this History to Ham, [Gen. ix. 22.] is generally understood by the Jewish Rabbies, of something done in Derision of this Promise.

It is evident, there is nothing in the Thing itself, consider'd simply, but may be understood in a very good Sense; but since we see it so severely punish'd, it must have something worse in it, than we are now able to apprehend: But if it was done by way of Scoff at this Promise, it was then a Crime of a high Nature, and upon this Account, lest any one should be encouraged to follow his Example, 'tis worthy our Observation, that he and his Posterity are here set forth, as severely punished by God for it: I say, punished by God; because what is here said to be spoken by Noah, is to be understood as revealed to him by God; because he not only knew what had been done, when he was asleep, but the Curse he denounced upon it, was afterward literally fulfilled.

And whilst we consider Noah as a Prophet, from hence we may understand the Blessing of Shem for the Support of the Faith in the promised Seed. And how briefly soever it is here delivered in a History only of general Hints, yet 'tis reasonable to think it must have been understood by Noah, so 'tis very probable it was more fully explained by him.

To have their Hopes thus confirmed again to them, was a very great Motive to Obedience; but because, notwithstanding this, Mankind soon degenerated into Wickedness; to prevent the Progress of which, was probably the Reason of the next great event, viz. the Confusion of Languages; and in consequence of that, the Dispersion of Nations.

The Reason of the Confusion of Languages.

The Occasion of this Event was the Building of the Tower of Babel by Nimrod the Grandson of Ham, probably in Opposition to the Judgment denounced against that Family, that they should be subject to their Brethren.

For

For 'tis rational to conceive, that this Prediction would naturally prompt them to provide against it: And 'tis probable, they might begin this Tower not only for their own Defence, in Defiance of Heaven, in respect of the Curse denounced against them, but also as the Centre of Union to their Family, and the Seat of that universal Empire, which they might hope to make themselves Masters of.

And if so, then as there was a Necessity, if this Prediction of Noah was revealed by God, that he should interpose for their Defeat, for the Vindication of his Honour and Veracity; so there could be no Way more effectual to convince them, that their Defeat was effected by the Hand of God, than this strange Confusion of their Languages, which could be wrought only by a divine Power; and one would have thought it should have awaken'd them into a Sense of their Folly.

But when we further consider, that this Posterity of Ham were very wicked, and that their bad Example might infect the rest of Mankind; there seem'd a Necessity of the next great Event, the Dispersion of Nations. For,

1st, By this, here is a Separation made of the wicked Family of Ham from the rest of the World, that they should not be corrupted by them; and lest a local Separation should not serve the Turn, here is,

2^{dly}, A Confusion of Languages, which would naturally hinder all Intercourse, not only with the Families of Shem and Japhet, but even among themselves, excepting with such, as should speak the same Language. And,

3^{dly}, As they who spake the same Language, would naturally live together, so there must be as many distinct Societies as there were Languages; and the more Divisions there were, whatever Part was infected, the less would the Corruption spread, whilst there could be no easy Communion between them:

And,

D 2

4^{thly},

4^{thly}, As the several Societies would form themselves into distinct Governments, so these several Governments must naturally contribute more to the Restraint of Wickedness, than could possibly have been done, had the World continued under one great Empire.

And besides the very Jealousies and Emulations between Nation and Nation, and the Ambition of out-doing one another, must be a great Means to restrain Men from publick Vices, and a Spur to many noble Virtues.

Lastly, This Division of Nations was a wise Means of Providence for the more natural Punishment of Sin; for when any Nation should become wicked, here was no need of any immediate Correction from above; but by this Means one People might be made to punish another, without the Destruction of either: And when any People should become incurable, God could destroy them without hurting the rest.

So that upon the whole, we see nothing could better prevent Sin, and encourage Virtue, than this Confusion of Languages, and Dispersion of Nations was; and therefore there can be no room to doubt the Credibility of this History thus far.

What happen'd immediately upon this Dispersion this History is silent in: For it seems the main Design of Moses, to carry on the Succession of the Family of Schem, as the Branch from which the Messiah was to come; and therefore he takes little Notice of any Thing but what relates to them.

And we find that even they, as well as the Posterity of Ham, were about four hundred Years from the Flood, so far degenerated into Idolatry, [Joshua xxiv. 2.] that there was no way of maintaining true Religion in the World, without some new Method of Providence for this Purpose.

And since the Knowledge of the true God is absolutely necessary to the Happiness of Mankind, because cause their Happiness consists in being like God, and by Consequence the Attainment of it depends upon their forming right Notions of him; we have no Reason to doubt, but the Providence of God would display itself for the Recovery and Preservation of true Religion in the Knowledge and Worship of the true God, according as their Case required; and we may expect to find it so, in any credible History of Providence.

The calling of Abraham, and the Reason of it.

And therefore when true Religion was in Danger of being lost, God is represented as calling forth Abraham from his Country, that he might be the Father of a Nation he design'd to train up in the Knowledge of himself, and in the true Faith of that great Instrument, and Motive of true Religion, the Promise of a Saviour.

And as he was a Person well disposed towards God, this History seems to represent him as set up by God, not only as a Pattern, but as a Guide to succeeding Generations, Gen. xviii. 19.

This seems to be the Design of Providence in this Dispensation towards Abraham, according to this History; and as something of this Kind might reasonably be expected, this must be so far a credible History.

But here we must not suppose, that God intended not to prevent or reform the Idolatry and Ignorance of Nations, so long as the true Religion could be preserved among his chosen People; no, we may reasonably conclude, that there had been many Methods used for this Purpose before the calling of Abraham; as there likewise probably were many others afterwards, that we are told nothing of.

But as the calling of Abraham was the most effectual of all, and is the Foundation of the succeeding History, we have a more particular Account of this: And if so,

Let us, in the next Place, see what may reasonably be expected in History of this Person, and those that should descend from him, considering the End they were chosen for, supposing we had no Account of it; and if we find this History agree accordingly, it is so far a consistent and credible History.

The first thing to be expected in a credible History of this Man, is to find in him several great Instances of a remarkable and excellent Piety and Virtue.

And so he is set forth in this History, as a burning and shining Light, forsaking Father and Mother, Brethren, and Sisters, teaching his Posterity by his own Practice to count all things but Dross and Dung, in Comparison of the Excellency of the Knowledge of the true God and true Religion.

But what an amazing Instance of his Faith and Obedience was that of offering his Son? And how lively did he shew by this Example, the Possibility and Necessity of the strictest Obedience, even in the tenderest Acts of Self-denial, and of Trust and Resignation in the hardest Trials?

Now when we consider this Character of Abraham so agreeable to the Nature and Will of God, and so suitable to the Work he was chosen for, 'tis no wonder we read of great and eminent Favours, and uncommon Condescensions towards him.

The second Thing to be expected in an History of Abraham, is to read of great Motives and Encouragements to him, according as his Circumstances required; so we here find frequent Promises made him, and such Informations given him, as might be requisite to comfort him in his Undertaking, according as he had Occasion from time to time. As for instance;

No sooner had he left his Country, and arrived at the Land of Canaan, but we are told of a Promise of that Land to his Posterity; but afterwards, wards, when he saw no Probability of this for want of an Heir; as 'tis natural to conceive he might be, so this History tells us, that he was under some Uneasiness of Mind: He might have some doubtful Reasonings how his Seed was to inherit the Land of Canaan, when he was likely to have none.

Now when this was the Encouragement to leave his Kindred, and he saw no likelihood of fulfilling this, as there was a Necessity for some proper Assistance in this Case; so we read of a Revelation made to assure him, that he should have a Son, whose Posterity should possess that Land.

And that he might have no Doubt of this, God not only gave him a Sign to confirm this, by appointing him to provide a Sacrifice, which God shewed his Approbation of, by the passing of a Lamp of Fire between the divided Parts of it, but he also gives him a View of his whole Design, and shews him by what Steps he should become a Nation. [Gen. xv. 13, &c.]

So that here we see a suitable Provision made, sufficient to dispel the Fears of Abraham, and confirm his Faith.

But yet it is here to be observed, that though Abraham is assured he shall have Children that shall descend from his own Body, yet here is nothing said of the Time when: And as it was natural for him to think in this Case, that he should have these Children by his Wife, when he afterwards found she was past Children in the Course of Nature, this probably begat a new Doubt, whether he was to have them by her, or by another; and as this inclined Sarah to give him her Servant, (Gen. xvi. 2.) here was now a Necessity of a new Revelation to set them both right.

Accordingly we read of such a Revelation, wherein Abraham is assured of a Son by Sarah, which Son should be that blessed Seed, in whom all these Promises should center, and in whom all the Families of the Earth should be blessed: By which words must be meant that this Son should be the depositary of that Promise to our first Parents, relating to the Redeemer, who was to bruise the Serpent's Head: For as this was the greatest Blessing that God could bestow on sinful Men, and was such a Blessing as he intended for all Mankind, that would make themselves capable of it; so when 'tis here said, that in this Seed of Abraham by Sarah all Nations of the Earth should be blessed, this must naturally be supposed to relate to that great Blessing, expected from the promised Redeemer, and must therefore be understood, as a further Confirmation of that Promise.

And for the Remembrance and Assurance of all this, he renews his Covenant with Abraham, and his Seed, not only promising them the Land of Canaan, but also obliging them to be circumcised, and that not only as a Mark, by which they should be distinguished to be his, (Gen. xvii. 8, &c.) but also probably, as a standing Sign, that God would perform his Covenant with them.

These are the chief of those many Revelations that God was pleased to vouchsafe to Abraham; and as this is what we might reasonably expect to find in a History of so great a Man, chosen out by God for so great an End, this makes this Relation very credible.

Before I proceed to the third Thing required in a History of Abraham, it may not be amiss, because these several Revelations to Abraham are the Hinge of the succeeding History, to make some particular Remarks upon them, as being such as will give some Confirmation to them, and add a further Credibility to the Relation.

Remarks upon these several Revelations to Abraham.

1st, Then as God was not wanting to Abraham in suitable Encouragements according to his several Occasions, so the Land of Canaan was promised him after he was come away from his Country and Kindred dred, as the proper Motive to keep him separate from them.

But since this Promise was not to be fulfilled till after the Space of four hundred Years, one may naturally conclude from hence, that he understood something more to be meant by the Promise of the Land than barely the Land itself.

What this was we are not told, but it was probably explained by Abraham: And as he had been bred up in the Faith of the Saviour promised, and lived in the Hope of the Pardon of Sin, and everlasting Life implied in that Promise; so this land might be given as a Pledge to assure him of those Advantages he hoped for, not only to himself, but his Posterity, that would make themselves capable of them by treading in the Steps of Abraham. And if so, it was a powerful Consideration to attempt any Enterprize whatsoever.

2dly, As Abraham had the Promise not only of a numerous Issue, but that in his Seed all the Nations of the Earth should be blessed, 'tis worth our Notice here, how credible the Story is in this respect.

For as the Promise of a Saviour was of the highest Importance to Mankind, so 'tis natural to conceive it would be looked upon as a particular Privilege to any Family to have this Saviour descend from them: And upon this Account, as it was natural for all Mankind eagerly to desire Children, in hopes that this Saviour might be of his Posterity, so no Motive could so much work upon them, as to be assured of these Things.

And therefore when Abraham was first called to dwell in a strange Land, as he stood in need of the strongest Motives to support him under the Difficulties he was exposed to, so 'tis agreeable to see he is assisted by the most prevalent Consideration that could be offered him.

3dly, We have observed before, that God told Abraham, how his Posterity should become a Nation; that that they should be Strangers in a Land that was not theirs, where they should serve and be afflicted, and after four hundred Years God would judge the Land, and bring them out with great Substance. And there was a Necessity of some such Prediction.

For since God foresaw this People would, and his Wisdom intended they should be afflicted, it was necessary they should know this, and how long they should continue so: Because this was a most effectual Means to comfort them under their Sorrows, and keep them in a constant Dependence upon God: Because this Affliction having been foretold by him, was of itself a Proof of God's Promises to them; and though this was a grievous Burden, yet it brought its own Remedy along with it, in that it gave them assurance, that the whole Prediction should be fulfilled, and should one Day end in the Enjoyment of the Land of Canaan, and whatever else was meant by it.

And certainly Abraham taught them to understand more by it than the Land itself. For otherwise, what Motive could it be to them to bear such Afflictions upon the Prospect of a Country they could not live to enjoy. And therefore 'tis probable they were taught, that the Intention of this promised Land, was chiefly to assure them of a State of Happiness; and if so, whenever they should afterwards be possessed of that Land, it was the most engaging Motive possible to a future Resignation to God, and an entire Dependence on him; as it was also a Confirmation of their Hopes of the Happiness intended by that Land, as they were they sure of the Land itself.

We may further observe, that since they had the Promise of the Land of Canaan, it was likewise very suitable, that they should be sometime told how long they must expect the fulfilling of it.

For they might expect it sooner than was intended; and as by this means they would meet with many Disap-

Disappointments, so they might be tempted to lay aside their Hopes; and since they were to be afflicted, this might add to the Temptation.

But besides they might doubt of the Possibility of the Thing, whilst they saw the Land inhabited by others;

So that there seems a Necessity of a proper Revelation in this Case, to inform them how and when they should be possessed of it; and we must look upon this as a very credible Relation, that tells us of such a seasonable Prediction made, as accounts for all their Doubts and Difficulties.

4^{thly}, Another Thing to be observed in this Story, is, that God is set forth as entering into Covenant with Abraham, for the Performance of his Promises to him, and Circumcision is made the Sign and Seal of that Covenant.

Which strange Ceremony, as it would hardly have ever been thought of by Man, it would never have been submitted to, but upon a thorough Persuasion of its being appointed by God; and it was a very wise Appointment to keep them a separate People to himself, being such a Mark in the Flesh, as no other People would voluntarily conform to them in.

And if it shall hereafter appear, that as this promised Land in this Covenant did represent to them a future State of Happiness, so Circumcision did likewise represent that Purity, which is required of those who would make themselves capable of that Happiness; and as no uncircumcised Person should enter into Canaan, so no one should enter into everlasting Happiness, but they who crucified the Flesh with the Affections; then we see a greater Wisdom in the Appointment of this otherwise odd Ceremony.

Thus we see how Abraham was provided with proper Encouragements, and assisted with suitable Motives, as Reason might expect to find in a credible Account of him. Which was the second Thing required in a credible History of Abraham. The

The third Thing required in a History of Abraham.

Another thing to be expected in a History of Abraham, is, to be told how he became a Nation; and this we have set before us in a very rational and affecting manner in this History.

'Tis not easy to conceive, how the Seed of one Man should become a distinct Nation, whilst the World was inhabited, unless they were settled in some desolate Country; but since 'twas necessary for the Benefit of the World, that they should converse with other People; so 'tis very agreeable to see how this was brought about by their going into Ægypt, and that in such a Manner as is here represented'.

One cannot but admire God's Wisdom, that since they were to become a distinct Nation, and must necessarily have some Place to live together, 'till they should be fit to be removed into the promised Land, that Ægypt should be the Place provided for them; a Place particularly fitted to keep them separate, the Hebrews being such an Abomination to the Egyptians, in that they would not so much as eat with them.

How it fared with them here, we are particularly told; and as my Design is to shew the Credibility of the Story, I will examine every part of it, and shew the Wisdom of God in every Instance.

The Credibility of the Children of Israel, and of their Afflictions.

The first thing observable here, is, they were miserably afflicted, as was foretold. And as this Story gives a very natural Reason why they were so, so 'twas a great Instance of God's Wisdom, that they should be so, in order to the keeping them a separate People, and removing them to another Land.

For if they had not been afflicted, they could have had no Inclination to remove from thence.

The next Thing to be observed, is, how they came out, and this, the Story says, was by the Execution of strange Judgments on the Egyptians. This also was foretold to Abraham; and it gives a great Credibility to the Story, when we can discern a particular Wisdom, in suiting those Judgments to the Circumstances of God's chosen People, and the End they were chosen for.

As this People were infected with the Idolatry of Egypt, it was necessary they should be cured of it, before they went. And what could be more effectual to cure them of this, and convince them that the God of Israel was the only one God, than such Works, as even the Magicians confessed, none but he could do?

And accordingly we read, Ex. vi. 6. that God requires Moses to inform the Israelites, that he was the Lord, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; and as a Proof of this, that he would bring him out of Bondage.

Again, when we consider this People were bred up in mighty Notions of their Privileges, as the Seed of Abraham, and when they found themselves persecuted upon this Account, they might naturally expect that God would appear in their Behalf; and what could more effectually demonstrate this, than to see such Judgments on the Land of Egypt, whilst themselves were entirely free?

And when we consider, as it appears by this Story, that Moses was the Person sent by God to bring this People out of Egypt, a Person unqualified without the Assistance of an almighty Power; here is a particular Aptness in these Judgments, not only to convince the Israelites he was sent by God, and was able to effect what he proposed, that they might be willing to come away with him; but also to work upon the obstinate Egyptians, and oblige them to let them go. And accordingly these were the Ends of those Judgments. [See Exod. vi. 6, 7, 8.] And if we add to this that the Egyptians might be not only ripe for Vengeance upon Account of their Enormities, ties, but also wanted to be informed of the true God, what could be more proper for this End, than these Judgments? And accordingly we likewise read that this was one Intention of the divine Judgments on that People. (Sec Ch. vii. 17. viii. 22. ix. 14. vii. 3, 4, 5.)

And as they were intended for the Punishment of that Nation, it is probable, that every Punishment might have had some relation to some particular Sin. The Author of the Book of Wisdom has in several Instances endeavoured to shew this. Ch. xi. 15. xv. 18, 19. xvi. 1. xvii. 2, 3. xviii. 5. But tho' the Observations may not be just in all Respects, yet the Death of every First-born of the Egyptians, carries so lively a Remembrance, and has so natural a Relation to their Sin, in destroying every Male of the Israelites, that one must think it a Punishment for their Cruelty.

The next Thing observable in this Story is, the Success of these Judgments, and the Israelites coming away, with Jewels of Gold, and Silver, and Raiment.

This was likewise foretold Abraham, that they should come away with great Substance; and this is not only a credible Relation for this Reason, that the Egyptians were afraid of being destroyed, and so were glad to get rid of them at any Rate; but also as it is said to be so ordered by God. (Exod. xi. 2.) For considering what this People had suffered by the Egyptians, here is a natural Suitableness and Equity in this Appointment, and it may be considered, not only as a Kind of Recompence for their Sufferings in general, but as a particular Satisfaction for what they had by Right due to them for their Labours; for it is very probable, that as they had been oppressed with Labour, so they might have been in their Wages.

And therefore when they had Power to right themselves, themselves, they demanded of the Egyptians Jewels of Gold, &c. For the Word which we ill translate borrowed signifies demanded.

And it is very observable, that God is not only said to have given them Orders to make this Demand, but also to have given them Favour in the Sight of the Egyptians, that it might appear to be his Work, thereby to let them know that he was as just to them in recompensing their Losses, as he was to the Egyptians in avenging their Oppressions, on whom this might be likewise inflicted, as a further Punishment. So that the Israelites were only God's Instruments to take from that People, what they held only by the Bounty of his Providence, and had now forfeited by their Transgressions.

The next Thing observable in the Story of this People, is their going through and continuing in the Wilderness forty Years. One Reason of their taking that Way, we read Exod. xiii. 17.

But further, if we consider, that this People were chosen for the Preservation of the true Religion, and yet were very much addicted to Idolatry. If they had gone immediately into the Land of Canaan, they would have worshipped their Gods, and so defeated the Design of Providence. And therefore God led them through the Wilderness, where they could converse with no other People; and as they could not there be provided with Necessaries in a natural Way, so it was by Consequence a proper place to convince them he was the only true God, by the daily Instances of his Power and Goodness; and for this Reason he kept them in the Wilderness, till a new Generation had sprung up, that had never seen any other People, and knew no other God but him, whose Wonders they daily saw, and by whose Miracles they lived.

And when thus God had raised himself proper Inhabitants for the Land of Promise, he gave them Possession Possession of it. Thus we see how this People became a Nation.

The fourth Thing required in a History of Abraham and his Family relating to their Laws and Government.

This is what we find in our History in a very extraordinary Manner. Soon after this People came into the Wilderness, the first Care of Providence is employed in giving them a System of Laws to govern themselves by, in their moral, religious, and civil Capacity, which Laws as they came from God, so this People were immediately governed and protected by him.

And tho' God gave them all sufficient Evidence, that those Laws they received were given by him, yet it is worth our while in this Place to reflect, how he manifested his Wisdom in the Laws themselves, in adapting them to the Circumstances and Disposition of that People, and the End they were chosen for.

The Wisdom of God shewn in the Jewish Law.

As 1st, 'Tis evident they were a very stupid People, having been bred up in hard Labour under the Oppressions of Tyranny, which is apt to break Men's Spirits; and considering this, how graciously does God condescend to their weak Capacities, by reducing his moral Precepts to ten short Commands, and representing the most important Truths to them, under such Figures as they had been accustomed to, that he might instruct them the better in those Things, and imprint them more deeply on their Minds?

2^{dly}, If we consider them as a People prone to and corrupted with Idolatry, here was a wise Provision in this Case also, not only in employing them in a great Number of Observances, but also in appointing them such particular Ceremonies, as were directly contrary to the idolatrous Rites of the Heathen.

3^{dly},

3dly, If we consider them as a People separated from other Nations, here likewise we may observe a wise Provision made to keep them so, not only by continuing Circumcision, but also by forbidding them to conform to the Rites of other People, and in-joining them such a Distinction of Meats, and Sacrifices, as must keep them from all other People. [See Lev. xx. 24, 25.]

Lastly, If we consider the End of their Separation was, that they might be a holy, and peculiar People to the Lord. Lev. xx. 26. Exod. xix. 6.

It is worth our Observation to see how every Part of it is wisely fitted for this End.

I need not observe this in the moral Law, for every one sees how it tends in its own Nature to make Men like God; and happy in the Enjoyment of him. The same Design is likewise visible even in the judicial and ceremonial Part of it.

As for the judicial Precepts they are calculated for the Encouragement of Virtue, and the Prevention of Vice; and tho' some of their religious Ceremonies seem only to be so many arbitrary Forms, and tho' they might be proper for the low Estate of that People, as outside Forms of Pomp to affect their Minds, yet they have anciently been understood to have been appointed to instruct these ignorant People in moral Duties.

Thus for Instance, their Sacrifices of Expiation might be intended to put them in Mind of the sad Consequence of Sin: their Eucharistical Sacrifices were proper to keep up a Sense of their Dependence upon God; their Circumcision was not only a Sign of their Covenant with God, but also of their Necessity of parting with their Lusts; their legal Washings shewed them how pure a God they served, and how pure every Person ought to be, that would come into his Presence or hope for his Favour: And the Prohibition from Swine's Flesh might teach them to avoid the brutal Nature of that Creature, that as he wallows in the Mire, so they should not wallow in the Filth of Sin.

When they are forbid to eat Birds of Prey, it is to teach them to abstain from Rapine; and by Fish without Scales they were taught to avoid all earthly Mindedness, and mean Practices.

And that this was one Intention of the legal Ceremonies has been the current Sense of ancient Times; and the Scriptures themselves shew us, that they were esteemed fruitless, and unacceptable to God, unless they were accompanied with the Fruits of Righteousness, which looks as if this was the Intention of them. [See Isa. lxvi. 3. i. 13. lviii. 45. &c. Prov. xv. 8. xxviii. 9. Zach. vii. 5. Psal. li. 16, 17. xl. 8, 9. Jer. vii. 3, 4, 5, &c. xxi. 22, 23, &c. Hosea vi. 6. Micah vi. 6, 7, 8.]

And as this was the Design of the Law, so it had proper Motives to enforce it.

They were a People bred up in the Hopes of a Saviour, and in that Promise was implied everlasting Happiness. The same Thing I have shewn, was understood by the Promise of the Land of Canaan, viz. a future State of Rest and Comfort, of which that Land was a Pledge. So that when they were in Possession of that Land, they had thereby an Assurance of the future Enjoyment of what they hoped for.

This was some Part of their Encouragement; but as they were to continue separate from others for the Preservation of the true Religion, they stood also in Need of temporal Promises. For since the Heathens imputed all their worldly Successes to the Worship of their Idols, there was a Necessity, that God should shew himself as gracious to his Votaries, as the false Gods were supposed to be to theirs; and therefore it is a particular Instance of the Wisdom of this Law that it abounds with temporal Promises.

Thus

Thus we see the Wisdom of the Jewish Laws, and thereby the Credibility of this History of Moses, so far as it relates to them.

What may be naturally expected in a History of Abraham and his Family, relating to the Preservation and Propagation of the true Religion.

The next Thing we may expect to find in a History of this People is, that, since one great End God had to serve by them, was the Preservation of Religion, they were thoroughly instructed in the true Religion, and that this was also kept pure amongst them.

2^{dly}, That some Means were made Use of from Time to Time, to bring their Religion to the Knowledge of other Nations.

By true Religion we must understand two Things.

1. A right Knowledge of the true God, and how we are to behave ourselves to him, considering the Relation he bears to us, which is the Sum of natural Religion.

2. A true Faith in the promised Saviour, through whom God had promised eternal Happiness to all that would obey him faithfully; which is the Sum of Revealed Religion.

This is true Religion, and it is remarkably provided for in this History.

While the Israelites were in Egypt, one great End of God's Judgments upon that Nation, was to shew that he was the only true God.

And when they were in the Wilderness, God let them know, at the Delivery of the Law, that there was but one God, and that he was that one God; and for a Proof of which he appeals to his Works in bringing them out of Egypt. [See Exod. iv. 5. vii. 17. viii. 10, 22. ix. 14, 16, 17. x. 2.]

And as they are required to have no other Gods but him, so they are taught to resemble him by nothing that they saw.

That they should never use his holy Name without the utmost Reverence; and to preserve this holy Awe of him in their Minds, they were commanded to set apart one Day in seven to his Honour, and apply themselves therein in such holy Offices, as he himself appointed for that Purpose; so that, as they had sufficient Proofs of his being the Governor of the World, by his bringing them out of Egypt, they might not forget that he was the Creator of it too. This was all done upon their first coming into the Wilderness; and afterwards that they and their Children may be kept in a continual Sense of all this, God was pleased to keep this whole People for forty Years in a constant Dependence upon his miraculous Power for their necessary support of Life, and let them see some remarkable Punishments upon those who would not submit to his Authority.

And when he had led them into the Land of Canaan, he did it so, as to let them see, that he was the true God, and that the Heathen Gods were but the Works of Men's Hands.

And to keep up the Remembrance of all this, he appointed three Festivals to be observed every Year. The Passover in Memory of their Deliverance from the destroying Angel in Egypt; the Feast of Pentecost in Memory of their receiving the Law; the Feast of Tabernacles in Remembrance of their dwelling in Tents in the Wilderness.

And that they might not want living Witnesses of these Things, some Egyptians were permitted to come along with them; and afterwards, when they entered into the Land of Canaan, the Gibeonites were preserved among them, that their Posterity should be a standing Memorial, to testify how the Children of Israel got Possession of the Land.

But that these Things should not be forgot, Providence took Care that the History of these Things should be put into Writing, and required every Family mily to have a Copy of it, and to read it continually at Home; and also commanded it to be read every Sabbath Day in Public; and every seventh Year it was done in a more solemn Manner before the whole Congregation of that People, who during that Year, had nothing else to do but read it.

And as God took Care they should have Leisure; so it was their Concern to improve themselves in the Knowledge of this Book; for as there was no Action, which it had not some Rule for; so the Law made it Death to act contrary to them, out of Obstinacy or Presumption: Nay, even those Transgressions which were committed out of Ignorance, could not be forgiven without certain Sacrifices.

And when we consider all these together, no Method could establish the true Religion in their Minds so well as this; and that it might be kept pure, we read that they were forbidden so much as to enquire how the Canaanites served their Gods; and are threatened by Moses with dismal Judgments whenever they should conform to them. And the historical Books that were wrote after Moses gives us many strange Instances of the fulfilling these Threatnings. But notwithstanding all, they frequently fell off from their Duty. And as their Circumstances then called for new Dispensations, so God sent his Prophets to declare his Will to them.

What the particular Occasion of every Prophecy was, we are not told expressly; but as the Israelites were very prone to Idolatry, God had Regard in all his Dispensations to convince them, that he was the Lord their God: and therefore, when he decreed to punish them for their Sins, he gave them Notice of it by his Prophets, as he did, on the other Hand, of their Deliverances from Afflictions, or other Mercies he intended them.

Something relating either to Favour or Punishment is the Subject of every Prophecy, and this might be proper to keep up a Sense of the true God amongst them. But it was more particularly necessary in Case of Punishment, and especially when the Punishment intended was Captivity.

For had they been given up into their Enemies Hands without being first told the Reason of it, they might have suspected that they might have been subdued by the Gods of their Enemies: That their own God was not able to protect them, and so might have been tempted to fall away. And therefore to prevent this, God all along forewarned them of their Punishment, and foretold the particular Reason of it. And that he might thoroughly convince them of it, he always adds, that whenever they should forsake their Sins, they should see a further Proof of his Power in the Removal of their Punishment. And as it is very remarkable in this History to find, how the Vengeance threatned, and the Mercy promised, never failed to come to pass; so what can we imagine more effectual to affect their Minds with a Sense of their Duty, than this?

By these Things we see what Care was taken by the all-wise Providence of God for the Preservation of true Religion among this People, as it relates to the Knowledge and Service of the true God.

What Means were made Use of for the Preservation of the Faith of the promised Saviour.

As for the other Part of true Religion, the Belief of a Saviour, one can hardly imagine they could want any Information in this Respect, the Hopes of this being the great Encouragement that supported Abraham.

Of Types.

But however, they could not be better instructed in it, than was provided by the Law, if the ceremonial Part of their Religion was, as the Jews assert it was, an emblematic Representation, of the Dispensation of the Messiah, and the Qualifications necessary necessary to such, as would be Partakers of the Benefits of it. And if it was so, a little Hint would enable them to find it out, and when once discovered, those Types would not only convey a more lively Idea to their Minds of the Things represented by them, but would more effectually preserve them in their Memory.

But how probable soever this may seem, 'tis hard to know certainly whether it was so, and we can never have such Evidence of it, as to build any Argument upon it. But thus much is certain, that there is a great Resemblance between some of these Ceremonies and some Parts of the Christian Dispensation, which we call the Dispensation of the Messiah.

But be this as it will, there were not wanting other Means to preserve the Idea of the promised Saviour in the Minds of the People.

They had been bred from Abraham, not only in the general Promise, but in a great Desire and Expectations of the Blessings they were to reap from it.

'Twas upon this Account that they valued themselves upon their being the Seed of Abraham, and 'tis natural to imagine, that every Parent would inform his Children of the Privileges they were entitled to.

But notwithstanding this general Notion of a Saviour, they had not yet had any Information of the Character of the Person, any further than of his being the Seed of Abraham; nor did they know any Thing of the Manner how this great Blessedness they expected from him was to be conveyed to Mankind: And as 'twas necessary to be made known to them one time or other, so we read how from a particular Occasion given, God here vouchsafes them a Revelation of that Matter, viz. That whereas they were so terrified at his speaking to them, as to desire he would not speak to them in that Manner any more, he promises, that he would speak unto them by a Prophet, like unto Moses, one from among their Brethren, whom, if they refused to bear, he would require it at their Hands. [See Deut. xviii. 18, 19.]

The literal Meaning of this Passage is plain : Here is evidently a single Person spoken of, who was to be sent to this People : And as he was to be a Prophet like unto Moses, 'tis natural to conclude, that he should bear the same Characters. And if it be reasonable to infer, that he was to be a Deliverer, as Moses was, this is the very Idea we have shewn to be understood, by bruising the Serpent's Head. And if the Redemption intended by bruising the Serpent's Head, can be reasonably thought to be that Blessing, which God designed to be convey'd to all Mankind thro' the Seed of Abraham, it is naturally implied, that this Prophet, who was to come, should be the Person.

And if by being a Prophet like unto Moses, it is reasonable to infer, that he should be a Law-giver, and a Mediator of a new Covenant, and indued with a like Power of Miracles with him, this intimates, that this Salvation was to be effected by giving them a new Law, and a new Covenant, confirmed by Miracles, as the Mosaic Covenant had been.

And whereas I have shewn, that by bruising the Serpent's Head was meant, the recovering the World from the Wrath of God, and restoring them to Holiness, Happiness, and Immortality ; it is here implied in these Words, if this Prophet was to be that Seed of the Woman, that this Covenant of Salvation, which he was to open to Mankind, was to be a Covenant of Reconciliation, and the Laws he was to give were to be Laws of Holiness, under the Promise of a Resurrection to everlasting Happiness.

And whereas the coming of the Seed of the Woman to bruise the Serpent's Head, was a Blessing to Mankind, if this was to be effected by the Means of a Covenant of Reconciliation, and Laws of Holiness, it is hereby implied, that this Covenant and these Laws,

Laws, which this Prophet was to deliver, should be such as should be calculated for all the World.

And as the Reason of this Promise to the People at that Time was in answer to their own Request, that they might not be terrified by the Voice of God, so it is thereby naturally implied, that this Law and Covenant should not be attended with those Circumstances of Terror, that the Law of Moses had been.

And Lastly, whereas it is said, that if they did not bear this Prophet, God would require it at their Hands, that is, severely punish them; by this it seems to be naturally implied, that this Law and Covenant delivered by this Prophet, should be the last that he would vouchsafe to them.

And if so, as this was a wise Provision at that Time to prepare the Minds of this People beforehand by this general Hint, for that Change which should be wrought by this Prophet, when he should come; that however highly favour'd Moses was by God, and what Regard soever they had for him, they must remember, that there was a Prophet to come after him, who should be prefer'd before him, from whom they must expect another Set of Laws, and a better Covenant: So it shewed them, what Ideas they were to carry along with them of this Saviour to come, and the Redemption to be wrought by him, viz. that it was a spiritual Redemption, as it was to be effected in a Prophetic Way, by a Law, and Covenant of Holiness, on Obedience to which their Redemption would so intirely depend, that without it, they would have no Benefit by him, but be expos'd to the greater Condemnation.

Corollary.

And if this Interpretation of this Promise of a future Prophet be allowed, this teaches us what we may naturally expect to find in a further History of this People.

For, as here is a Revelation of several Things, which which were to be fulfilled in this great Prophet; and as these Things were imperfectly hinted at in general Words; so we may from hence conclude, that some Provision would be made in after-times, for the Preservation of these Ideas among them; and that some time or other they would be more fully explained.

And as this requires Prophecy, so we may not only expect to read of Prophecy in a regular History of this People, but also of such Prophecy as particularly related to these Things.

And as it will be a great Addition of Credibility to this Scripture History, if we find it agreeing in this Instance; so it will likewise be a strong Confirmation of the Sense we have taken this Promise in.

But to pass this by here; I will take Notice of another Thing necessary to be provided for.

The Law about Virginity accounted for.

As by the Seed of the Woman was intended, that this Saviour should be the Seed of a Woman only, and that Woman a Virgin, there was a Necessity that this might be certainly known.

And if any Method was provided for this Purpose, it ought to be of a public Nature, because of public Concern: And if so, then as a Thing of this public Nature must be naturally prescribed as a standing Rule, and therefore have the Authority of a Law, which every body should be obliged to submit to; so 'tis natural to expect this Method should be prescribed, when they received their Laws.

Now, that this was the Design of that Promise, will appear hereafter: And tho' it does not appear that Moses knew this, yet we see a wonderful Provision made for this Purpose, not only in the Laws relating to Virginity, but also in the Appointment of the Waters of Jealousy, by which it was provided, in case of Doubt, that their Innocence might be tried by a standing Miracle; so that whenever the promised Saviour should be born, this Character of him might be evidently proved.

The

The Reason of the Law about Genealogies.

As we have observed, there was a Necessity some time or other, of some Means to be provided for the Distinction of Families, that the Pedigree of the promised Saviour might be certainly provided: So we may here observe a wonderful Provision made for this Purpose in the Law of Moses; which obliged every Family to keep their Genealogies in the most exact Manner.

And thus we see what Care was taken thus far, for the Preservation of the true Religion amongst this People, as it consists in the Knowledge of the one true God, and Faith in the promised Saviour.

Various Revelations necessary after Moses's Time.

What these were we have already in a great Measure discover'd, and it will be a remarkable Instance of the Consistence and Credibility of these Writings, if the Revelations hereafter delivered in them be such, as we have before shewn, might one time be expected, as necessary in the Nature of Things.

The first Thing necessary to be known, was the Time of the promised Saviour's coming, and the Characters he should be known by: And as this was necessary to be made known to the World; so we read of several Prophecies relating to it. The first of these is in Gen. xlix. 10. The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his Feet until Shiloh come, and to him shall the gathering of the People be. That is, that the Government to be erected in the Tribe of Judah, shall continue, till Shiloh, (which signifies, he who is sent, or the Expectation of all Nations) shall come; and that at his coming, this Government of Judah shall be dissolved, and the People, or Gentiles, shall come in to him.

So that according to this Prophecy, the Time of the promised Saviour's coming should be before the Destruction of the Jewish Commonwealth.

A second Prophecy of the Time of the promised Saviour's coming.

Another Prophecy we read in Haggai ii. 7, 8, 9. That he should come while the second Temple was standing, which he should adorn and glorify by his Presence, and that he should come when all Nations should be in a great Expectation of him.

A third Prophecy of the Time of the promised Saviour's coming.

We have another Prophecy relating to this Matter in Malachi iii. 1.

In which Prophecy there is a Person spoken of under the Character of the Lord whom the Children of Israel sought or desired, a Person who was to be their Delight, one, who was to be the Messenger of the Covenant; and that he was to come during the second Temple, but not till a Messenger should have prepared his way.

A fourth Prophecy of the Time of the Saviour's coming.

We have another Prophecy of this, Dan. ix. 24, 25, 26, 27. In which Prophecy there is a Period fixed of seventy Weeks, which, according to the Language of the Jews, is to be understood of Weeks of Years (Levit. xxv. 8.) that is 490 Years. And that after seven Weeks, and sixty-two Weeks, the Messiah (the known Character of the promised Saviour) shall come and be cut off; and in the following Verses it is plain that it was to be before the Destruction of Jerusalem.

These are all plain Predictions of the Time when the expected Saviour was to come: But as all this would signify but little, unless he could certainly be distinguished at his coming from Impostors; and as this required Prophecy, so this History gives us from Time to Time, a Series of Prophecies relating to this Matter.

The Characters by which the Saviour was to be known.

The first of these is, that he was to be a Prophet like like unto Moses, and as such, not only as a Saviour, or Deliverer, but also a Law-giver, and a Mediator of a new Covenant: That his Salvation was to be a spiritual Salvation by the Means of a Covenant of Reconciliation, and Laws of Holiness, which he should receive from the Mouth of God, and confirm by his Power, and all this intended for all the World.

As this was imperfectly hinted at in the general Promise of Moses; so we find it afterwards confirmed and explained by the succeeding Prophets. (See Isaiab xi. 1, 2, 3. xlii. 1.---7. lx. 1, 2, &c. Jerem. xxxi. 31, 32, 33, to 36. Isaiab lxi. 8, 9. ii. 2, 3. Micah iv. 1, 2, 3. Zephaniab ii. 11. iii. 9, 10. Zachariab ii. 10, 11, 16. viii. 20, 21, 22. Malachi i. 10, 11. Isa. xi. 20. xlii. 1, 2, 3. Malachi iii. 1.)

The promised Saviour to be a King.

Another Character of the promised Saviour was, that he was to be a King sitting upon the Throne of David.

This is an Idea of him that runs thro' the whole Scripture. (See 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c. Isa. lv. 3. Hosea iii. 5. Jerem. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24. Jeremiab xxiii. 5. Zach. ix. 9. Isa. xi. 1, 3, 4, 5. Jerem. xxxiii. 14, 15. Dan. ii. 44, 45.)

The promised Saviour to be a Priest.

This is another Character by which the promised Saviour was to be known. (See Zech. vi. 13. Psalms i. 10. Dan. ix. 24, 26. Isaiab liii. These Passages are plain Marks of his Priestly Function, and what Sacrifice he was to offer.

But as the promised Saviour was not to be of the Order of Aaron but Melchizedek, and therefore was not to be subject to the Rules of the legal Institution, relating to the Priesthood; (Levit. xxi. 7, 13, 14.) and as he was not to produce any Qualifications relating to his Father, and Mother, or Genealogy, nor was confined to any time for the Beginning or Ending of his Ministration, as the Jewish Priests were; so his his Priesthood was to continue as long as he lived, called in Scripture for ever.

Thus we see the several Offices of the promised Saviour described.

And as all these Things that are said of him must be conceived, as being spoken by the Inspiration of God, to consist with the general Design of his coming, which was to bruise the Serpent's Head, and to be a Blessing to all Nations; so we must conclude that what was before said of his Prophetic, must be equally true of his Kingly and Priestly Offices, that they were originally appointed, and must be ordered so, as best to answer these Intentions.

And therefore, that his Kingdom should be such, as, in its Extent, to include all Nations, and so order'd, in its Nature, as to destroy the Works of the Devil, and by consequence must be not only an universal, but a spiritual Kingdom.

And likewise that the Reconciliation he was to make, as a Priest, should be such, as should not only be sufficient for, but actually extend to all Mankind.

This is a natural Inference, and an Argument of the Credibility of the Scripture History, that we find it consistent both with Reason and itself. For we find all this taught by the Prophets. (See Isaiab lii. 10. Psalms. lxxii. 8. Dan. vii. 27. ix. 24. Psalms. lxxiii. 17.)

And we read throughout the Prophets, that the Time of the Messiah is all along represented, as a Time of universal Love, and Peace, and Godliness: Isa. xi. Ezek. xi. 19, 20.

These are some of the many Promises that relate to the promised Saviour in the Scripture:

But besides these, there were several other Intimations given of him, relating to the Place of his Birth, Micb. v. 2. Of his Life, Isa. liii. Of his Death and Resurrection, Psalms. xvi. 10, 11. Of his Ascension into Heaven, Psalms. cx. 12. Of his sending fending down various Gifts on the Gentiles, and after that a terrible Day shall come, Joel ii. 28, 29, to 32.

And now when all Things were thus laid open, that were necessary for them and future Ages to know, relating to the Nature of the Redemption promised, the Person by whom, and the Manner how it was to be effected, and no further Revelation was wanting in these Respects :

And when the Jews were throughly purged from their Proneness to Idolatry, which so often called for Revelation, and therefore there was no longer need of it; then God withdrew the Spirit of Prophecy, from them, the End and Reason of it being ceased.

But between the last Prophet, and the coming of the Messiah, God provided them with proper Supports, that their Hopes might not droop. For he had already foretold them of great Changes, which they should see in the great Empires of the World.

And as these were to happen at distant Periods; so when they should afterwards live to see any Part of the Prediction fulfilled, the evident Accomplishment of it in that Instance would be a certain Earnest of the rest :

And as every new Change, which appeared to be foretold, would be a new Assurance given to their Faith; so from these they might be as sure of the coming of the Messiah, as they were, that they saw these Empires overturned.

And as these Things were sufficient to keep their Hopes alive, and therefore no further Revelation could be necessary for this; so this might be the Reason why there were no further Revelations made to them.

Thus I have led you thro' the Scripture History, and shewn you what Methods were taken throughout, for the Preservation of the true Religion in the World.

We are now to consider this People in another View,

View, as not only set up for the Preservation of true Religion among themselves, but as a Canal, whereby it was to be conveyed to others, that all Nations might be brought to the Knowledge of the Truth.

And as there was a Necessity of some Methods of Providence, in order to bring about this End; so it will be a great Addition to the Credibility of Scripture History, to find it agree in this respect.

Whether it does this, is our next Enquiry: But before I proceed to this, there is one Thing to be settled, viz. how we know we rightly understand the Prophecies and Revelations in Scripture, when we apply them to an expected Messiah, and that they were really Prophecies relating to that Person, and delivered with that View, and have not been fulfilled in any other.

The Scripture Prophecies to be rightly understood by us, proved.

First, That the Sense, we take the Prophecies in, is most likely to be the true Sense of them, as being allowed by the Jews before Christ's Time. For as this Book was writ in their Language, they may reasonably be supposed to understand their own Phraseology best.

And as their Ancestors were the People to whom the Prophecies were spoken, 'tis reasonable to think they were let into the Knowledge of them in some Degree, where they could not otherwise be understood:

For whatever distant Aspect these Prophecies relating to a Saviour had to future Times, 'tis certain that each of them had a particular Relation to those Persons or People, to whom they were severally spoken, and were intended for some particular End at that Time, which those Persons or People were then immediately concerned in:

By which I do not mean, that they were all spoken in a double Sense; but only that they were intended to supply some Necessity, that called for such Re-

Revelation at that Time, when they were delivered. And if so there was a Necessity of their being understood in some measure, or else the present End could not have been attained.

And if there was a Necessity of their being understood, either they must have been delivered in such a way of Speaking, as the People were capable of understanding themselves, or else they must have been explained to them by the Prophets, so far as that Explanation was necessary.

That they might be ordinarily capable of understanding them of themselves, is very reasonable to think however difficult they appear to us.

And accordingly we find in the New Testament, that the People were well versed in the prophetic Writings in our Saviour's Days; He appeals to those Writings for a Testimony to himself: He bids them search the Scriptures, manifestly implying that the Prophecies relating to the Messiah were such as they did or might understand.

'Tis true indeed, some Prophecies were dark and intricate for a time in some Particulars, and 'twas necessary it should be so: For otherwise they would not have been fulfilled, as depending on the Actions of free Agents.

But what was necessary to be known, was necessary to be explained, if it could not be known without it.

And if they had any such Explication given them, 'tis natural to conceive that those Ideas would be handed down from Age to Age.

And though some Things might be mistaken, and some Traditions corrupted, yet we cannot suppose but they would be right in fundamental Articles.

And therefore when we find the Tradition of a Saviour universally received amongst them, and that built upon the Authority of Scripture Prophecies, and those very Texts, we make use of, applied to him, we have no Reason to doubt but this was the true Sense of them, though we at this Time should not be able to make the Thing out so clearly as we could wish, and as cavilling Men may expect.

But this is not our Case, nor do we depend upon them alone, for we have sufficient Reason for our Interpretation of most of the Texts I have here made use of, had we never known what the Jews had thought of them. For,

Prophecies of the Messias understood in their natural Meaning.

Secondly, The Sense we take them in is such, as the plain Meaning of the Words themselves, or other like Expressions of Scripture direct us to, considered and compared together.

To make this appear plain, let us begin at the first Promise to our first Parents, that the Seed of the Woman should bruise the Serpent's Head; 'tis plain here is a Person foretold to come, and from the Occasion of the Words, I have given you a natural Interpretation of them, viz. that whereas the Devil had brought them into a State of Sin, and Misery, and Death, this Person should defeat the Cunning, and destroy the Works of the Devil, by procuring Pardon for them and restoring them to a State of Holiness, Happiness, and Immortality:

And as this was the greatest Blessing that God could bestow upon them and their Posterity, and by consequence the Person who was to do this, was to be an universal Blessing to all Nations: So 'tis reasonable to think that this might be the general Character under which he might be expected, and ordinarily spoken of: However when we afterwards read of a Person promised to come, in whom all Nations should be blessed; 'tis very natural to understand this of the Person spoken of before.

And as a great Desire would be excited in all the World for the coming of this Person: And as he was to be born of the Seed of Jacob, and would therefore be more particularly desired and looked for by the Children of Israel; so 'tis natural to conceive that he might be commonly spoken of, as he, who was to come, the Desire of all Nations, the Expectation of the People; or, the Delight of the Children of Israel. However, when we read of Shiloh coming, which signifies, he who is to be sent, and that the gathering of the People or Gentiles should be to him: And in another Place of one who is, by way of Emphasis, called the Desire of all Nations, the Delight of the Children of Israel, is it not natural to understand this of that Person, in whom all Nations were to be blessed? Mal. iii. 1.

But be this as it will; nothing can be plainer than what we read afterwards of a Promise, of a Prophet like unto Moses.

And as these Words denote a single Person, so they may naturally imply, that he should bring a new Covenant and new Laws as Moses did. And if so, then as no one could be this Prophet, who did not come to them with the Offer of a new Covenant and new Laws; so if we read of a Person who is represented as to come under this very Character, is it not reasonable to think that he is the Man?

And if it be reasonable that this new Covenant and Laws should be offered to all the World, then, when we read in Isaiab xi. of a time when there should come forth a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse: And when 'tis said of him, Ver. 10. that he should stand for an Ensign of the People, &c. And when we afterwards read of a Person, on whom God would put his Spirit, &c. See Isaiab iv. 1. 3. 5, 6.

And when this Person is called the Servant and Elect of God, are not these Tokens that these Places refer to the same Person? For are not the Characters the same?

And when we afterwards read [Jeremiab xxxi. 31.] of a new Covenant, that was still to be expected:

And when we afterwards read (Malachi iii. 1.) of a Person called by way of Excellence, the Messenger of the Covenant, is not this reasonable to conclude that this was the Covenant promised by Isaiab lxi. 9. and Jeremiab xxxi. 31, 32, 33?

And as 'tis natural to conceive that these Promises so often repeated would excite a strange Desire of the fulfilling of them, and particularly in the Children of Israel; so when we see this Messenger of the Covenant is called the Desire of all Nations, the Delight of the Children of Israel, these are plain Tokens that this Messenger and this Covenant were the same that those Promises related to.

And so again further; if this Messenger of the Covenant, and the Branch of the Root of Jesse in Isaiab xi. be the same Person, as appears, when we read in another Place of a Person who was to come, called the Branch, the righteous Branch, the Saviour; and when 'tis said of this Branch, that he shall reign as King and prosper: and when this King, the Branch, is also spoken of as a Priest upon his Throne, and that even after David and Solomon were dead; is it not reasonable to think, that the Person meant is the same in both Places?

And when we read (Dan. ix. 26.) of a Prince expressly called the Messiah:

And when we read in Isaiab liii. of the Servant the Elect of God, &c. is it not reasonable to understand the Messiah in Daniel, to be the same Person with the Elect, the righteous Servant in Isaiab, and the same Thing to be aimed at in both?

And if so, then if our Interpretation of the first Promise that the Seed of the Woman should bruise the Serpent's Head be true, viz. that the Person meant was to procure Pardon and Reconciliation for Mankind, and to restore them to Holiness and Immortality, when we read of the Messiah in Daniel, as a Person who should make Reconciliation for Iniquity, make an end of Sin, and bring in everlasting Righteousness, is it not natural to conclude, that this Messiah is that Seed of the Woman?

Nothing can be more reasonable than this Interpretation from a Parity of Ideas in different Places. And if these Texts be rightly understood, this teaches us how to interpret a Thousand other Places.

Thus for instance, since we see here was a new Covenant promised, which seems to imply an Abolition of the old one; when we afterwards read of Sacrifices spoken of, as of no Esteem with God, even while the Law was in force; 'tis reasonable to understand such Expressions as relating to the Time of the new Covenant, when these Things were to be done away.

And whereas this Covenant was to include all Nations, wherever we find any such Expressions, as relate to an Union of all People in the Worship of the true God, 'tis no force upon those Texts to understand them of that Time when this Covenant shall be delivered to them, and of that Person who is to be the Messenger of it.

And so we may interpret a vast multitude of Texts. And thus the Prophecies were understood by the ancient Jews.

But, thirdly, we have still further Reason to understand them in our Sense, as this has been confirmed by Christ and his Apostles, who gave sufficient Proof of their being sent from God. And they have not only confirmed us in this general Notion, that there had been a Promise given of a Saviour to come, but that many Prophecies of the Old Testament were spoken of him.

Thus, the Promise to Abraham that in Isaac should his Seed be called, is directly applied by St. Paul to the Messiah, Gal. iii. 16. As likewise that afterwards to Moses of a Prophet to be raised up like unto him, is understood in the same Sense by St. Peter. Acts iii. 22, 23, &c.

The cxth Pfalm, where David speaks of his Son, as his Lord, is applied by our Saviour and St. Paul to the Messiah; and by the former is said to be spoken in Spirit, that is, by a Prophetic Inspiration. Heb. vii. 17. Mat. xxii. 43.

And when he speaks (Pfal. xvi.) that his Soul should not be left in Hell, he is expressly said to have spoken this by prophetic Foresight of the Resurrection of the Messiah, promised, and that by this Resurrection he was to be advanced to the Throne of David. See A&S ii. 25, &c. Psal. cxxxii. 11.

And so again, when our Saviour says that he would send the Promise of the Father upon his Apostles, to enable them to be Witnesses of him; and in the next Words intimates that this Promise of the Father was to be fulfilled in their being endued with Power from on high; and when by this enduing them with Power from on high, was apparently meant his sending the Holy Spirit upon them, it is from hence plainly to be inferred that the sending the Holy Spirit in that manner had been promised by the Father. Luke xxiv. 48, 49.

And when those Words of Joel, wherein he speaks of God's pouring out his Spirit upon all Flesh, &c. Chap. ii. 28. are applied by St. Peter to this very Event, we cannot reasonably doubt, but that this was one of those Texts, wherein this extraordinary Gift had been promised by the Father.

The Prophecies not fulfilled before Christ.

Indeed there are several Texts that we apply to the Messiah, which the modern Jews endeavour to evade by shewing the Completion of them, in some other Person before his Time. But 'tis evident to every impartial Man, that there is not any of those Prophecies, whose Completion they contend for, that agrees to the Person they apply them to.

Had any of them been fulfilled before our Saviour, the antient Jews would have been the best Judges of it;

it: But they are so far from thinking so, that they understood them as we do. And at the very Time of our Saviour's appearing there was not only an universal Expectation of a Saviour, promised by the Prophets, but also of a Saviour under those very Ideas represented by the Scriptures. [See Mat. xi. 3. John vi. 14. xi. 27. i. 19, 20. iv. 25. Mark xi. 10. John iv. 42. Mat. xxii. 42. John vii. 41, 42. i. 49. xvi. 12, 13.]

And as these Things do evidently shew, that they thought these Scriptures not fulfilled; so if we and they rightly understand them, it is certain they could not have been fulfilled.

For we have already shewn that they all depended upon one another, and have Relation to the same one Person, and therefore they cannot be fulfilled by any one, who has not fulfilled them all.

Now such a Completion we Christians think we have in Jesus Christ; but whether this be so or not, shall be considered by and by.

The last Thing required in a History of the Children of Israel, found in the Scriptures.

Which is, what Methods have been taken from Time to Time, for the Conveyance of the true Religion to other Nations, which had so carefully been preserved among this People. The great End of raising up this People, and keeping them a separate Nation, was, that the true Religion being preserved amongst them, the rest of the World might be so enlightened by their Means as to worship the true God, in the true Faith and Expectation of the Benefits of the Saviour promised.

And as it was reasonable to expect, that some Methods would be taken, that would naturally contribute to this End; so we find by this History, in the Account of this People, that God designed this in all his Dispensations towards them.

If we begin at Abraham, we find him and his Family continually moving from Place to Place.

By this they became known, and as we read how God remarkably blessed them, and made them so considerable in the People's Eyes, that they were afraid of them and sought their Friendship. This would make Men naturally enquire what God they served, and the Manner how, to entitle them to so great Blessings from him. And by this Means every one of this numerous Family might be an Instrument of promoting true Religion where-ever they came.

It was for the same End probably that God raised up Joseph to such Dignity in Egypt, and brought Jacob and his Family thither. And it was for the same End, that he afterwards brought them out thence with such miraculous Judgments, and carried them into the Land of Canaan; that all the Earth might be filled with the Glory of the Lord.

These things must naturally convince all People, that this God who could do such mighty Things, must be the only great and true God:

For as it was the Practice of the Heathens, to put their several Nations under the Protection of some tutelar Deity, so God by rooting out the Canaanites by the Sword, lets them see in their own Way, that he was as much above other Gods, as his Power was greater than theirs. Exod. xviii. 11.

It was for the same End, that God afterwards raised up this Nation to such eminent Dignity and Glory, as we read he did in the Days of David and Solomon, that other Nations might have Knowledge of this People with their Manners and Religion.

The falling off also of the ten Tribes could not fail to disperse the Knowledge of their Religion to Egypt, Syria, Babylon and other Countries with whom they were often at War.

But the most effectual Method for this, was God's punishing punishing his People with Captivity; by which their Religion was dispersed over the Provinces of the Babylonian Empire.

I might add to this the Progress that the Jewish Religion made afterwards under the Grecian and Roman Empire;

But these Instances are sufficient to confirm us that God was not wanting in his wise Providence to carry on this great Truth over all the World.

To this we owe probably all the fine Things that are so much magnified among the Heathen Philosophers, which they picked up in the several Countries they travelled through, and which they either received from the Jews they happened to find there, or from Traditions they left behind them, or from the Books of the Old Testament.

The fabulous Inventions of the Heathen Poets are evidently built upon Scripture Stories in Disguise. And it is from a Corruption of the Ideas they derived from thence, that a great Part of their Religion may be accounted for.

Their Notion of the supreme God, as the Father both of God and Men, seems to have been taken from those Expressions in Scripture, where the Angels and Princes, are called Gods, and the Sons of God.

And their setting up Demons and famous Men as the Objects of their Worship, may probably have arisen from the Corruption of the Tradition of a promised Mediator, thro' whom God would be reconciled to Mankind, which prompted them to find out Mediators of their own, according to their own Imaginations.

But as the Light of true Religion encreased, these Superstitions were seen thro' by the more thinking Men, and by Degrees the World was brought into a proper Disposition for that Reformation God intended for them. For as some Men had attained to juster Notions of God, and discerned the Folly of Idolatry

Idolatry, so all the World were in Expectation of the Saviour promised, and probably of that Reformation he was to bring with him. [see Tacitus cap. XIII. Suet. in Vesp. Cap. IV.]

And therefore when the World was so far enlightened by the Jews, as to know the only true God, and in some Measure, to see the Vanity of the then established Superstitions, and a general Expectation was raised amongst them of a great Prince, that was to come, who was to introduce a new and glorious Scene of Happiness over all Mankind; here was the End of this Dispensation accomplished: This was what this Nation was raised up for, and this End being attained, there was now no longer Need of their Separation, nor of those Laws, that were appointed to keep them separate.

And therefore this seems to be a proper Time for the Appearance of the promised Saviour: And whether he came or not, and who he was is the next Thing to be enquired into.

That the Time for the coming of the promised Saviour appointed by the Prophets is expired by the Consent of the Jews themselves.

The Sceptre is long since departed from Judah; the second Temple has been destroyed near 1700 Years, in which he was to have appeared; and it was about that Time, that Daniel's Weeks expired; and yet these were the Rules to calculate his coming by.

And now the Question is whether there was any Person appeared at that Time, who answered the Prophetic Characters, and might reasonably be supposed to be the Person they designed:

There were many Pretenders set up about that Time appointed by the Prophets.

But the only Person that has been able to make his Pretences good, that he was the Person the Prophets aimed at, was Jesus Christ. And that he has done done this, is our next Business to prove. And in doing this, as I have before shewn the Connection of the Scripture Prophecies concerning him, so I will here shew the Connection there is between Jesus Christ, and those Prophecies. And that we may be able to make the Comparison the more easily, I will run them over in the Order I have before considered them.

The first Prediction of a Saviour fulfilled.

The first Prediction was, that the Seed of the Woman should bruise the Serpent's Head :

This has a wonderful Completion in Jesus Christ, if by this Expression was intended, that the Person meant by it should be the Seed of the Woman only, by being born of a Virgin-Mother.

As this was a Circumstance so extraordinary, that we can hardly imagine any sensible Impostor would have laid such a stumbling Block in the very Entrance of his Design, had it been a mere Delusion, so we have Reason to believe it was intended in the Promise, from the natural Relation it bears to those Laws about the Trial of Virginity, of which there can be no reasonable Account given, but that they had an Eye to the Birth of the Redeemer ; so that when he should come as the Son of a Virgin, there might be some approved and authentic Proofs, by which such Pretences might be legally determined. And as Jesus Christ was conceived in so miraculous a Manner, as to be the Seed of the Woman, so it will hereafter appear that he was that very Seed, and was to bruise the Serpent's Head.

By bruising the Serpent's Head is meant as I have shewn, his defeating the Devices of the Devil. And if this be the proper Meaning of the Words, for this End Jesus Christ is said to have appeared, that he might destroy the Works of the Devil.

And as the Design of the Devil was to deprive our first Parents of the Favour of God, and that Happiness they were made for ;

So

So this Design is defeated by Jesus Christ, as he has reconciled Mankind to God, and procured Pardon for their Sins, and has taught them the only Way to it, by Repentance. And as he laid down his Life to confirm his Doctrine, so God was pleased to accept of his Death as a Sacrifice of Expiation, to which, if we repent, we have Liberty to appeal for Pardon; and to assure us of his Acceptance of this Sacrifice, God raised him from the Dead.

And so again, he has not only promised a Resurrection to everlasting Life, to all that will make themselves capable of it; but he has given us his own Resurrection, as an Instance to shew the Possibility of the Event.

And lastly, he has not only promised Happiness to us, but he has taught us the only rational Way to attain it, which is by Holiness.

And as he has given us such Ideas of our Happiness, as are suitable to a rational Nature; so he has given us such Rules of Holiness to attain it by, as are not only the indispensable Condition of it, but such as are the necessary Qualifications for it.

And he has likewise not only given us the most proper Motives to work upon a rational Creature; but he has promised us such Assistance as will enable us to live accordingly.

And whereas the Happiness he proposed is in Heaven, to assure his Disciples, that there is such a Place, he ascended thither: And gave them Evidence of his being arrived there, by sending down those Gifts upon them from above, which he had before promised to endue them with.

And as he has given us this Assurance of a Resurrection to Life, so he tells us it shall be for ever.

And as he is now in Heaven where all Things are made subject to him, so he has given us Assurance that he will one Day come again to judge the World in Righteousness, and will reward good Men, and punish the Wicked. This

This is a general View of the Christian Religion, and what is there wanting here to compleat this Character of the Saviour promised, as he was to bruise the Serpent's Head?

The second Prediction of a Saviour fulfilled.

Another Promise we read of the Saviour to come was, that he should be one in whom all Nations should be blessed.

And as he was sent to bless us in turning every one of us away from our Iniquities. And in Order to this End as he has done all, that is consistent with a rational Nature, to work in us both to will and to do according to his good Pleasure ;

So he has done all that is necessary to make us happy, not only in a future, but this present World:

He has furnished our Understandings with Light, and Knowledge of all useful Truth : he has taught us how to regulate our Passions ; and the Laws he has given us to walk by, are such, as are really for our Good considered in every View.

And that there might be nothing still wanting to compleat our Welfare in this World, so far as we are capable of it, whereas we are all liable to many Evils, he has provided us with proper Assistances and Comforts under them, so as either totally to remove them, or take away the Sting and Burden of them.

And as we are all certain one Day to die, which of all Things is most terrible to human Nature, he has furnished us with a sufficient Remedy for this, by assuring us of a better Life.

And now when we consider all this, what is there still wanting to be done to make himself a Blessing to all Nations ?

The third Prediction of a Saviour fulfilled.

Another Character given us of the promised Saviour, was, that of a Prophet like unto Moses ; by which I have shewn you was meant, that he should not not only be a Prophet, but a Redeemer, and a Lawgiver, a Mediator of a new Covenant, confirmed by Miracles, as that of Moses had been. And that this Redemption should be a spiritual Redemption; the Laws such as are written upon the Heart; and the Covenant, not such a Covenant as Moses's was, but a Covenant of Peace and Reconciliation between God and Man, and this calculated for the Benefit of all the World.

This is all implied in this general Promise;

And what is there wanting in Jesus Christ of all this?

As a Prophet, he has brought us a perfect Revelation of the Divine Will in such a manner, as no one beside him ever did.

As a Saviour and Deliverer of God's People, he did not deliver them from a bodily Slavery, as the Egyptians was, but he delivered them from the Power of Sin, and Satan; this was such a Salvation as the World wanted; this was what he came into the World for; for this he had his Name; and this was his Work.

As a Ruler and Lawgiver, his Laws did not consist in burthensome Rites, and costly Ceremonies, and occasional Institutions, but they were Statutes founded in Reason, suitable to the Nature of God and Man; worthy of God to give, and necessary to the Welfare of Man to observe.

He came as a Mediator of a new Covenant, as Moses was, but such a Covenant as was of a better and more perfect Nature, and built upon better Promises, than his. And all this he confirmed by Miracles, as Moses did, and with such Force of Evidence that they not only extorted Confession from the Multitude, that he was a Teacher sent from God, but that he was that Prophet that was to come into the World.

And, lastly, as we have before shewn, that the promised Saviour was to be one, in whom all Nations should should be blessed, and therefore all he was to be, or do, must be so ordered, as to be a Blessing to all the World; so was it here in Jesus Christ: The Revelation he delivered, the Salvation he wrought, the Laws he gave, and the Covenant he made, were such, as were not only intended for, but, according as the Prophets had foretold they should, be adapted to the Condition of all Mankind.

And as the Benefit was intended for all the World, so Christ took care to have it preached to all Nations. And as he chose out proper Persons for this Work, so he endued them with proper Powers for it.

And when they had preached the Gospel to all Nations as our Saviour had foretold, that the End should come, that is the End of the Jewish Dispensation; and as God himself had likewise told the Jews, that when he should send a Prophet like unto Moses, if they did not bear, and receive him, he would require it at their Hands; so 'tis very remarkable that God then destroyed Jerusalem, the Temple and the Government of the Jews.

A fourth Prediction of a Saviour fulfilled.

But, fourthly, as the promised Saviour was to be a Prophet unto Moses, so he was to be a King, like unto David, having the Heathen for his Inheritance, and the utmost Parts of the Earth for his Possession.

And in this likewise Jesus Christ agrees, tho' he was not to have a temporal Government; as being inconsistent with the Character of the Messiah in other respects.

He was to be a Blessing to all Nations; but this was not the Way to be so, to make them all Vassals to one People. He was to bruise the Serpent's Head, and to deliver Mankind from Sin, Death and Misery, into a State of Holiness, Happiness, and Immortality.

And every Thing ascribed to him, must agree in this; and in order to this, some Things were to be taught and reveal'd from God, for which he usually made made use of the Prophets; and other Things to be done in the Way of Expiation, which belonged to the Office of a Priest; so he is represented in Scripture, under these Characters.

And as there were Laws to be given, and Judgments to be executed, and the like; so on this Account, he is represented as a King.

But then, as all this is only for the one great End of bruising the Serpent's Head, and bringing in everlasting Righteousness, this Kingdom must be evidently a spiritual Kingdom.

And 'tis upon this Account that 'tis called the Kingdom of David, and represented by sitting upon his Throne.

For tho' the Kingdom of David was a Kingdom in this World, it was erected with a Spiritual View: It was a Government set up for the Protection of the Children of Israel, a People chosen out of the World, as holy to the Lord, and whom he kept separate from them for the Preservation of the true Religion, in Opposition to Idolatry:

And therefore when 'tis promised that the Messiah should sit upon David's Throne, it can be meant only, that he should rule over the Israel of God, his elect and chosen People; and that, as from his Kingdom all Idolatry should be banished, and the true God only worshiped in it, so his Subjects should be a People holy to the Lord.

And as they only are the true Israel, the chosen and elect of God, who serve him faithfully; so this Promise of the Messiah's Kingdom, seems to imply that there shall be a Time when all the World shall be of the same Religion, and all the People holy to the Lord; when the Will of God shall be done on Earth, as it is in Heaven: And then his Kingdom will come; which is that Kingdom our Saviour seems to have taught us to pray for; a Kingdom that shall, as the Prophet says, be possessed by the Saints, for ever and ever.

If this be the Meaning of the Kingdom of the Messiah, it is yet to be fulfilled.

And as this Kingdom of the Saints was given to the Son of Man, when he came with the Clouds of Heaven before the Ancient of Days, sitting in Judgment; so we may conceive there will be a Time, when, as God will call the World to Judgment; so the Son of Man shall come in the Clouds of Heaven, and shall enter into his Kingdom; that is, shall be appointed Judge over all, and then shall he reign over the Saints for ever, which agrees with what we are taught to believe of Jesus Christ, that he shall be the Judge of Quick and Dead, and then he will give the Kingdom to the blessed of his Father, that was prepared for them from the Beginning of the World; by which is to be meant that Happiness, which was promised by the coming of the Seed of the Woman.

This is the full Completion of our Saviour's Kingdom and Glory:

But he has a Kingdom even now, in which he was invested at his Ascension into Heaven, God having then exalted him, and given him a Name above every Name.

And as the preaching the Gospel was an Introduction to this Authority, and was an actual Promulgation of those Laws which he required every one to obey, that would be entitled to his Favour here, or the Glory of his Kingdom hereafter, so this is frequently called in the Gospel, the Kingdom of Heaven, as it is the Beginning of that Dispensation, which was to go on by Degrees, till all Nations should become the Subjects of Christ, and enjoy the Privileges of the Gospel here, and such as would fit themselves for it, should be afterwards admitted into his Kingdom of Glory with all the Saints hereafter.

A fifth Prediction of the Saviour fulfilled.

Fifthly, The promised Saviour was to be a Priest:

That he was to give his Soul an Offering for Sin, the Just for the Unjust, that by his Stripes we are healed.

All which agrees with Jesus Christ, who came into the World to seek and save that which was lost, and laid down his Life, that we might have Redemption thro' his Blood.

And as he did this by God's own Appointment, he had by Consequence paid the Price of our Redemption, which he had now a Right to: So he then ascended up into Heaven, as the High-Priest used to do at the great Expiation, to present the Blood of his Sacrifice in the holy Place. And by thus shewing himself before God in that Body, in which he suffer'd, and by that suffering had performed the Condition of our Reconciliation: As he did then by that Act intercede for us, and, as it were, claim that Redemption, he had by his Suffering purchased, so, as he lives for ever at God's right Hand, he lives for ever to make Intercession for us.

And thus you see how he fulfilled the Character of a Priest.

The Prediction of the Time of the promised Saviour's coming fulfilled.

First, As it was foretold by Haggai ii. 6, 7. that he should come, whilst the second Temple stood; at a Time when the World should be in Expectation of him; and after great Changes in the Kingdoms of the Earth; so we find all these agree to the coming of our Saviour Christ.

Every one knows, that as the Assyrian Empire had, at the Time of this Prophecy, been transferr'd to the Medes and Persians, and the Persian Empire not long after was overturned by Alexander; so was this Empire by Degrees swallow'd up by the Romans. and when after various Wars the whole Empire of the World was reduced under Augustus, and settled in a perfect Peace, then was Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, born into the World.

He

He was born whilst the second Temple stood, and at a Time when there was a general Expectation of him.

So that nothing can more punctually agree than this.

But, Secondly, The Time of the promised Saviour's coming was determined by Daniel to the Expiration of seventy Weeks, after the going forth of a Decree to build Jerusalem.

And as at this Time he appeared, the general Expectation of his coming at that Time, when he appeared, is a Proof that that Generation understood the Prophecies, on which they built their Expectation, were then to be fulfilled. And 'tis remarkable, that however the Calculation of this Time be made, it wonderfully agrees to Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, Malachi tells us, Chap. iii. i. iv. 5. that he must have a Messenger come before him, one in the Power and Spirit of Elias, to prepare his Way, and then suddenly he should appear. And,

How aptly does this concur with the Preaching of John Baptist; who not only professed, that he came for that End the Prophet had foretold, viz. to prepare the Way of the Lord, but also declared, that Jesus was the Person, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the Sins of the World.

And, Lastly, He was to come before the Sceptre should depart from Judah, and so Jesus Christ did:

But soon after his coming, when the Gentiles, as Jacob had foretold they should do, had gather'd themselves to him by the Preaching of the Apostles, then the End of that Dispensation came. The Jewish Government was destroyed, and the Romans took away both their Place and Nation.

And as this was a strong Testimony to Jesus Christ; so it is also of the Wisdom of that Providence, by which it was effected, at that particular Time.

For as the Jewish Ceremonies had been instituted by God for the Cure and Prevention of the Idolatry of that People, who had been set up by God for the Preservation of the true Religion, in the Knowledge and Service of the true God, in the Faith of the promised Saviour, for which he gave them several Injunctions to keep them separate from the idolatrous World, and several Revelations from Time to Time to correct their Notions and support their Faith.

And as they were likewise intended, notwithstanding their Separation, to be a Means of communicating Light and Knowledge to the rest of Mankind; so when the Jews were no longer prone to Idolatry, and therefore there was no longer Reason to continue them a separate People:

And when that Saviour was come, the Expectation of whom they were to propagate, and when the Knowledge of the true Religion was imparted to all Nations by the Apostles, there was then no need of continuing the Jews a separate People; and therefore God put an End to their Polity: Intending, no doubt, that as he designed that they, and all Mankind, should be but one People, so it should not be in their Power to keep themselves separate, and observe that Dispensation any longer, by which they were obliged to meet and worship at Jerusalem only.

Thus you see, how the Prophecies agree to Jesus Christ, in respect of the Time, in which the promised Saviour was to come.

But further, our Saviour not only came at the Time appointed by the Prophets, but he came at the most suitable Time, that could be imagined.

For Learning was, at that Time, arrived at its utmost Perfection; and as this qualified them to understand Truth, so there was a noble Spirit of Curiosity reigning among them; and tho' this arose probably out of Vanity, yet it was a proper Disposition for the opening of Christianity to them.

There was likewise a general Peace throughout the World;

World; and as there was by this Means an easy Passage open'd for Commerce from one Kingdom to another, so there could be no Time more seasonable for the opening the Gospel.

But what is more than all this, there was at that Time an absolute Necessity of a Revelation both to Jew and Gentile.

The Necessity of a new Revelation to the Gentiles, at that Time when our Saviour came, I have already shewn. And there can be as little doubt of the same, in respect of the Jews, if we consider that notwithstanding all the Methods God had taken for the Establishment of true Religion and Virtue among them, they still needed a Reformation. As to their Religion, it was reduced entirely to a mere Formality.

And as to the Duties of Morality, they thought that the punctual Observance of some one Duty, would exempt them from an Obedience to all the rest.

And with this, there was then a modern, but prevailing Sect among them, that not only rejected a great Part of the holy Writings, but maintained, that there was no Resurrection, nor Angel, nor Spirit:

Whether they meant by this, that there was no separate State of Spirits, I am not sufficiently informed; However that be, there does not seem to have been at that Time a sufficient Revelation of a future State.

'Tis true indeed the Principle of a Resurrection is said in the New Testament to have been believed by the Pharisees; but upon what Foundation we are not told: But Josephus (lib. 18. cap. 2.) tells us, they had very gross Notions of it.

These things being thus, this plainly shews, how ineffectual all former Methods had proved, and how necessary a new Revelation was at that Time, for the Reformation both of their Notions and their Manners: And particularly to give them a better Idea of another Life, built upon a better Bottom.

And since the promised Saviour was to come at this Time, and to bring a new Covenant with him :

And since Jesus Christ not only came at this Time, but came with a new Covenant to the World, and such a one as was in all Respects suitable to their Circumstances ; what stronger Proof can we have, that he was the very Person the Jews expected, that God had promised, and the Prophets had foretold ?

And when he had actually made an Offer of this Covenant to the Jews, and was rejected by them, this gives us another Reason for the Destruction of that Nation: As being a People unworthy of the Continuance of God's Favours, who would not hear the Prophet he had sent to them.

And thus you see how all Things agree in Jesus Christ, in every Circumstance foretold. And as the Completion of them in him, is a full Confirmation of our foregoing Interpretation of them ; so this will likewise give us a Key, by which to explain several other Places:

For if there be, as we have shewn, real Prophecies of a Saviour to come, which have been literally fulfilled in Jesus Christ, from hence we may infer,

That whatever is told of Jesus Christ in the New Testament, that has a natural Relation to what we read in the Old, we have Reason to think that Relation might be intended, and may reasonably interpret one by the other.

Thus, when we see a manifest Resemblance between the Serpent lifted up in the Wilderness ; the Scape-Goat ; the paschal Lamb ; and the High Priest's going into the Holy of Holies once a Year to present the Blood of the Atonement before the Lord ; and our Saviour's being lifted up upon the Cross ; his bearing our Sins on his own Body ; his dying for us ; and after that of his going up to Heaven, with his own Blood, to appear pear in the Presence of God for us : Is it not reasonable to think, that these Institutions might be designed, as Types of those several Things that are so manifestly represented by them in the Gospel ?

So, 2dly, When we read of Jesus Christ's being born of a Virgin, and are from thence sure that God always decreed it should be so ; when we find the Promise of Isaiab quoted by the Evangelist, as fulfilled in him, where 'tis said, a Virgin shall conceive and bring forth a Son, and shall call his Name Emmanuel, is it not reasonable to conclude that this Prophecy might relate to him, and be spoken of him, tho' the Prophet did not know it ? Especially when the Characters there mention'd of the Person to be born, could belong to no other Person but him, being described not only by such wonderful Titles, as Emmanuel, Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Father of the Age, the Prince of Peace, but also as one, who should sit on the Throne of David for ever, which is an apparent Character of that King, who was to come of the Seed of Jesse, whom we have already shewn to be the Messiah.

And so, 3dly, When we read the History of our Saviour's Death, and the several Circumstances of it ;

And read in the xxii Psalm the very same Things spoken of there, tho' they seem to be spoken by David of himself, yet as they do not appear to have been fulfilled in him, and therefore cannot properly belong to him ; so considering David as a Prophet, it is not unreasonable to think he might have spoken with a Prophetic View of some other Person ; and since they all concur in Jesus Christ, and are actually fulfilled in him, it is natural to conceive they were spoken of him.

Thus we may conclude of a vast Multitude of Texts, which will open a great Part of the Scripture to us ;

But as such Interpretations are of use only to our G 4 selves,

felves, ſince no Argument can be drawn from them for the Conviction of others :

I have therefore made uſe of not any Prophecies of this Nature, but ſuch only as are plain to every impartial Reader ; and I think there is nothing wanting beyond what I have urged, to ſhew that they agree in Jeſus Chriſt ; which was the Thing to be demonſtrated.

Dr. B E R R I M A N's

B O Y L E's L E C T U R E S

A B R I D G ' D.

THE GRADUAL REVELATION
OF THE
G O S P E L.

THE Writers of Infidelity endeavour to propagate their Notions by two Ways. One is, by extolling the Sufficiency of Natural Light, as a competent Guide in Matters of Religion, which neither needs, nor ought to have any Assistance. The other is, by making Exceptions to the Christian Scheme in particular, as being either absurd in itself, or insufficiently attested. In answer to which I propose,

I. To observe the Defects, and Insufficiency of natural Light, to answer the Ends and Purposes of Religion. Then,

II. To collect from hence the great Need Mankind stood in of Revelation; of some stated Scheme of Religion to be given by God, in order to beget an assured Hope, and Expectation of his Favour. And,

III. To assert the Reasonableness of receiving that System of Religion which is revealed in Scripture, as being every way qualified to give us the most solid Satisfaction.

I. To observe the Defects and Insufficiency of natural Light to answer the Purposes of Religion. And here I must remark, that Men very often impose upon themselves by ascribing all that to the Discovery of natural Light, which they perceive to be agreeable to Reason, without distinguishing by what Steps they arrive at that Perception. We find the Gospel has prescribed some Instances of moral Duty; which our Reason now readily approves; which yet without Revelation, it either would not have perceived at all, or but imperfectly. The like is to be said of the Motives to Obedience. And is it then not perverse in Men to argue against the Need of Revelation, from the Experience of that Knowledge they receive from it, and to take an Estimate of the Strength of their Faculties, from that Measure of Understanding they enjoy by the Addition of those Helps they labour to exclude? This is applicable to that Degree of Light which is to be observed in the more civiliz'd Heathen Nations, which did not arise from the Strength of their Faculties, but from Tradition darkened, it may be, by Length of Time, and Obscurity of Conveyance; but again improved by Conversation with the Jews. (See Jenkins's Reasonableness of the Christian Rel. Vol. 1. part. 3. c. 5. § 2.) But if we would judge what human Reason can do without these Advantages, view the Negroes and Hottentots, and they will shew us the Insufficiency of human Faculties to guide us without the Addition of superior Light.

But supposing the Light of Reason able to discover all by itself, which it now sees and approves with the Advantage of former Revelations; yet even in this View the Rule of natural Light would labour under signal Defects, particularly in these four Respects.

1. As to the Instances and Measures of our Duty.
2. As to the Rise and Origin of Evil.
3. As to the Assurance of Pardon.
4. As to the Motives, and Inducements to Obedience.

1. As to the Instances and Measures of our Duty;

ty ; who ever advanced their Schemes of Morality, to such a Height of Purity, as the Gospel of Jesus has done ? The Prohibitions of Revenge, and the Virtue of loving Enemies, how amiable soever they appear in the Christian Scheme, yet, who will say the Obligation to them would have appeared without that Revelation ? They might have been admired as heroic, but would not be insisted on as Matter of strict Duty.

To honour the divine Image in all Men, to endeavour their Happiness, and to requite good Offices, appears indeed extremely agreeable to Reason, when once 'tis prescribed ; but who could have discerned the Obligation without further Aid ? Or to reproach those with Transgression, who fell short of it ?

Now, if we could suppose it true, that any Particular taken by itself, might have been discover'd by meer natural Light, yet when we find every Part of the System so free from Absurdities, as not to admit any Thing into it that is vain or superfluous ; there will be Reason to own, that the Light of Nature could not have taught even the Doctrines of Nature with that Clearness, but is beholden to the brighter Light of Revelation for the Perfection of its own Precepts.

For in Fact the Knowledge of natural Duties grew more clear and evident in Proportion as the Light of Revelation has shone out with a brighter Lustre. Thus Seneca, Epietetus, and the later Moralists exceeded their Predecessors, the ancient Philosophers, in their Ethicks, by vertue of that Help they received from the Brightness of the Christian Institution. Now that which has given so much Light, even to those who disclaim it, may be presumed to do it more abundantly to those who receive it.

2. The next Instance in which I would note the Insufficiency of natural Light, is with respect to the Origin of Evil.

That there has been not only natural but moral
Evil

Evil in the World, has been the Complaint of observing Men in all Ages; or if there be some that deny the Distinction between moral Good, and Evil, they will be puzzled to account for the natural Evils, consistently with the Wisdom and Perfection of the Creator, which are super-added as the Punishment of what we reckon Immoralities.

The Doctrine of Transmigration of Souls was invented to solve these Difficulties which arose from the Miseries of human Life, that they might be represented as the Punishment of Transgressions in a former State, to save the Honour of divine Justice and vindicate the seeming Inequalities of Providence. But this did but shift the Difficulty. For still the Question recurs, whence had the Evils of that former State their Rise? How came the Works of the supreme Being otherwise than good? To which we find these two Methods of Solution; one is taken from the Doctrine of a fatal Necessity: The other from a Supposition of two opposite Principles of Good and Evil. Both which are injurious to the Honour of God.

As to the first of them, the Doctrine of a fatal Necessity, that must either be independent upon God, or else resulting from his Will. The former Supposition is an unworthy Abridgement of his Power, and the latter of his Goodness. In both Cases all Grounds of Trust, Worship and Obedience to God are subverted. We cannot depend upon his Help, who is either subject to superior Fate, or has himself induced Men by a compulsive Influence to offend against the stated Rules of Duty.

As to the Doctrine of two opposite Principles, it is incompatible with the Immensity and boundless Extent of the divine Perfections. For so much independent Power, as is ascribed to the evil Being, must be taken from the good one; which destroys Infinity, and represents a Deity unable to do all the Good that
He

He desires, or restrain the Evil that he hates. Besides this Hypothesis does not solve the Difficulty, there being plainly the same Objections against making Creatures liable to be corrupted by some other Principle, which lie against making them capable of corrupting themselves.

How then is the Difficulty cleared up by Revelation? Not by any nice and philosophical Deductions, but by a plain Matter of Fact, sufficient to preserve the Honour of God, and the Influences of Religion: We have a plain Account of the Temptation and Apostacy of Man: From which we learn that Sin was introduced by the Abuse of Liberty; that the first Author and Promoter of Sin was himself the Creature of God and subject to his Government. So that God cannot be charged as the Author of Sin. Nor can we suppose an independent Principle of Evil; since the Liberty of Will, which is a valuable Blessing, and without which there could be no Virtue, has put it in the Creatures Power to be guilty of Vice. And if this does not solve the Difficulties in Speculation, yet it solves them enough for the Direction of our Practice, and to preserve a religious Fear and Reverence for God.

If our modern Infidels pretend to found the same Answer upon the Principles of Nature, yet the Defects of antient Philosophy convince us, they never could have done it without the Help of Revelation:

For who shall assure us of the Reality of such original Liberty, and the actual Abuse of it by a Voluntary Disobedience, if we have no authentick History of the Fact, nor its Memory preserved by the Doctrine and Tradition of succeeding Times? By looking into ourselves we may perceive some Degree of Liberty, but not without a great Byass to Sin; so that the Difficulty cannot be cleared up without supposing Man to be created at first in a more perfect State. And this we are only assured of from revealed Religion.

3. The third Defect of natural Light, is, that we have no Assurance of Pardon.

Forgiveness, without question, is a Matter of Favour, and as such cannot be relied upon but in vertue of some Promise. Repentance, indeed, would appear to be the most likely Method for averting the Effects of God's Displeasure, and conciliating his Favour towards us.

But whether any Thing in our Power could be effectual, might at least be doubted; and if it were, yet still it would be difficult to state the Measures and Effects of such Repentance, especially in Case of repeated and habitual Wickedness. And after all our Deductions could only be probable.

Such Repentance, without Doubt ought to include a forsaking of those Sins which we profess to detest. And if this could be done without any Charge of Defect, it still would be nothing more than Matter of strict Duty. And how should that atone for past Offences? much more if this cannot be done to such Perfection, but is followed by many new Violations of Duty, the Sinner then seems to be left in a most hopeless Condition, under a Sense of Guilt, without Assurance of Pardon.

The Practice of sacrificing was anciently observed with a View to give some Relief in this Particular. And if this was done as the Result of Tradition, originally founded in Appointment with a Promise of Acceptance, in vertue of a future perfect Sacrifice; it is a Witness of the Defect of natural Principles, and the Need of a Revelation. But if it be consider'd as it obtain'd generally in the Heathen, where the Light of such Tradition was lost, then there was no Comfort to be drawn from it.

The Life of Religion consists in the Hope of the divine Favour; and that Hope must languish, unless supported by divine Promise, which we cannot be assured of but by Revelation: And if upon Enquiry we find that there is a Revelation which assures us that God is ready to pardon, and has himself provided an effectual Method for this Purpose, in accepting of the Sacrifice of Christ as a full Ransom of Sin, upon Condition of true Repentance, with an humble Confidence in his Merits; we ought to rejoice for this Favour, and endeavour to qualify ourselves for receiving it.

4. The last Instance of the Defect of natural Light, is taken from the Motives and Inducements to Obedience.

The Motives to Obedience must arise either from the Prospect of some Benefits design'd for its Reward, or from the escaping of such Penalties as are due to Transgression, or from a Conjunction of both these together.

Now since it is evident, that Providence does not with an even Hand dispense forth such Rewards and Penalties, it remains, that either a future State must be supposed for the adjusting of these present Inequalities; or else our Duty will want its most proper Inducements. I conclude therefore that there will be such a State. But had we no other Proof of that Conclusion, besides what arises from this sole Consideration, that the present State of Things requires it, in order to the full Vindication of the divine Honour; I fear the Hurry of our sensual Appetites, which are so hardly restrained under the clearest Convictions, would go nigh to give up the Honour of the divine Attributes, rather than be controuled from Principles that are no otherwise supported. And there must be need of some higher Principle than natural Light, which brings me in the

II. Second Place to collect from hence the great Need Mankind stood in of Revelation, in order to beget an assured Hope of God's Favour.

If the Strength of our own Minds be plainly insufficient, let us see what other Help can guide us in this Obscurity. Will the Wisdom and Authority of other Men be a competent Succour to our own Weakness? No, for in Matters of Religion there are some Points in which human Reason either cannot see at all; or not without great Doubt, and Uncertainty; and in Relation to them, whatever any other Man shall maintain upon the Force of Reason, will still be doubtful, unless we can suppose that his Conclusions should be clearer, and better founded, than the Principles themselves from which he concludes.

Or if some should be supposed to have argued right from the Reasons of Things, yet their Authority could be pressed no further than the Reasonableness of their Assertions appeared. And consequently the Bulk of Mankind, whose Faculties were too gross to perceive, or their Attention too backward to go through such Disquisitions, would still be at a Loss where to fix their Foot.

Shall we then have recourse to Tradition? Agreed; but then how shall we know whether the Persons from whom it was derived did collect the Matter by the meer Strength of their natural Abilities? or from divine Revelation? If the first should be the Case, there is no Ground to suppose the Faculties of Men in former Times could qualify them for those Disquisitions in Matters of Religion, which we have shewn to be above the Reach of human Penetration.

And if they had supernatural Assistance, the Point in Question is admitted. So that there seems no Medium between resting on the incompetent Authority of human Reason, and admitting the Need there is of divine Revelation, to prevent a State of endless Scepticism, which must utterly destroy the Influences of Religion, and cast us into the wildest Confusion.

In Answer to this it will probably be urged, that the Revelation we boast of as the only Expedient to preserve a Sense of Religion, has appeared to be as insuffi-

insufficient for this Purpose as a State of Nature itself. That the World is as wicked, and Christians commit all Sorts of Lewdness with as little Regret as ever they can be pretended to have been in any civilized Nations of the Heathen World.

But this Objection is of no Weight because it mistakes the external Profession, for Christianity, or Religion itself.

The Christian Religion does, in its own Nature, tend to make Men good; but then in order to attain this Effect, that Religion must be inwardly received, as well as outwardly professed. And when Men are not in Earnest in their Professions, there can be no Wonder, if its Influences should be weak.

And yet whatever Exceptions may be made to the Behaviour of particular Persons, the Precepts of the Christian Morality are much superior to those of Heathen Moralists, who admitted of some Practices that to the Christian is shocking to be thought of. [See Jenkin's Reas. of the Christian Religion. Vol. 1. Part 3. C. 4. And after all, those who would persuade us to give up Christianity, ought to give us something better in its room, which they have not done. Such Zeal against Christianity can hardly be acquitted from the Charge of Pride and vain Glory. For if Nature is insufficient to answer the Ends of Religion, and that divine Revelation, which alone appears equal to those Purposes, is nevertheless opposed; for whence can this proceed but from Mens utter Aversion in some Respect, from the Impressions of real Piety? But this will appear further, when

III. I proceed to assert the Reasonableness of receiving that System of Religion, which is revealed in Scripture, as being every way qualified to give us the most solid Satisfaction.

I need not here undertake the Defence of our Religion, as no way contradictory to natural Light; it will be Time enough to do that when our Enemies have objected some Instance of this Kind.

There is one Particular indeed, in which Infidels have lately endeavour'd to convict our Religion of Falshood. They rightly observe that Christ and his Apostles do undertake to establish themselves upon the old Foundation, and maintain Christ to be that Saviour promised in all former Ages. But then they insinuate, that there is no such Person promised in the antient Scriptures; that the Belief of a Messias was invented not long before the Age of Jesus, unsupported by any literal Predictions: And only countenanced by Men, who indulged their Fancy to find out mystical Interpretations. Moreover, that this Belief of a Messias, ill supported as it is, was a quite different Thing from the Christian Doctrine. The Jews expected a temporal Deliverer, who was to establish a great Empire over them.

As to this latter Observation, if the Doctrine of a Messias can be shewn to be contained in the Scriptures, it can but little concern us how the Jews misrepresented it. It will be easy to distinguish the fundamental Matter of their Hope from their own vain Fancies.

Mean while it seems extraordinary, that our Enemies should censure this Doctrine of the ancient Jews, as supported only by what is figurative; and yet ascribe to them those Expectations of a temporal Kingdom, which were founded on the literal Interpretation.

They should either be acquitted from the Charge of Allegory in this Instance, or else their Opinion should be reckoned nearer to the Christian, concerning the spiritual Reign and Offices of the Messias.

With respect to that other Part of the Objection, our Enemies are unreasonable in requiring us to shew, merely from the Use of Language, and the Rules of Grammar and Criticism, that the Christian Sense of the Prophecies must be the true one; for tho' this might be be done, yet besides the common Usage of Speech, and express Import of Words, there is another way of arguing from Authority. Suppose then we should not, by a bare Consideration of the Text of the Old Testament, be able to defend the Christian Interpretation; yet if they who did anciently interpret in such Manner, did work Miracles, this Proof of a divine Attestation will abundantly establish the Sense in Question, and evince it to be the genuine Meaning of the Scripture. Such therefore is the Evidence of the Christian Doctrine, and consequently of its being foretold in the Writings of the Old Testament. And if besides this Proof from Miracles, there should be a Concurrence of other Circumstances that give Light to such Interpretation, 'tis unreasonable to reject it, because perhaps a bare Inspection of the Passage might suggest another Meaning, for that would be to rest the Matter on one Method of Inquiry, and that liable to great Uncertainty.

It shall then be my Endeavour to lay before you the Plan of the Christian Scheme, as it was delivered to our first Parents, and gradually unfolded thro' the succeeding Periods of Time, till at last it was displayed with the clearest and most radiant Lustre upon Christ's Manifestation in the Flesh.

The divers Manners in which God spake in Time past unto the Fathers by the Prophets, may have Reference to those different Methods in which God imparted his Revelations; but will, no doubt, be very justly extended to take in the different Import of those Revelations themselves, whether deliver'd in express Terms, or figuratively. The Authority of both is equal, so far as their Meaning appears; for if both alike were imparted by divine Revelation, and appear to have been intended in our Sense of them, whether literal or not, then they must both of them have the same divine Authority to support them, and be alike capable of inferring those Conclusions, that are argued from them. So that in stating of this Matter, I will join together the literal and the typical Predictions, as corresponding together, and tending alike to display the Harmony of the Gospel-Scheme, as taught from the Beginning, and design'd by the divine Wisdom for the only Method of Salvation.

If the Meaning of figurative Characters be not demonstrative, yet there are usually such Circumstances, as may suffice to point out the general Design. Thus if it appears suitable to the Genius of the Jewish Writings to have future Things shadowed out by Types, if, in assigning the Interpretation of such Types, we propose no other than a rational Scheme of Religion that is plainly answerable to the ancient Hopes of faithful Men, fulfilled by a correspondent Accomplishment in the Event of Things, and confirmed by other Passages, that are delivered in more express Terms, there is then no internal Evidence to be produced against this Argument from ancient Types, but Reason to own its Conclusiveness. And though we have no Need to rest the whole of the Cause on this Kind of Reasoning, so neither have we any to give it up, as inconclusive.

It is therefore a wild Attempt to set the Evidence of the Gospel merely upon this Foot; for that we have other Evidence, which is direct and literal cannot be denied. And on the other Hand, that even that which is drawn from Allegory may by a serious Attention to the Genius and Drift of Scripture, arise to a rational Degree of Evidence; and was moreover attested at first by innumerable Miracles.

Our Adversaries indeed have endeavoured to throw out the Evidence of Miracles, as impertinent; and alledge, that if the ancient Prophecies had no such Meaning in them, as the New Testament ascribes to them, no subsequent Miracles, can ever prove they had, which is very true: But the Ques- tion

tion is not whether Miracles may prove that Exposition to be true, which was false, but whether that Exposition, whose Truth had otherwise been less apparent, may not be cleared up by the Evidence of Miracles. In this View it is an Argument of great Importance; and sets that, which otherwise might be disputed, above Contradiction. So that taking the whole Proof together, we have such Reasons to embrace Christianity as render Infidelity without Excuse.

And as the ancient Predictions of the Messiah were dispensed in divers Manners, so they were delivered at sundry Times. The whole of our Religion was not discovered at one View, but in such Measure, as was fit to keep up in fallen Men an Hope of the divine Mercy, a lively Assurance of Pardon, and Reconciliation.

Nor was it necessary that the Prophets should perceive the entire Import of every Prediction. If they saw enough to preserve a Sense of Religion alive, it might be left to those of future Times, to discern the further Import of the same Prophecies, when either explained by new ones, or accomplished in the Event of Things. It is therefore allowed that the ancient Prophets were not able to explain the whole of their Prophecies; there was something latent which served as a continual Spur to excite their Zeal and Application, and made them labour for a further Discovery. It is for this Reason, that the Gospel as now preached in the World is termed the Mystery that had been hid from Ages. See Col. i. 26. 1 Pet. i. 10, &c. Mat. xiii. 17. Luke x. 24. Now where is the Absurdity of such a Supposition, that the ancient Oracles were not understood in all that Latitude which God has been pleased, by succeeding Revelations, to lay open, notwithstanding they had all the same End in View from the Beginning, and were conducted with such Harmony as mutually to give Light and Confirmation to each other.

Let us then trace the Communications of Gospel Light from the earliest Ages, that we may see by what Degrees the Doctrine of Salvation was made known unto Men; how far they understood the Notices delivered, and how much of the Doctrine contained in their Oracles, was left to be cleared up by future Revelations, at the same Time making a Discovery of new Circumstances relating to this great Event, and giving further Illustration to the old ones.

Now there are two principal Divisions of Time before the coming of Christ; That before and That after the calling of Abraham.

In the first, Mankind were considered without Regard to any distinct Family or Nation. In the latter the Promises were made to the Posterity of Abraham, tho' with some express Intimations, that the Benefit of them should reach to other Nations. I will consider these Periods distinctly, and under the latter more especially observe with what Gradation of Prophecy this great Oeconomy was opened, and the Messiah under various Characters described, either as the Son of Abraham, or Son of David.

In the former of these Periods we have but little Remains of God's Correspondence with Mankind, and in what we have, the Notices of this great Event are very concise, but such as suit with the gradual Revelation of so great a Mystery, and are consistent with the more particular Discoveries of after Times. The first Promise was made immediately upon the Fall, when God denounced his Judgments upon all Parties concerned in the Offence, but in the midst of Judgment was pleased to remember Mercy towards fallen Man, and increase his Vengeance on the Serpent's Head by the Method used for Man's Recovery. As the Sentence of the Man

Man and Woman was calculated to put them in Mind of their Apostacy, so was the Serpent doomed to such a Condition, to such Antipathy towards Men, as might serve for a constant Memorial of that sad Catastrophe. See Gen. iii. 14, 15.

But tho' the literal Acceptation has its Use, yet the Occasion must appear too solemn, not to suggest some higher View than this; and therefore it has been understood to have a symbolical Design, relating to Events of greater Importance. It is owned the Christian Exposition contains more than can be argued from the Words themselves, and requires some further Light to support it. Mean while there is nothing inconsistent in the Christian Exposition with the Terms, in which that Prophecy is delivered, or with any Principle of natural Light, or with any other Revelation, So that if it should appear to be supported by Authority, it ought to be admitted as the true Exposition.

That one should be born of the Posterity of that Woman who had been seduced, and should engage in a War with the Devil and his Followers, and sustaining a slight Damage in the suffering of Death, should thereby destroy him that had the Power of Death, and repair the Injuries he had done to human Race, is the Purport of the Christian Exposition, which contains nothing repugnant to the Words, and is consistent with the succeeding Oracles, which opened the Way for the Christian Dispensation; so that, upon taking a View of the whole Scheme together, there will appear no reasonable Objection to be made to this Interpretation.

How much of this Mystery was understood by our first Parents we cannot know. But as the literal Sense is too low to be mistaken for the whole Design of it, so God's frequent Intercourse with Men by his Prophets, might supply fuller Explications of what seemed to be obscure; and give them a further Insight into the Design of the divine Counsels, that we can now perceive. It might be necessary to have the Point cleared up to them, lest the great Design of Religion should be lost in such Obscurity. But it was not necessary that those Explications should be transmitted to us, because we have other sufficient Means for discovering the genuine Sense of the Prophecy. As then it is not on one Hand to be insisted, that our first Parents understood this Prophecy in all that Extent in which it appears to us by Means of subsequent Revelations; so neither is it to be denied, but that they might be favoured with such Explications, as gave them a clearer View of this important Doctrine, than the Words unexplained could do.

I will now see in what Sense the Words might be taken by our first Parents, and then see whether the religious Notions, which are found in the earliest Antiquity, be not most agreeable to such a Sense. It is not to be imagined that they should take the Serpent for no other than that brute Creature they saw before their Eyes, incapable of sinning, and therefore no fit Subject of Punishment. They would rather suppose his Form usurped by some evil Spirit, tho' this for want of Experience might not appear to them at the Beginning of the Temptation. Consequently the Threatnings which are denounced against the Serpent, though they have a literal Completion in the Properties of that Reptile, must yet be understood to denote something of a higher Concern, and accommodated to the Nature of a spiritual and intelligent Being. As then there must be something of this Notion conceived from the Beginning (tho' not with all that Lustre and Advantage in which we now perceive it) so we have Reason to believe it might be cultivated and improved by Enoch and other holy Men of old, who being endued with the Spirit of Prophecy, would be most probably enlightened lightened with such Knowledge of this important Doctrine, as was proper for the Age in which they lived. What they delivered of this Kind the Holy Ghost has not transmitted to us, because we have other Means of Knowledge; and whilst we enjoy a more abundant Light, we can have no Ground to complain of the Removal of such, as was comparatively faint and glimmering. However from the short Hints which do remain of the Notions and Sentiments of those Times, we may collect a reasonable Confirmation of our first Parent's Sense of this ancient Prophecy, and of its being figuratively explained and understood by pious Men from the Beginning, who did look for a Deliverer, expressed by the Seed of the Woman, who should repair the Damage of the Fall.

The Allusions in Scripture that are made to it under the Character of that old Serpent, (See Revel xii. 9. 3; 4. Rom. xvi. 20. 2 Cor. xi. 3. Isa. lxxv. 25: 23. Psalin lxxii. 9. Mic. vii. 17.) may serve for Intimations that the mystical Interpretation of that Passage was anciently received among the Jews as a settled Principle. And tho' it be no unreasonable Presumption, that they derived it by Tradition, yet the Method I proposed obliges me to look into the little Remains of those Times for what Hints we can pick up of the same Interpretation; concerning which I have one Postulatum to premise, that in so short a Narrative of Things, it is reasonable to suppose the Sayings of those ancient Patriarchs, should be such as contain some Matter of real Consequence, and ought not to be restrained to the lowest Sense, which the Words may admit.

Upon this Presumption I proceed to consider the Speeches of those ancient Patriarchs, and see what Reference they bear to this Promise of Redemption:

Immediately after God had denounced the Sentence of Mortality on Mankind, alleviated however with the Promise, that the Seed of the Woman should finally destroy the Serpent, it immediately follows, And Adam called his Wife's Name Eve, because she was the Mother of all Living; this is commonly understood to denote that she was first Mother of all Men. But this Interpretation is too low, and not answerable to the Dignity of the Occasion, and the Connection of this Passage with what went before.

But if we look back on the divine Sentence, but just before recited, where Adam stands as the Head and Representative of fallen Mankind, brought into a State of Death and Condemnation, and the Seed of the Woman is promised to repair the Inconvenience, and restore Life and Immortality; we shall then perceive the Beauty and Propriety of this Appellation. She was the Mother of all Living, because he who is the Author of our Life and Salvation, as well as all they who do partake of the spiritual Life, by Vertue of their Union with him, were to descend from her, and reckoned for that Seed of the Woman mentioned in this Promise.

As Adam then by this first Sentence, expressed his Faith of Life and Salvation by the Seed of the Woman; so did Eve upon the Birth of Cain. I have gotten a Man from the Lord, or as it may be more grammatically rendered from the Hebrew, I have gotten a Man Jehovah, or, the Lord. She had fresh in her Mind the Promise of a victorious Seed, and understood it of a single Person, who tho' of human Nature, should yet have the Fulness of the Godhead dwelling in him, from whence she ascribes to him the incommunicable Name of God. And tho' Eve mistook Cain himself for that promised Seed, or at least that Son from whom that blessed Seed should come; or if she only looked upon his Birth as an Earnest of that future Multiplication of Mankind, which in Time should produce the promised Redeemer: Yet either Way it argues her Acceptation of that original Promise to be such, that one of her Posterity should repair the Damage of the Fall.

which

When Cain by his Wickedness had fallen short of the Character of the promised Seed, and had moreover killed Abel, Eve's Faith did not fail; but at the Birth of Seth she speaks of it as the Appointment of God, which could not fail, that this should be another Seed instead of Abel. (Gen. iv. 25.) therefore not to be slain childless, but to preserve a Seed in the Earth, till He should come, who is, in a more eminent Sense, that Seed of the Woman that should bruise the Serpent's Head, and put an End to his Oppression.

And in his Time, indeed, the Distinction between the Seed of the Woman, as including the collective Body of faithful Men; and the Seed of the Serpent, as denoting the wicked, came to be further cleared up by the Experience of their different Manners.

The former were called Sons of God as retaining a stedfast Faith in his Promises; the other were the Sons and Daughters of Adam or of Men, who, having no Principle of spiritual Life, are denominated only from their fallen Ancestor. This Distinction is mentioned so early as the Birth of Enos, the Son of Seth; then began Men to call upon the Name of the Lord, or rather, after the Name of the Lord, that is, to distinguish themselves as his Children in Opposition to the irreligious Part of Mankind, who being reckoned for the Seed of the Serpent, are therefore termed, under the softest Character, the Children of Adam, or of Man, considered in his fallen State. The mention of this Distinction at the Birth of Enos, hath inclined some to think that the Sons of God were only of the Family of Seth. But since we read that Adam had other Sons and Daughters, there can be no Need of confining the Distinction strictly to those Families, Families, tho' they might be considered as the principal.

However it were, we find that in Process of Time, the Sons of God did so far decline that God destroyed them with a Deluge, when only the Family of Noah was preserved. The Name of Noah had been given him by his Father Lamech, in Token of that Consolation which was expected from him. This same, says he, shall comfort us concerning our Work and Toil of our Hands, because of the Ground which the Lord hath cursed. Here is a plain Reference to the divine Judgment denounced after the Fall; and therefore the Evils of which he complains, and in which he hopes for Comfort, may well be understood to intend those Evils consequent upon the Fall: From which even the pious Part of Mankind are not exempted.

The Curse upon the Ground was doubtless more considerable before Men had found out the Art of cultivating and manuring the Earth. But by the gradual Improvements in Husbandry, and Invention of Tools for that Purpose, this Toil was greatly mitigated in a natural Way. And it might be probably in this View, that Lamech promised himself Comfort from his Son Noah, who is called an Husbandman. Gen. ix. 20.

But since the Things of this Life are usually put, in the Books of Moses, to point out to another; and since the Dispensation of Noah is set forth in 1 Pet. iii. 19, 20. as a Type of the Gospel State, this Speech of Lamech may refer to something of a spiritual or religious Nature. And thus what he terms our Work, or Actions, that Work, in Respect of which he wanted Comfort, may well be paraphrased the Evil of our own doings. And then the Toil of our Hands may be well interpreted to denote the Fatigue and Miseries of this mortal Life. Among which, that is not the least which he proceeds to mention, mention, that the Earth is accursed for the Sake of Man, not only to be unfruitful without Pains, but to be, as it were, a Place of Exile from the divine Presence. The opposite Advantage which Lamech promised, was not the Removal of these Evils, but Consolation under them; such as arose from the Prospect of Pardon, and an Assurance of a better State, in Consequence of that Victory, at last to be obtained over the old Deceiver.

But how could Lamech ascribe these Blessings to Noah, this same shall comfort us, without supposing him that extraordinary Seed that was foretold? Why, he might mean to assign a farther Limitation of the Family of Noah, as the Line from whence that Seed should spring: And withal to point him out as a Type of that Seed, both as he was a Preacher of Righteousness and Repentance; and likewise as he was a Means of preserving a Remnant in the Ark, and doing many Things to figure out the spiritual Benefits, which we receive by Christ.

In his Time God destroyed the Earth for the Wickedness of Men. And as the blessed Seed had been limited to his Family, so now against the Distribution made of the Earth among his Sons, it seem'd proper to distinguish in which Line that Expectation should be kept up. This he has determin'd to the Line of Shem, Gen. ix. 26. tho' without excluding his Brethren from the Benefits of that Promise, provided they should continue in a State of Warfare with the Serpent and his Seed. Thus to Japheth, Gen. ix. 27. it is engaged not only that God should enlarge Japheth, but likewise that he should dwell in the Tents of Shem, which implies his partaking of the Privilege assured to his Brother in having the Lord for his God, and so being entitled to the Blessing of the same Promise, which was fulfilled when the Posterity of Japheth were grafted on the Stock of the Jews.

As for Ham, he is not expressly included in this new Promise; yet neither is he excluded from it; but when a Sentence of Malediction is denounced against his Son Canaan, Gen. ix. 25. it may be observed, that it reaches only Temporals, that he should be a Servant to his Brethren; whilst that Servitude itself might occasionally conduce to his spiritual Advantage. Indeed as his Crime may typify others of a grosser Kind, so might the Servitude, to which he was adjudged, figure out the wretched State of wicked Men, from that Conquest which the promised Seed of the Woman should obtain over the Serpent and his Seed. But in this View the Sentence is not personal, but belongs to the Children of the wicked one, who were meant to be pointed out, whilst the Persons both of Ham and Canaan with many of their Descendants might be saved from that extreme Malediction.

Thus far I have considered the several Expressions which have been preserved to us of pious Men before the Times of Abraham, which shew the Sense those Ancients had of the Damage of the Fall, and their Expectation of Deliverance from it by Means of him, who was first promised as the Seed of the Woman, and in Process of Time was limited to the Line of Seth, of Noah, and of Shem.

Nor is there any Thing from which this Religious Expectation may be more fairly argued, than the universal Practice of Sacrifice as an Atonement for Sin. For what Congruity is there in Nature or Reason, between slaying a Beast, and expiating the Sin of a Man?

So disproportioned an Effect must be owing to the Intervention of some positive Law; and since we find that God was pleased with the Oblation of such Sacrifices, Gen. iv. 4. we have Reason to conclude they were performed in Obedience to his own Appointment: and when duly performed had an expiatory Vertue, and made Atonement for Sin. As

As the Race of Men increased, we have Reason to believe that the Practice of Sacrificing prevailed among them, since by the Time of Noah, there was a known Distinction of Animals into clean, and unclean, which seems to have Reference to their Fitness or Unfitness for Sacrifices. As the whole Earth was over-spread of his Posterity, so was the traditional Use of Sacrifices universally preserved. Now what Ground can we imagine for this so universal a Tradition, less than divine Appointment, and that for a standing Memorial of the Covenant made upon the Fall, and a Type of the Benefit contained in it. Or if we could suppose it of human Invention, yet the divine Approbation of it would argue the same Reference to the divine Promise, and consequently its being thus far explained and understood from the Beginning.

Nor does it signify that this Practice of Sacrificing was retain'd by many Nations, who knew nothing of Man's Apostacy, nor of the typical Relation of such Sacrifice to the Redeemer. For the Practice of Sacrificing, as an outward Rite, could not easily be overlook'd. But the mystical Design of it was deliver'd in obscurer Terms, and less suited to the Taste of sensual Men, and then no Wonder, if they transmitted not to their Posterity the Reason of the Rites, which they retained.

Having consider'd the Notices which appear of the Messiah from the Fall of Man to the Vocation of Abraham; and having seen how the blessed Seed was gradually determined to the Line of Seth, of Noah, and of Shem. In a direct Line from him, we find Abraham, to whom again the Promise was made, with a Limitation to the Family of Isaac, as afterwards of Jacob, with a Limitation to his Son Judah, and so continued till upon the Erection of the Monarchy, the Royal Family was pointed out for the Birth of the Messiah, and David for his great Progenitor. This is the received Doctrine and Opinion of the Jews; and therefore it was highly expedient that some of the Evangelists should shew that Jesus did not want that necessary Qualification to the Messiahship.

With this View St. Matthew and St. Luke has each of them inserted the Genealogy of Christ; the one from Abraham to Christ, the other from Christ to Adam: There are indeed some difficulties in these Genealogies. And because some of them do plainly affect the Application of those Prophecies to our Saviour, which speak of the Messiah as coming of the Seed of Abraham, with a special Limitation to the Family of David: I will endeavour to clear up the Matter before I go on to consider further of the Prophecies themselves.

Since then the principal Promises of the Messiah were made to Abraham, who was the Founder of the Jewish Nation, and to David who was Head of the Royal Family, to whom those Promises were made, which respect the Messiah in his regal Character; it is no Wonder if St. Matthew chose to insert these two Names in the Title of his Genealogy. The Book of the Generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the Son of Abraham. Withal it may be noted, that their Sons, Isaac and Solomon, were eminent Types of the Messiah; the one being born against the Rules of Nature, and then intentionally sacrificed; the other in being exalted to a peaceable and ample Government, and magnificently building the material Temple, a Figure of the mystical. How significantly then is the Messiah reckon'd for the Son of Abraham and David? For the same Reason he is elsewhere described by the Name of David, because David was an eminent Type of him.

In the Genealogy itself there are two considerable Difficulties: One is concerning the Extraction of Joseph, the Husband of Mary, whom St. Matthew makes makes to be the Son of Jacob, and so deduces, by a lineal Succession from Abiud the Son of Zerobabel, whilst St. Luke makes him to be the Son of Heli, and so deduces him from Rhesa, another Son of Zerobabel.

The other is, concerning the Extraction of Salathiel the Father of Zerobabel, whom St. Matthew makes to be the Son of Jeconias, or Jeboiachin, and so deduces him from Solomon; whereas St. Luke represents Salathiel to be the Son of Neri, and so descended from Nathan another Son of David.

The Difficulty of both Questions is considerable. But the Difference between these two Pedigrees is owing to the different Methods in which they were deduced, and not to any Want of Truth in either of them. For, 1. The Jews allow'd that Jesus was of the Family of David; so that there was no Occasion to use Artifice to prove it. And, 2. Had the Evangelists design'd to falsify, they would have avoided all Variation in their Account.

These Considerations are of greater Weight to defend the Integrity of the Evangelist, and our Lord's Pedigree from David, than the Difference between them can be to overthrow it, even tho' we were not able to conjecture the Reason of such Difference.

But there have been offer'd two Schemes for the reconciling this Difference.

The first is of Julius Africanus, who supposes that the two Evangelists have drawn out the Pedigree of Joseph in two different Views, St. Matthew in the natural, St. Luke in the legal Method. It was provided by the Law of Moses, (Deut. xxv. 5.) that where a Person died without Issue, the Brother of the deceased should take his Widow to Wife, and the first-born upon such Marriage, should succeed in the Name of the Deceased; and where there was no Brother, this Right devolved to the nearest of Kin. Accordingly the Children issuing from such Marriage, might justly be referr'd to two different Fathers. By Nature they were the Children of the latter Husband, by Law they were the Children of the deceased.

But if it be thought with some others (vid. Grot. Annot. ad Luc. iii.) that St. Matthew observed the legal Line, and St. Luke the natural, still the same Scheme will account for the Differences between the two Evangelists, if we suppose, only in two Instances such substituted Marriages. Thus particularly King Jehoiachin, whom Jeremy pronounces childless, (Ch. xxii. 30.) is yet by St. Matthew said to have begotten Salathiel. Upon this Scheme then it is supposed, that Jeconiah or Jehoiachin leaving no Child, his Widow was married to that Neri that is mentioned by St. Luke as the Father of Salathiel. And so Salathiel might naturally be the Son of Neri, but legally the Son of Jeconiah. This Solution is liable to little Objection, except it should be thought harsh that two, so nearly related as to come within the Law of the Levirate, should not meet in some common Ancestor, at a Degree less remote than David.

Suppose then, (to avoid this Objection) that the Sentence pronounced against Jeconiah were not, write this Man childless, but—write him destitute, or stripped, or spoiled, and then it will be lawful for us to take Salathiel in St. Matthew's Account, and in the Chronicles (1 Chron. iii. 17.) to be the genuine Son of Jeconiah. Suppose again that Salathiel, and Zorobabel in the Pedigree drawn by St. Luke, and mentioned in the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, (see Kidder Demonsf. Part 2. c. 11.) to be different Persons, from that Salathiel and Zorobabel mentioned in St. Matthew, and in the Chronicles, then the two Difficulties are reduced to one, viz. how Joseph should be reckoned by one Evangelist the Son of Jacob, and so descended by the Line of Solomon: And yet by the other should be reckoned the Son of Heli, and so descended from David by the Line of Nathan.
and

And here it is that Africanus supposes Heli to have died without Issue, and then Jacob marrying his Widow, to have begotten Joseph, who was therefore naturally the Son of Jacob, but legally the Son of Heli. And to avoid the Difficulty of Persons so nearly related being derived through so long a Line of different Ancestors, he supposes Jacob and Heli to have been Brethren only by the Mother's side; but to have had different Fathers, the former in the Line of Solomon, the other in the Line of Nathan.

If this Scheme be admitted, the Evangelists are easily reconciled. But then there is this Objection will lie against them both, that they give us only the Descent of Joseph, not Jesus. For since Joseph was no more than his reputed Father, it may be thought to little purpose towards proving him to be of the Seed of David, to observe, that those Characters were fulfilled in Joseph who contributed nothing to his Nativity, whilst his Mother, (as might be suspected from their Silence) was of a different Extraction.

This some have Thought not material, because it was the Manner of the Jews to denominate the Family from the Male side only, so that the blessed Virgin, by being espoused to Joseph passed (as it were) into the Family of David, from whence her Son's Pedigree was deduced in right of her Husband. But though this might be sufficient to vindicate St. Matthew in deducing the Pedigree by Joseph when he wrote for the Use of the Jews, and in compliance with their Method; yet it cannot answer the ancient Prophecies concerning him to say that his reputed Father was so descended, unless his Mother had been so too.

It is therefore material to observe, that the Jews were careful to marry in their own Kindred; and there was a Law to oblige all such to it as were Heir-esses, as Mary is reported to have been; so that in describing the Pedigree of Joseph, the Family was shewn, of which she descended. (See Heb. viii. 14. Rom. i. 3.) And at the Taxing of Augustus, when every one went to be taxed in his own City, the Virgin went to Bethlehem together with Joseph to be taxed, and therefore must have been of the House of David. As for Elizabeth being called her Cousin, that is easily accounted for, in that the Tribe of Levi having no inheritance, and therefore being not subjected to the Law of Heiresses, did more frequently make Inter-Marriages with other Tribes; so that either by taking a Daughter of Judah, unto them, or giving a Daughter of theirs into Judah, there might a Relation between Mary and Elizabeth.

Having all this Reason to believe, that the blessed Virgin was of the House of David; I come now to offer a second Scheme of Reconciliation; and supposing, that as St. Matthew has given us a Pedigree of Joseph, into whose Family the blessed Virgin was received by Marriage, so that her Son in Construction of Law must be reputed his; so St. Luke might chuse to give us the Genealogy of Jesus by his Mother's Ancestors; that so from both Evangelists we might have a double Pedigree from David, the first from the Line of Solomon, the other by the Line of Nathan. In Confirmation of which, it may be observed, that Eli, or Heli, which was the Name of Joseph's Father in St. Luke, might probably be the Contraction of Eliakim; which being of the same Import is promiscuously used Jeboiakim or Joachim, which by Tradition is reported to have been the Name of the Virgin's Father. (Vid. Epiphan. Hær. 78. §. 17.) And it may seem no improbable Conjecture, that the Family of Nathan had been referred to by the Prophet Zachary, as the Line of the Messiah, when he describes the Inhabitants of Jerusalem as looking on him, whom they had pierced, and mourning ing for him every Family a-part. See Zech. xii. 10, 12. Where the House of Nathan seems on purpose to be added for a nearer Restriction of the Line of Christ, which joined with the foregoing Consideration, makes it likely that the Pedigree which is drawn through the Family of Nathan is no other than the Family of the blessed Virgin.

It is true the Virgin Mary is not mentioned in St. Luke, any more than in St. Matthew, because it was not usual to derive Pedigrees by Women ; but Heli, if her Father by Nature, might well be deemed the Father of Joseph, who was really become his Son in Law by Marriage. Thus there is no Difficulty in these Words, Jesus being, as was supposed, the Son of Joseph, which was the Son of Heli. Namely by this Marriage with his Daughter. It cannot be said indeed that this Phrase is used in any other Article of this Pedigree ; but then it is evident, that it is not used throughout in the same Acceptation : For when Adam is termed the Son of God, it must then at least be used in a different Sense from all the other Degrees of this Genealogy. And if we admit of this Variation in the last Article, I see not what can be objected to the Admission of another in the first.

By this Scheme indeed, Christ's Descent by his Mother was neither naturally nor legally derived from Solomon ; nor was it needful that it should. It was sufficient he came from the Loins of David. The Right of Succession to his Throne will be equally secured, if Joseph be supposed only the last in the Line of Solomon, and the blessed Virgin to be the Heiress of the Line of Nathan. Though I cannot say it was necessary that Right should devolve on him from the eldest Line ; for as Solomon was not himself the eldest Son of David, so I see nothing to hinder, but the Messiah also might be descended of a younger Line, especially since the temporal Kingdom was abolished and his Throne removed.

Having shewed, that Jesus was, as the Jews expected their Messiah to be, of the Seed of David, as well as of Abrabam; I may the better proceed to consider those Prophecies of the Messiah, which fall within the Compass of the second Period, namely, such as were subsequent to the Call of Abrabam.

The general Corruption of Mankind being not cured by the Flood, God thought fit to select a single Family, for the Preservation of his Worship, and for a nearer Limitation of that Line in which the blessed Seed should be expected, affording new and clearer Revelations of that Matter.

That Seed had already been determined to the Line of Shem; and among his Descendants we find Abraham singled out, to receive a Confirmation of the ancient Promise, and ascertain the Completion of it in some of his Posterity. And God in a peculiar Sense had engaged to be a God unto him, and to his Seed after him.

But we must not suppose that the Original Covenant with Mankind was meant to be vacated by this special Engagement with the Family of Abraham. All Nations were to have an Interest in the Benediction that was bestowed on him. In thee, and in thy Seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed.

From hence it is reasonable to collect that People of all Nations were to be grafted into his Family, in order to receive the Blessing which was promised him as Father of them all: And that whatever was specially engaged to his natural Posterity, had a typical Relation to the Days of the Messiah, and the Privileges of the Church to be gathered by him out of all Nations.

It has indeed been pretended that this Promise undertakes for nothing more than temporal Blessings; and such, as would induce all Nations to blefs themselves (as we say) by wishing for like Prosperity with the Seed of Abraham; or else to use it as a Form of Benc-

Benediction, when they wished well to other People that they might be as the Seed of Abraham. But if this had been all that was intended by so solemn a Promise and so many times repeated, and upon which such Stress is laid as the principal Part of the Covenant established with Isaac, it seems strange that Ismael, should be judged to stand excluded, who in respect of Matters merely temporal, seems to have received Promises but little inferior. Nay if we consider how many Years his Sons enjoyed a Settlement before the Israelites, there can be little Ground to understand this Blessing of temporal Acquisitions, and there could be little Comfort from such Interpretation to those Persons who had no hope to live so long a Period. But if they saw Christ promised for the Deliverer of Mankind this was matter of great Joy in all Ages of the World, and upon this Foot it was that Abraham himself rejoiced to see the Day of Christ, for he saw it and was glad.

This then was the material Difference between the Blessing of Isaac, and that of Ismael. In respect of Matters temporal, there was no great Inequality between them, except that the very temporal Blessings of Isaac were made Types of spiritual Blessings, whilst those of Ismael were referred only to worldly Views: from whence he came to represent those Persons in the Line of Isaac, or of Jacob, who rested only in external Promises without looking to the spiritual Meaning of such outward Privilege. The Case was plainly this: There were two Covenants with Abraham, or two Parts of the same Covenant, the temporal or spiritual. Both Parts were clearly conveyed to Isaac, but Ismael received but one. And as there were many in the Line of Isaac, who attended only to the temporal Part, and neglected the spiritual; these were still in a State of spiritual Bondage, and therefore fitly referred to the Treatment, and Covenant of the Bond Woman's Son. And so the Apostle has explained this Matter, that Abraham had two Sons, whose different Estate figure out the different Hopes and Dispositions of Men, who looked to be saved either by Faith in the Messiah, or by ritual Services. These two Sons were, one of a bond Woman, the other of a free Woman, to denote on one Hand the Servitude of those, who are guided only by temporal Motives, and look to be accepted for ritual Services; and on the other Hand, the generous Liberty of those, whose Hearts are purified by Faith, and taught the Duties of an inward and spiritual Obedience. And to shew that the Son of the Bond-Maid did represent those who rested in the Sinaitical Covenant when literally taken, and without a typical View to the Messiah, she had the Name of Hagar, which Word signifies a Rock, and is from thence made the Name of a City built upon rocky Mountains, which is otherwise called Sinai. From which Allusion of the Name, it was easy to consider her as a Type of the Old Testament or the literal and external Precepts deliver'd from Mount Sinai, while the Son of Scrab denotes those who walked by Faith and could see the spiritual Meaning of the Law.
Apostle

But what, it may be asked, was not the Sinaitical Covenant dispensed to the Descendants of the Line of Isaac? Yes certainly. But then, as there were two Parts to be considered in those Promises and Precepts, viz. the external Matter, and the internal Design, so there were two Sorts of People, whose Views were different, in Proportion as they attended more to the one, or to the other.

The Land of Canaan was figurative of a better Country, that is, an heavenly, in Prospect of which the Patriarchs were supported through a Life of Travel. The Promise had been made to Abraham in Person as well as his Posterity. (Gen. xiii. 15.) And yet he had no Dominion of his own. How then was this Promise made good to him? Why, besides the literal Possession of that Tract of Ground, which his Family possessed in due Time, it had moreover a typical Respect to that Recompence of Reward which the Gospel proposes to the Faithful. So again, long Life in that Land of Promise was typical of the everlasting Life which is proposed to those who are sanctified by Jesus Christ. Thus the City of Jerusalem with its legal Privileges and ritual Worship did set forth the spiritual Privileges of the Christian Church, whether in its present State of Grace, or in its future State of Glory.
 literal

The whole Nation of the Hebrews did figure out the collective Body of Christians; and those Nations that were at Variance with them denote the Enemies of the Christian Religion. From hence it often comes to pass that those Prophecies which literally refer to the Nation of the Hebrews, have yet such Characters intermixed, as typify the future State of the Church; and the Judgments denounced against the Enemies figure out that heavier Judgment of the last Day.

This will appear the more remarkable when it is remembered that the Church at first to be gathered from among the Gentiles (Deut. xxxii. 21.) was only to succeed in the room of unbelieving Jews; that God might have still a peculiar People in order to provoke them to Jealousy, and induce them to return to him, that all at last might be united in one common Faith and Hope of Salvation. In this State of the Case, the Church of the Gentiles being thus considered as substituted in the Place of the Jews, it is natural to conceive that the Predictions, which respect this State of Things, should often make mention of the Gentiles so called, and so incorporated under the Title of the Sons of Abraham, and describe their Privileges by those of that peculiar People in whose Place they stand.

And as the Blessing of the Messiah was plainly the principal Thing contained in the Promise made to Abraham; so from hence it may appear, that even the temporal Privileges annexed to it, had a typical View to this grand Blessing, and were meant to betoken something of a higher Nature, to be conferr'd in virtue of the everlasting Covenant. In proportion to these Views, there were two Sorts of People observable in that Nation, the one carnal or literal, who looked for the external Promises; the other faithful or spiritual, who looked forward to the spiritual Blessings stipulated for in Christ. Of both Sorts we have a Type in Ismael and Isaac.

Nor is it therefore without Mystery, that the Scripture has recorded the Expulsion of Ismael as not admitted to partake of the same Privileges with Isaac. It might have seem'd perhaps a Piece of Female Forwardness in Sarah to insist on such Expulsion. (Gen. xxi. 10.) Accordingly Abraham seems to have repented it. (Ver. 11.) But when we consider that the Matter met with divine Approbation (Ver. 12.) there will be reason to ascribe this Dispensation to a higher Cause, as mystically denoting the Worthlessness of mere ritual Services, and the Acceptance only of the Children of the Promise.

From all this we see that mere fleshly Extraction is not enough to entitle to the full Privilege of Sons of Abraham; that many who were sprung from him according to the Flesh, were yet Strangers to the spiritual Privileges of his Children; and that on the other Hand such as were received into the Church and imitated that Patriarch's Faith, of what Race soever they descended, were mystically united in Christ, who sprang lineally from him, and so to all spiritual Intents the Sons of Abraham. Of this the Jews themselves could not be insensible, when they admitted the Faithful from amongst the Gentiles as Profelytes, and received them as into one Body with themselves, by their initiatory Rite of Circumcision. But forasmuch as Abraham was accepted before Circumcision;

cumcision, and received it only as the Seal of his Justification, through the Faith he had before, they ought to have collected farther, that that Ordinance had no natural Virtue in itself, but God might admit the Members of his Church without it; that therefore when the Messiah should appear, this Difference should no longer be made between the Jew, and the Greek, but all Nations should be admitted upon easier Terms.

It was thus that the Blessing of Abraham was to come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ. (See Gal. iii. 7, 8, 9.) And this is likewise implied in that other Promise made to that Patriarch, that he should be a Father of many Nations, viz. not only by Descent but Principle. For if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's Seed, that is, if ye be engrafted mystical Members of Christ's Body, then are ye through him reputed also for the Seed of Abraham, that spiritual Seed to which the Blessing is ensured, and therefore Heirs according to the Promise.

Thus we see how the New Testament was involved under the Old, and the same Scheme of Salvation has been regularly pursued through all Ages of the World. The Letter of external Privileges might belong to the natural Posterity of Abraham, but the mystical Meaning of them was no other than the Gospel itself, which extends its Benefits to all Nations, and unites them into one Body as the spiritual Sons of Abraham. And thus the Apostle declares him to be the Father of us all. (See Rom. iv. 16. xi. 12. ii. 28.)

And thus may be explained these Words: To Abraham and his Seed were the Promises made: He saith not, and to Seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy Seed, which is Christ. Though Seed may be a Name of a Multitude, yet they are in some View or other collected into Unity, and referred to one Head. But Abraham having two Kinds of Seeds, the Promises Promises could not be to both in the same Meaning ; because Abraham had two Sons, that in one of them his Seed was to be called, and not in the other. His natural Posterity by Isaac was typified in Ismael, and as such, entitled only to the literal Matter of the Promises. But the spiritual Meaning belonged to the spiritual Seed, of which Isaac was himself a Type. And that Seed, says the Apostle, is Christ, viz. Christ principally, but withal considered as Head of that mystical Society, in which the Faithful of all Nations were gathered into one, reputed as Members of this mystical Body, and reckoned for that one Seed of Abraham, to which the Promises were made.

So were all Nations to be blessed in Abraham, and in his Seed ; God's faithful People, of whatever Extraction, were to be spiritually united with Christ, and so grafted on the Stock of Abraham, that Stock in which his Seed was to be called, that the Blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ, and that they might be entitled to claim under him as Father of the Faithful. So that the Seed of Abraham is a Phrase of like Import with the Seed of the Woman formerly explained ; and as Adam is set forth for the Representation of Mankind, considered in their fallen Estate, so is Abraham as the common Father of all those that are restored ; though not by natural Descent, yet by vertue of their spiritual Union with Christ his Son.

How instructive is this View of the ancient Covenant, which makes Christ the Center of spiritual Blessings, and the outward Letter of temporal Advantages to contain an inward Meaning of much higher Concern ! The New Testament, indeed, as distinguished from the Old, is said to be a better Covenant and established upon better Promises. But then the Law or Old Testament is taken only for the Letter, in which the Jews were too apt to acquiesce ; otherwise, if we take in the spiritual Design of it, it differed nothing from from the Gospel itself, but only in the Manner and Circumstance of its Delivery. The Gospel does only more explicitly unfold what the Old Testament had involved in greater Obscurity. Christ's abolishing Death is mentioned as the Ground of Life and Immortality: And what is that but the same Conquest of the Serpent which had been promised from the Beginning; the same Reparation of the Damages done by Man's Apostacy.

The Blessing of Abraham which had been assured to Isaac, (Gen. xxiv. 4.) was in the next Generation bequeathed to his Son Jacob; (xxviii. 4.) and with him God renewed the same Covenant. (xxviii. 14.) And though Esau had likewise the Promises of many temporal Advantages, (xxviii. 39, 40.) yet the Superiority was to Jacob. (xxv. 23.) Which Superiority was aptly figurative of those spiritual Privileges which are conferred as the Blessing of the promised Seed. This is what the Scripture terms the loving Jacob and hating Esau, because it figured out the Distinction God is pleased to make between those who continue in their fallen Estate, and those, who by vertue of their Union with Christ, do become the spiritual Sons of Abraham, and are entitled to the Promise of Redemption.

Not that either Esau or any of his Sons were absolutely excluded from the Benefit of that Promise.

For whilst God's not receiving them for his own People did forefnew the lost Estate of those, who are without the Covenant, they might nevertheless by Faith in that divine Promise, which extended to all Nations, be mystically incorporated in Christ Jesus and reputed for the spiritual Seed. There are indeed Flaws in the Character of Esau, but the Scripture lays the greatest Stress on that of selling his Birth-right, (Heb. xii. 16, 17.) as slighting the Honour of the ancient Priesthood, or the Blessing of Abram, which how far soever it might be blameable in these respects, respects, is yet chiefly censured under a typical Respect, namely, as it represents their Sin and Folly, who for the Sake of present Satisfactions, do give up their Title to the Privileges of the heavenly Inheritance.

In the next Descent all the Sons of Jacob were alike within the Covenant and received for God's peculiar People. Their Increase after this was such, that they soon grew considerable enough to be reputed a distinct Nation, and then their typical Relation to the Christian Church is more natural, as they figured out that mystical Body, which is collected out of all Nations, and spiritually incorporated in Christ Jesus.

Their Division into Tribes made them the fitter Emblem of that Variety of Nations, of which the Church should consist. And it was no doubt in View of this typical Relation of the Tribes of Israel that our Saviour promised his Apostles, that they should sit upon twelve Thrones, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel, that is, the faithful Members of his Church prefigured by them.

In this typical Relation did God declare Israel to be his Son even his first-born. (Exod. iv. 22.) And when they were oppressed in Egypt, they were wonderfully delivered from thence by the Interposition of divine Providence conducting them into Canaan, to which Hosea refers in these Words. When Israel was a Child, then I loved him, and called my Son out of Egypt. In both Respects they figured out that mystical Society of which Christ is the Head, considered either as struggling under Hardships, or triumphing over them. And as this may be applicable, either to Christ, who is the Head, or to the Church which is his Body, it can be no Wonder, if the Evangelist reckons it to be fulfilled in the Infancy of Christ, when after having fled into Egypt from the Rage of Herod, he was restored to Canaan upon the Removal of so great a Danger. The

The twelve Sons of Jacob being alike within the Covenant, they were all entitled to the Blessing. But because that included many Particulars, which could not be all engrossed by every one, it remained that a proper Partition should be made among them; and with this View Jacob undertakes to impart his Benediction to his Sons. (Ecclus. xliv. 21, 22, 23.)

In this Partition it was necessary that the actual Descent of the Messiah should be limited to one. Which accordingly fell to Judab. See Gen. xlix. 8, 10.

By Shiloh in this Prophecy, the Messiah has been usually understood among Jews both modern and ancient. In the Book of Chronicles. 1 Chro. v. 1, 2. upon mentioning the Sons of Reuben the first-born of Israel, it is remarked that the the Birthright was given away for his Offence; so that the Genealogy is not to be reckoned after the Birthright. For Judab, (it is added) prevailed above his Brethren, and of him is the Nagid, the Prince, or chief Ruler, but the Birthright was Joseph's. The Nagid is a Term which Isaiab (ch. lv. 4.) and Daniel, (ch. ix. 25, 26.) apply to the Messiah. And as the Author of the Book of Chronicles wrote after them both, there is little Doubt but he had an Eye to the same Person, who he calls the Nagid as coming of the Tribe of Judab.

But whence had he this Knowledge of his being to descend of that Tribe? you will say, perhaps, because he was to be of the Family of David. But then I demand why this should be mentioned as an immediate Consequence of the disinheriting of Reuben? The Purport of that Remark leads us back to Gen. xlix. 4. where the Reason assigned for his being disinherited was, because he defiled his Father's Bed. And in Proportion to the two great civil Privileges of the first-born, we find that a double Share of Possession was given to the Sons of Joseph. Gen. xlviii. 5. but the Superiority of Government was reserved to the Tribe of Judab. Gen. xlix. 8. before whom his Father's Children should bow down, (which the Author of the Book of Chronicles explains by his prevailing above his Brethren) and of whom Shilob, (whom the same Author calls the Nagid) was to come. From hence we see how this Prophecy was understood from the Time of the Babylonish Captivity. And before that we find a constant Preference given to the Tribe of Judab, which should seem to be owing to this Expectation of the promised Deliverer. In the Journeyings of the Israelites in the Wilderness the Standard of the Camp of the Children of Judah went first. Numb. x. 14. And in their Dedication of the Altar, Nabshon, who was Prince of this Tribe, was the first to make his Offering. Numb. vii. 12. in their Wars. Judg. i. 2. this Tribe was appointed by God to go first against their Enemies. Nay, even when Saul was King, who was of the Tribe of Benjamin, the Members of the Men of Judab were taken separately from those of the Body of the People, that we may the less wonder in the Reign of David to find the Men of Judab distinguished from the Men of Israel. David was a King of God's own Appointment, of the Tribe of Judab, in whom, and in the Continuance of the Kingdom in his Family, he meant to figure out the everlasting Reign and Kingdom of the Messiah. And when the Kingdom was divided, the Tribe of Judab only is mentioned, as adhering to the House of David, from whence this Shilob was expected.

What was the particular Privilege here assured to Judab has been much disputed. But thus much I think is evident, that here is promised a Continuation tion of the Tribe of Judah, as a Body politic, until the Coming of Shiloh.

That this was so understood appears from, Isai. viii. When Abaz apprehended an utter Dissolution of his Government, by the Kings of Syria and Israel, the Prophet was sent to tell him, that both his Enemies should be quickly removed, which accordingly was fulfilled. The Kingdom of Syria was overthrown by Tiglathpileser, and Pekab was slain by Hoshea; and finally that Ephraim, or Israel should within sixty five Years be no more a People. And as a Sign of this he proposes the Messiah's Birth of a Virgin, which was not accomplished till more than seven hundred Years after the Prediction. If it be asked how could that be a Sign of an immediate Deliverance? I answer, his Birth was necessary before the Dissolution of all Government in Judea; and therefore the present Designs of their Enemies must fail, at what Distance soever his Birth might be future at that Time. The Tribe of Judah must be preserved till Shiloh came, whatever became of the other Tribes. And how then should the King of the ten Tribes pretend to enlarge his Dominion by dissolving Judah? For this Reason the Prophet requires Faith, in those who should see the Proof of his Prediction. (Isa. vii. 9.) Had the Sign he gave been any present Miracle, no great Degree of Faith could have been requisite. But because it was future and received only upon the Credit of a prime Article of their Religion, therefore their believing was indispensably required, to give them Assurance. And tho' in Punishment of the present Despondency, he threatens that the King of Assyria should afterwards prevail against them, (Isa. vii. 17, 20.) yet at the same Time he calls their Land the Land of Immanuel (viii. 7, 8.)

and thereby teaches that it should not be finally destroyed before his Nativity.

This Expectation founded on a Promise that they were to continue, which the other Tribes had not, made the Jeros treat Jeremiah, who prophesied of their Captivity, as an Enemy to the Government (Jer. xxxviii. 4.)

And this Objection the Prophets seem to guard against by exprefs Promises of Restoration. (See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21. Isa. xlv. 28. and xlv. 1. Jer. xxix. 10. xxxii. 9. 15.) Their Genealogies were preserved and the Gift of Prophecy continued to assure them of Deliverance. So that though God might make a full End of other Nations, Jer. xxx. 11. Yet would he not make a full End of them. Jer. xlvi. 28. but having corrected them in Measure would be sure to perform his good Word towards them, in causing them to return, and giving them an expected End. Jer. xxix. 10, 11. The Meaning of which is, that their external Policy should not utterly be dissolved, till that promised Restorer should appear; but the Continuation of some external Form of Government was necessary in the mean Time. And upon what can that Necessity be so rationally founded, as on this Prophecy of Jacob, which assures the Scepter and Lawgiver to Judah till Shiloh shall appear? It may be added that even during their Captivity they seem to have some Sort of Government, and to have had Justice administered according to the Law by Judges and Elders of their own. (See Bishop Sherlock's third Dissertation. p. 329.)

The last Words of the Verse, — And to him shall the gathering of the People be, have been differently referred either to Judah, who received the Blessing, or to Shiloh, who was the principal Part of the Blessing itself. They who take it in the former Acceptation, explain this gathering of the People,

People, to denote the resorting of some Persons out of all the Tribes to Judah, so as to be included in one Body with it. (See Sherlock's third Dissertation, p. 321, &c.) And this began to be the Case at the Time of the Defection of the ten Tribes, when there was a Remnant out of all the Tribes of Israel, (1 Kings xii. 39.) adhering to the House of David; but appeared more eminently after the Captivity, when the People of all the Tribes were incorporated into one Nation of the Jews. But if we look on this Prediction as conveying that Part of the Blessing of Abraham, which contains the promised Seed, there will be better Reason for interpreting that last Clause of it in the other Acceptation. The Blessing of Abram's Seed had been promised to extend to all Nations of the Earth. And so here Jacob foretels the gathering of the People or nations unto that Seed in Order to receive their Blessing. And this suits better with the Mind of the Seventy, that he should be the Expectation of the Gentiles, or Nations, which cannot well be applied to the Tribe of Judah, but seems clearly to refer to those Characters of the Messiah, Isaiab ii. 2. xlii. 4. lx. 5. And because this gathering was understood to be an Act of Submission agreeably to the Predictions of after Times of the universal Reign and Empire of the Messiah. Or if by the People we should understand those of the twelve Tribes of Israel, as they were literally gathered into one Kingdom, against the coming of the Messiah; so they have been shewn in their typical Capacity, to represent the Church of Christ gathered out of all Nations; which still gives us the same View of this Prediction, as conveying in its full Extent, the Promise which was made to Abraham.

Thus far the Spirit of Prophecy had gone in fixing the Line of that blessed Seed. There were still many Points relating to his Office and Character, which remained to be gradually cleared up in future Times. And this was to be done partly under Types and Figures, and partly by exprefs Predictions. For as it is not agreeable to the Method of divine Revelation to open every Thing at once; so neither was it necessary that the Revelations should appear in their own Latitude to every inattentive Auditor, at the Time of their Delivery: It was enough that they who meditated on the Scriptures were able to derive some glimmering Light from them, till their final Accomplishment should fix their Interpretation, and display the Harmony of the whole Oeconomy.

As then the Seed of Abraham according to the Flesh, did figure out his spiritual Seed to be gathered out of all Nations; so it is reasonable to believe that God's external Dispensations of Favour towards them should be intended to foreshew his future Dispensations of Mercy manifested to his Church. Their Slavery in Egypt did fitly figure out the spiritual Bondage into which Mankind are sunk by their Apostacy; and their Deliverance from it, was a Type of that Redemption which was expected from the promised Seed. The Paschal Sacrifice foreshewed the Method of effecting Redemption by the Sacrifice and Death of Christ. And tho' the whole Analogy of that ritual Service might not appear with all that Beauty, as it does since the Accomplishment, yet no doubt but holy Men saw through it some Glimmerings of the Gospel Light, and understood it to point yet more directly to the same End with other Sacrifices. The like is to be said of that Body of Mosaic Precepts which was shortly after delivered from Mount Sinai, they were generally intended as preparatory to the Gospel Revelation, and prefigurative of the Privileges designed to be conferred upon it. Thus the Tabernacle itself, and all its Utensils, &c. are understood to be Shadows of good Things to come. The singular Exactness with which God was pleased to prescribe these Matters to Moses, even in the minutest Circumstances, and his raising up of inspired Men to perform the Workmanship on that Occasion, affords a very strong Presumption, that those outward Services had some higher End in View, than what appeared from the bare Letter of the Institution. Their Unaptness of themselves for any spiritual Efficacy is moreover a substantial Argument, that they who used them were not to rest in the Letter.

These were such Reasonings as might be obvious to considering Men before the Coming of Christ. But if nothing deeper than the Surface, what Need had David of such constant Exercise in this divine Law, as to study and meditate in it Day and Night? When he prayed to have his Eyes opened, that he might behold wondrous Things out of that Law, can it be imagined, that he was not sensible of some mystical Meaning that lay concealed under the Letter? It is not pretended that he saw the whole of that stupendous Oeconomy, which is involved in the Types of the Old Testament, but he saw enough for the Support of his Faith, and to make him eagerly desirous of searching deeper. (See to this Purpose, Mat. xiii. 17. Luke x. 24. 1 Pet. i. 10, 11.)

The Israelites as separate from all other People, were observed to represent the Christian Church gathered out of all Nations to receive the Benefit of the promised Redemption, as distinguished from those that should reject it. From hence it is natural to expect that the Law, which was given to them in this typical Relation, should refer to something of a higher Concern in the future Dispensation ; and that consequently, when such typical Relation ceased, and the spiritual Israel succeeded in their Room, then the external Use of those Ordinances having reached its End, could be no longer necessary ; which indeed were many of them of such Kind, as shewed them to be only calculated for the Tract of Canaan, and could not be observed throughout the whole World.

In this View the Law was a standing Prophecy of Christ. But as I design to treat more at large of this Matter by and by, I will here drop it ; and consider one or two Predictions of Christ during this Time of their Journey in the Wilderness.

One is that remarkable one of Moses, Deut. xviii. 15. The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet, from the midst of thee, of thy Brethren, like unto me, unto him ye shall hearken,

Some have thought that this Prediction relates to a Succession of Prophets to arise among the Jews, tho' it may be more eminently applicable to the Messiah, as greater than the rest. But if it be not singly understood of him, I doubt it would be difficult to convince a Jew, of the Necessity of such eminent Application. Let it then be our Enquiry, what Ground there may be for such Interpretation ; and whether that, or ours, does most naturally flow from a View of the Passage in Dispute.

What gave Colour to this Conceit, is the Prohibition contained in the next preceding Paragraph of consulting Wizards and Diviners ; in lieu of which it is supposed God would raise up an Order of Prophets, who should suffice to answer all their Exigencies. Whereas it is thought that this Connection would be lost, if God promised only one Prophet, which could be no Remedy against their resorting to Sorcerers.

This Notion has been espoused by the Author of the Grounds and Reasons, pag. 28, 29. who asserts that the ancient Prophets were an Order of Men merely answerable to the Heathen Diviners, whose Business was to get a Livelihood either in Money or Victuals, by telling Fortunes and helping People to lost Goods.

In answer to this Interpretation there does not appear to have been any constant and uninterrupted Succession of Prophets constituted among the Jews, but they were an Order of Men, extraordinarily raised up, as God saw fit. Therefore if one future Prophet could not answer the Design of this Prediction, neither could that Succession of Prophets, which was not continued without Intermiſſions.

In the next Place, by whom was this Author taught, that there was such an exact Analogy between the Jewish Prophets and Heathen Diviners? We have nothing like it during the Life of Moses, and from him to Samuel there is no Instance pretended. (See Bullock's Argument for Prophecy, p. 234, 240.) What is afterwards delivered, concerns usually the public State of the Kingdom, which God was engaged by Covenant to support, or the Morals or Religion of the People. And if there be two or three Examples of Matters of private Concern, as in the Case of Saul's Asses (1 Sam. ix. 20.) the Recovery of Jeroboam's Son, (1 Kings xiv. 5. 12.) and of Abaziab and Benhadad, (2 Kings i. 4, 16. viii. 10.) yet they plainly had a View to others which were more important.

The Ground then of that profane Sneer was this, that he might vindicate the Supposition of this Paragraph's being connected with the preceding, by feigning such a Set of Prophets as were fit to stand in the Place of Heathen Diviners. So that his Argument turns plainly in a Circle: This Text must foretell

foretell a Succession of Jewish Prophets, because it is connected with the general Prohibition of consulting Diviners; and those Jewish Prophets must be no better than Fortune-tellers, because if they were, there will appear to be no Ground for such Connection.

But this Promise of a Prophet has no Relation to the Prohibition of consulting Diviners. There is no Connection in the Text to join them. But as the Paragraph concerning Wizards is not itself connected with that which goes before it, concerning the Portion of the Priests and Levites; so for any Thing he offers, we are at Liberty to suppose, that neither has this Paragraph, of the Prophet like unto Moses, any Connection with the foregoing; and then his whole Reasoning is lost, the Passage will have an absolute Sense, and remain to be interpreted from the Phrase and Import of the Text itself.

However, in Regard Moses makes use of the same Form of Speech in recommending this Prophet as he had done just before in disallowing their Diviners, in that the Nations are blamed for hearkening unto them, whereas the Jews are required to hearken unto their Prophet, I admit some Sort of Opposition to be intended. But then it is to be consider'd, that the telling private Fortunes and discovering lost Goods was not the only Office of these Diviners; their principal Office was to acquaint the People with the Will of the Deities, and to prescribe the Rites and Offices of their Religion. [See verse 10.] And therefore it was natural when Moses was cautioning the People against them, and forbidding them to live among the Jews, to add that they should rest satisfied with the Precepts he deliver'd till a Prophet like him should arise to give them to new Directions, to whom they were to hearken. But either way the Phrase of the Text

Text is not fairly applicable to a Succession of Prophets, but to One only.

There is mention of a Prophet in the singular, to arise of Jewish Extraction, a Prophet from among their Brethren: The Force of which Argument seems well to be understood by those Jews, who have supposed Joshua or Jeremy to be here intended. And tho' this Description does not certainly point out the very Person intended, but contains a Character common to many of their Prophets, yet it does in its literal Meaning, so evidently belong to some one of the Number, that one would wonder to see those, who profess such Adherence to the literal Sense, desert it in this Instance, for the sake of understanding a Succession of Prophets, which is not literally mentioned, and cannot, without Violence, be supported without a Figure.

For the better Distinction of that Prophet, there is this Note, that he should be like unto Moses. But there were none of the whole Succession of Prophets in the Old Testament like unto Moses, Deut. xxxiv. 11, 12. Num. xii. 6, 7, 8. The Prophet therefore like unto Moses, must be one, who was superior to all them, one who equalled at least Moses, in the Frequency and Freedom of his Intercourse with God, in the Greatness of that Salvation and Deliverance wrought by him in the Promulgation of the Law, for the Government of this chosen People, and in the Number and Nature of those Miracles, which gave Testimony to his Mission. So that this Character does not only restrain the Prediction of Moses to some single Prophet, but to him who was the greatest of all the Prophets, even to that blessed Seed which had been promised from the Beginning. Which Answer at the same Time defeats those Jewish Expositions that would make this Character explanatory of the former, former, that the Prophet should be of their Brethren as Moses was, [See Meinbart. in Dissert. ad Loc. cap. 1. 11. Another Character which God inserts in this Prediction of a future Prophet, is this: And I will put my Words in his Mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. If we view this Character in Connexion with those that went before of one certain Prophet, in the singular, and eminently resembling Moses, there is Reason to conclude that it refers in this Place to his Delivery of a new Law. Now to which of the Prophets between Moses and our blessed Saviour could this Character be fairly applied? Their Business was to explain and inculcate the Law of Moses. But it was singularly foretold as the Office of the Messiah, Jer. xxxi. 31. to prescribe them a new Law or Covenant, not according to the Covenant made with their Fathers, which was not calculated only for a single Nation, but such as should extend to all Nations. [Isa. xlii. 4. li. 4, 5.]

I know some Christian Divines are unwilling to speak of Christ under the Title of a Law-giver. But I hope we may have Leave to use it as the Scripture has done, and make it the Ground of Comparison between Christ and Moses.

Moses had often spoken to the Israelites in the Name of God. But when the Law was delivered God spake with tremendous Pomp, Exod. xx. 18. This struck such Terror into the People that they stood afar off, they wanted to have one speak to them in their own Form and Nature. They said therefore unto Moses, speak thou with us and we will hear, but let not God speak with us, lest we dye. To which God was pleased to declare, that he would deal with them in Time to come, according to their Request; he would no more issue out his Laws with such Terror, but put his Words into the Mouth of a Prophet

a Prophet who should be like unto Moses, in Nature and Office, and deliver his Precepts in the tenderest Manner. Agreeably to which the Apostle states the Difference between the Methods of delivering the Law and the Gospel. [See Heb. xii. 18, &c.] From all which we have Reason to conclude, that the Words put into the Mouth of this Prophet, were to be the Words of the new Law, which should differ from the old One in the Circumstance of its Delivery. And this can agree to nothing else but the Law of the Messiah.

Against this it is suggested, that the Israelites having then no Expectation of a new Law, their Desire in this Place could relate only to Prophets raised up under the old One. And if God's Answer implies a Condescension to their Request, it must be understood with the same Restriction. I answer, whether they expected any new Law, or not, they could not tell, but God might give them one. Again, their Desire, tho' not determined precisely to the Delivery of a new Law, yet plainly reach'd to it, that God would on the greatest Occasions, as well as in smaller, speak to them by the Ministry of Moses. To which God answers, that he would hereafter raise up one like Moses, to deliver his Words. [See Isaiab lxi. 1, 2. John iv. 25.]

Lastly, 'tis added ---- Whosoever will not hearken unto my Words, which that Prophet shall speak in my Name, I will require it of him. Now tho' Disobedience to God's Messages by any of his Prophets would be highly criminal, yet since there is no other of whom it is thus singularly foretold, we have Grounds to argue that this must be the greatest of all the Prophets, and consequently the Messiah. No ordinary Chastisement is designed by this Expression, but the inflicting of direful Vengeance. And this was so remarkably fulfilled on the Nation of the Jews, from the Age in which Jesus was crucified among them, that the Application makes itself.

Such is the Description of the Prophet like to Moses, and such the Danger of neglecting to obey him. But lest vain Men should arrogate to themselves such a Commission, a Sentence of Excision is subjoin'd. [See Deut. xviii. 20.] And the People are ordered (ver. 22.) to look to the Sign which should be given in Proof of such Commission.

From hence some have objected, that the Prophet like Moses could not be the Character of a single Person, because the Rule laid down for trying his Credentials is levell'd against Pretenders to Prophecy in all Ages. And the Penalty prescribed for the false Prophet must be calculated with a general View, and could never be design'd for Jesus nor have any Relation to him.

Therefore it is argued, the Prophet here must mean the Succession of Prophets in future Times; and here was a Criterion given at all Times to distinguish between the true and false. But there is no Consequence in this Reasoning, because the Rule given plainly was not meant to attest the Mission of the true Prophet, but to detect the Imposture of a false One. And therefore tho' Jesus, who was the true Prophet, could not be concerned in the Penalty of Imposture; yet it might be of use to detect and punish all Impostures, that no one might pass for the true Prophet before he really came. It was not necessary, that all Prophets should produce Signs in Proof of their Mission, but only when their Message was extraordinary; and consequently this could be no general Trial of Prophets in all Ages. But since the Messiah was expected to work great Miracles, and others, besides the true one, might assume the Character, this would be a proper Trial

Trial of their several Claims; and it was therefore very natural, even after this Notice of a single Prophet, to caution the People against bold Pretenders, and prescribe some Rule for detecting them.

Upon the whole, the Argument from this Prophecy is conclusive, and when it was urged by St. Peter and St. Stephen, the Jews had no Objection against it, which they would not have wanted, had the Description been understood to belong to the whole Order of Prophets, or could fairly be applied to Josbua or Jeremy.

Having thus stated the Prediction of a Prophet like unto Moses, and justified the Application of it singly to Christ, I will next consider that Part of Balaam's Prophecy, which I take to contain the more immediate Character of Christ. There shall come a Star out of Jacob and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the Corners of Moab, and destroy all the Children of Sheth.

That these Words relate to some eminent Person to arise among the Jews, may be gathered from the Preface introducing them. I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh. And then it must be the same Person, who is described by the other Prophets under the same Character of Light and Glory, and as holding the Sceptre and Reins of Government. This also both the ancient and modern Jews allowed, and acknowledged the Messiah to be clearly pointed out in some of the Phrases of this Text.

The Corner of a Place in Scripture usually signifies the Part of greatest Strength and Ornament; and therefore by the Corners of Moab, the Seventy have understood the Princes of that Country.

But then as the People of Israel nationally consider'd did typify the spiritual Israel of God, that Church which was to be gather'd out of all Nations;

so here the Moabites, as they were the Enemies of that People, must in Proportion be understood to prefigure all those Enemies of the Church of Christ, who refuse to submit to his Authority.

By the Children of Sheth has been explained the whole Race of Mankind. But then there is this Difficulty to be accounted for, in what Sense the Messiah is said to destroy all the Children of Sheth, and how this can be consistent with the End of his Office, which is to save and redeem. But there are two Things to be offer'd for our Satisfaction. 1. That the Word here render'd to destroy, does also signify to rule; or else, 2. That the Destruction here threatened should reach no further than to secure their Subjection to him; spoiling on the one Hand, as well the Principalities and Powers of Darknes, as all those among the Sons of Men, who are confederate with them.

It has been thought by some, that this Prediction was fulfilled in David, who might fitly be represented under the Figure of a Star, and a Scepter, as his Reign was victorious, and his Conquests extended over the Land of Moab. But since the Prophet Jeremy alludes to it, Chap. xlvi. 45. as a Matter still future in his Time, 'tis necessary to suppose it had some farther View, than any Thing which had happened long before in the Time of David. And if moreover in considering the Prophecies of after-Times, it shall appear that these Characters are usually applied to one, who should arise in later Ages of the Family of David; and that David himself, the Man chosen of God after his own Heart, did eminently figure out that glorious Successor, it will at least be necessary to refer it to him in a typical View, as the Person whose Kingdom was figur'd out by that of David. And if the latter clause be understood rightly of his destroying or ruling

ruling over all the Children of Men, it will be impossible to apply that Part of the Character to David in his own Person, it will be necessary to explain it of that Son of David, whose Kingdom ruleth over all; and has brought in the believing Gentiles into one common Enclosure with believing Jews.

These Reflections naturally lead me to take a View of those Promises of the Messiah which concern his regal Character, which relate to that last Limitation of the Line from which he should descend, and propose him as the Son and Successor of David.

Though the whole Succession of Kings in the Family of David, was meant to figure out the spiritual Empire of Christ over his Church; yet was it more eminently typified in the Reign of David and Solomon. In their Time the People of Israel were united in one Body, and had but one King to rule over them, which did more appositely fall in with the prophetic Descriptions of the Days of the Messiah, than when the ten Tribes had revolted. In their Time therefore the Kingdom was in its most flourishing Condition; and as the warlike Reign of David did figure out the Messiah, partly in a State of Trouble, and partly in his Victories over his Enemies, so did the peaceful Reign of Solomon figure out the Glories of that Tranquillity, which are the proper Consequences of complete Victory.

Both these are the Subjects of many rapturous Descriptions in the Book of Psalms, which are not applicable to those Times, but must reasonably be understood to have a farther Prospect to the Times of the Messiah.

I know Infidels treat this Way of Reasoning with Scorn; but if there was a Redeemer promised from the Fall; if the Posterity of Abraham was chosen on purpose to keep up this Hope; if the national Privileges conferr'd on them were figurative of the greater Privileges to be conferr'd by the Messiah on his chosen People; then the Erection of the Kingdom might fitly shadow out his regal Character, and those Passages, which could not literally be applied to David or Solomon, might justly be understood to have their Accomplishment in him. Above all, if it appears that the Christian Scheme does rationally account for these several Descriptions, and that that Scheme has been confirmed by Miracles, there will remain no Doubt with Men of humble Minds, but this is the true Key for interpreting those Psalms and other Prophecies which draw out such illustrious Characters as cannot strictly be referr'd to any Thing of those Times.

In this Manner St. Peter reason'd concerning Christ's Resurrection. From that Text of David. Thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see Corruption. Tho' this was spoken in the first Person, yet since it could not belong to David, who saw Corruption, the Apostle made no scruple to conclude for the Necessity of Christ's Resurrection. [See Acts ii. 29, 30.] In like Manner St. Paul, [Acts xiii. 36.] applied this Prophecy to Christ, in whom only it was literally fulfilled. Nor do we find any of their Adversaries were able to gainsay them.

For a further Proof of this typical Relation between David and Christ, he is not only promised as the Son of David to sit upon his Throne, but he is called by the Name of David himself. [See Hosea iii. 5. Jer. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24. xxxvii. 24, 25.]

As David was the immediate Son of Jesse, so Christ who descended from him, and is represented by him, is described as a Rod that should come forth out of the Stem of Jesse, and a Branch that should grow out of his Roots. Let any one read the eleventh Chapter of Isaiab, and he will see that that Character belongs longs to some future Prince. And who should this be, but that same Deliverer, whom the Scriptures had constantly in View, as the Destroyer of the serpent, and his Seed, and the Redeemer of the Faithful among all Nations. And yet because the Monarchy erected in the Family of Jesse was only meant for a Type of his future Kingdom, therefore he is called again the Root of Jesse, (Isa. xi. 10.) as being the real Ground of those Favours bestowed upon his Family. The same Person is both the Root of Jesse and a Branch growing out of his Roots. Which may explain, why he calls himself in the Apocalypse, at once the Root and Offspring of David; the Root, because the Authority conferr'd upon the Family of David, was derived from; and re-ferr'd to the Messiah; and the Offspring, because he was descended of that Line.

If the Predictions of the Kingdom in David's Family were to be fulfilled in Christ, as we shall hereafter see, then we have a clear Account of the Abolition of the temporal Kingdom, and a reasonable Inducement to attend to the Doctrine of the Gospel, which requires our Obedience of an heavenly King, who at present exercises a spiritual Discipline, and after the compleat Reduction of his Enemies, will receive his faithful Servants into endless Felicity.

When the Messiah was thus pointed out to descend of the Family of David, Providence wisely ordain'd that Solomon should more eminently, than the rest of David's Successors, be made a lively Type of the Messiah. This was first of all notified upon David's Declaration of his Design to erect a Temple unto God, by Nathan. I will set up thy Seed after thee, says God, which shall proceed out of thy Bowels, and I will establish his Kingdom; he shall build a House for my Name, and I will establish the 148 The gradual Revelation of the Gospel.

Throne of his Kingdom for ever ; I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son ; if he commit Iniquity, I will chastise him with the Rod of Men, 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c. This Prediction good Interpreters have thought is to be divided between Solomon and Christ. The last Clause, which mentions the Chastisement of his Iniquity, has been thought to belong to Solomon and his Successors: Tho' perhaps this may be applied to Christ, when we consider him, as standing in the Place of Sinners, and bearing the Chastisement of their Iniquity, tho' sinless himself.

That which concerns the eternal Duration of the Kingdom, could belong only to Christ. But the other Characters are common to both. To be a King in Peace and Prosperity was such an Instance of divine Favour towards him, as furnished a more lively Type of the Messiah.

To build a material Temple, was charged on the immediate Successor of David ; but to erect a spiritual Kingdom this was typically shewn to be the Office of that celestial King, who was to be the Blessing of future Times, Eph. ii. 21. Both Kings had David for their Father ; and both also were the Sons of God, but Christ only by Nature, Solomon by Grace. From whence St. Paul produces this Passage, as applicable in the strictest Manner to Christ, and so as no Creature had a Claim to it. For unto which of the Angels said he, at any Time thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee ? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son, Heb. i. 5.

But here Infidels accuse the Apostle of falsifying Scripture, when to prove Christ's natural Sonship and Superiority to all Creatures, he cites this Passage of the Old Testament, which has a plain Reference to King Solomon, who was only in an inferior Sense acknowledged for the Son of God. In answer swer to which, I observe, that if these Men will take the Text as it stands in Samuel in Conjunction with the parallel Account of the same Fact in Chronicles, and compare it with other Predictions of the like Import in the 72d, and 89th Psalms, and other Places of Scripture, which describe the Amplitude and Duration of this Kingdom of the Son of David and of God, there will be Reason to conclude that there is some higher Character than Solomon's drawn out; and that in divers of those Points, where both Characters agree, the Sense, in which they are applied to Solomon, is much below the Dignity of the Expression, and seems to require a sublimer Sense to compleat them.

As this Matter is stated in the Chronicles, there are two Characters which could not be applied to Solomon, and the People of those Times. One is the stable and secure Condition of the People. (See 1 Chron. xvii. 9.) which Prediction cannot relate to the Days of Solomon, or the ancient Establishment of the Jewish Monarchy, which has been destroyed many Ages since.

The other Character concerns the Person of this Son of David, of whom it is promised. I will settle him in my House, and in my Kingdom for ever, (ver. 14.) which Promise, as it can belong to no mortal Man, must lead us to acknowledge that illustrious Person, who was also in a more eminent Sense the Son of God, whose Throne and Kingdom will be explained farther by the Coincidence of other Prophecies.

Mean while tho' the People of those Times could not understand these Prophecies with all that clearness which the following Scriptures have thrown upon them, yet thus much might quickly be concluded, that some future Son of David was design'd in these Predictions.

But after all, 'tis possible, that they might look for more of temporal Prosperity than was really intended. So that if this Matter had not been further opened, perhaps they might have been few, whose Faith would have been strong enough to have supported them under those great Turns, which were to happen in the Jewish Polity.

For this Reason God by his Prophets foretold these Alterations, and renew'd his Assurance notwithstanding of a firm and inviolable Covenant with the House of David.

Thus about the Time of the leading away the Tribe of Judah into Captivity, the Spirit of Prophecy broke out in stronger Light than ever, to give timely Warning of these Alterations, and fresh Assurance of the coming of that Son of David, in whom alone the ancient Prophecies could justly be compleated. They were assured they should not be utterly destroy'd, but that God would unite his People in one Kingdom to enjoy perpetual Peace. See Amos, Isaiab, and Hosea, who gave Notice of these approaching Revolutions, and Assurance also, of the inviolable Certainty of the divine Promise to the House of David.

At their Return from this Captivity, when the People were in a low Condition, when they had no King, and when the Temple was not built with such Magnificence as before, then new Assurances were given them by the Prophets Haggai, Zachary, and Malacki. The Lord himself was to honour that Temple with his Presence, and make up for that Defect of Glory which made them uneasy. And a Messenger was designed to prepare the Way before him, and inculcate those Doctrines which might qualify the Minds of Men for his Reception.

Having shewn that Christ's Kingdom was prefigured by that of David, I will next consider those three three Circumstances, which are given of it by the ancient Prophets. Viz. 1. The Amplitude and Extent of this Kingdom. 2. Its Peace. 3. Its Duration.

I begin with the Amplitude and Extent of this Kingdom.

Look into the Book of Psalms and you will find this Kingdom described in such a pompous Manner as answers not to any Time of David or Solomon, but waited for a future Accomplishment, (See Psal. lxxii. 8. 11. 10.) and must belong to some Person far superior to him, whose Dominion was not to be confined to Canaan, but was to have the Heathen given him for his Inheritance, and the uttermost Parts of the Earth for his Possessions.

And because it could not be imagined that this Empire should be so extended without Opposition, 'tis added, that the King, in whose Days it was to happen, should be signally victorious. (Psal. lxxii. 9. cx. 6.) And lest we should understand this to denote only temporal Success, we are instructed farther, that besides the Destruction of those who are too proud to submit, his Victories should terminate in the Reduction of the rest to the Faith and Worship of the true God. Psal. lxxvii. 2. lxxxvi. 9.

This Conversion of the Heathen is more clearly foretold by the succeeding Prophets to be effected under the auspicious Reign of that Son of David they were taught to expect. And what they looked for as future, could not have happened in the Reign of David and Solomon; besides their Descriptions do import the Conversion of all Nations, and consequently could not be completed in the proselyting only of a few People. See Isa. xlii. 1. 4. 6, 7. xlix. 6. 22, 23.

That the Person, who should effect this, was the same glorious King that had been promised of the House of David, may be collected from that Unity of Character, which appears in other Passages of the same Prophet. See Isaiah xi. 10. lv. 3, &c. xi. 9. Mal. i. 11.

Yet still as the true Religion had long been professed only by the Jews, and when thus explained to greater Perfection, should from them be propagated thro' the Earth; for this Reason the Conversion of the Gentiles is very deservedly reputed an Accession to the Jews. It was an ancient Rule concerning any private Person who became a Profelyte to Judaism, that he should be as one born among them, Levit. xix. 34. entitled to equal Privileges with themselves; and correspondently to this, the proselyting of whole Nations was to be deem'd an Addition to their own.

There is a very remarkable Prediction to this Purpose, Isa. ii, 2, &c. Micah iv. 1, &c. Isa. lx. 3, 4, 5, 6, &c. And at the 12th Verse a severe Denunciation is annexed. For the Nation, and the Kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish, yea those Nations shall be utterly wasted.

The Gentiles being thus gather'd to Israel, we see a plain Reason why they are included in the Name of Israel; and the Descriptions which run in the Stile and Title of the Jewish Church, are applicable to the Christian. Tho' at the same Time it is acknowledged, that the greatest Part of the Jewish Nation should apostatise, whilst their Defection should be abundantly supplied by this Accession of the Gentiles. [See to this Purpose, Isai. x. 20, &c. xlix. 20, &c.]

Whilst thus the Gentiles, as grafted into the Church, are included in the Name of Israel, it must be reasonable to imagine, that the Character of those, who should continue to reject and oppose it, is couch'd under the Character of the Enemies of Israel; and to what might in some Respects have a literal Relation to the State of the Nations round them, will be found to have a typical, but more important View to the Heathen World in general, upon this spreading of the Gospel Light, denoting at once the utter Overthrow of such as cannot be reclaim'd, and the happy Conversion of the rest, and their Conjunction with the true Israel. [See Isa. xi. 14. xiv. 1, 2.]
who

What is foretold of the Destruction of Idolatry, and the utter Overthrow of the Heathen Superstition, deserves to be consider'd upon this Occasion, as being plainly applicable to no other than the Gospel times. (Isaiab xix. 1, &c. Jer. xliii. 12, 13. Ezek. xxx. 13. Jer. x. 1. Zeph. ii. 11. Zech. xiii. 2.)

When the Heathen World is thus reduced to the Obedience of Faith, then the main Body of Israel, (which till then shall have persisted in their Infidelity) will join this Society of faithful Men in acknowledging their Prince and Saviour. (Isai. xi. 11, 12. compare it with Luke, xxi. 24. and Rom. xi. 25, 26.)

Upon this Coalition of the Jews and Gentiles, all ancient Animosities shall cease, and all false Worship shall be utterly abolished. The Lord shall be King over all the Earth, Jehovah shall be one, and his Name one, without Competitor.

This Kingdom is denoted in the Prophecy of Daniel by the Stone cut out without Hands. Which put a Period to all other Kingdoms, and filled the whole Earth. [See Dan. ii. 34, 35. 44, 45.] which is expressed clearer, Chap. vii. 13, 14. The Unity of Character in these and many other Prophecies is such as does oblige us to refer them to the same Period,

It is impossible to apply these Prophecies to any Events at the Time they were utter'd. But if they be applied to the Days of the Messiah, they will be found to fall in with the whole Scheme of Scripture Prophecy, and make up one harmonious Expectation. And it cannot but appear much more reasonable to admit of this Exposition, than either to leave those Prophecies without any determinate Meaning at all, or else to close in with the low and flat Interpretations of some great Men, who have run thro' the Jewish History, to pick up such Events as might seem to answer some or other of these Descriptions, without any uniform View preserved in the whole; as if they envied the ancient Church any Knowledge of the Doctrine of Redemption, and meant to confine its Hopes to earthly Satisfaction.

But admitting our Exposition of the Prophecies; how are they fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth? all Nations have not submitted to his Religion; and those who could not be convinced, have not been destroyed; there are many Nations now Heathen. Nay, has not Idolatry itself been introduced into the Christian Church? And why then should we contend to explain the Prophecies in such a Sense, as would deny them any proper Completion?

In answer to all this, it is to be considered, that there is great Variety of Facts foretold to be accomplished in the Days of the Messiah. There is a Time of Struggle, as well as Triumph. And as 'tis reasonable to allow some Time for the effecting so great an Alteration; so neither was it necessary that the Scene should alter in all Places at once. Not but God could, if he pleased, have performed his Purpose with a quicker Dispatch; but it is not for us to prescribe Bounds to him. We do not then say that every Thing which was foretold of the Messiah's

Isab's Kingdom is already accomplished ; it is enough to support the Christian Cause, if it be all accomplished in its due Time. Mean while we have the Satisfaction to observe that the spreading of our Religion by such unlikely Methods, has already answer'd in great Measure, to the ancient Predictions ; and is therefore become an important Confirmation of that which remains to be accomplished.

In particular the Destruction of the Heathen Idolatry appeared in the utter Silence of its Oracles, (See Clasen. de Orac. Gentil. l. 1. c. 26. Jenkins's Reasonableness of the Christian Rel. Vol. 1. Part 3. Chap. 3.) a Fact too notorious to be overlooked either by Heathens, or Christians.

The Christians looked upon this as a certain Argument of the Commencement of that Kingdom, which is spoke of by the ancient Prophets. And Porphyry, that Enemy of Christianity, himself confesses in the third Century, that from the Time that Jesus began to be worshipped, they had received no Help or Favour from the Gods.

Julian was perplexed to account for the Dumbness of the Heathen Oracles. He only hoped to retort the Difficulty on the Christians, by objecting that the Gift of Prophecy was ceased also in the Church, so that they had no more Oracles to boast of than the Heathen World. To this St. Cyril justly answer'd, that since Christ had appeared to be the End of the Law and the Prophets ; and was sufficiently made known unto Men, not only by his settling a Canon of divine Revelation, but by sending the holy Ghost into our Hearts, it cannot be alledged that the Spirit has deserted us, but rather that we are translated into more abundant Grace.

So did the Spirit of Darknes fly before the Gospel Light ; and if in some remote Heathen Countries, he still retains his Empire, and utters a less pompous kind

kind of Oracles; yet we have it related by credible Authority, (See Wafer's Voyages, p. 38, 39.) that upon the coming of Christians into these Parts a visible Restraint is laid upon his Power; and the evil Spirits have been forced to confess, that such Restraint was owing to their Vicinity. But if this old Deceiver has insinuated himself into the Christian Church and led many Captive by a new kind of Idolatry and Superstition; as this is nothing more than the Scriptures had taught us to expect, so the same Scriptures give Ground to hope for its Removal in due Time, when the Church shall enjoy an everlasting Peace, which brings me to consider the second Circumstance of the Messiah's Kingdom, namely, its Peace and Tranquillity.

The Prophets have in most express Terms assured us, that the Blessing of Peace shall be given unto the People and Subjects of this glorious Son, and Successor of David. (See Isai. lxvi. 12. lx. 17. Hag. ii. 9. Isai. lv. 12. liv. 13.) Who is called the Prince of Peace, (Isaiab ix. 6.) and his Ministers the Publishers of Peace. (Isaiab xxxiii. 7.) Under his Reign Ephraim shall not envy Judah, nor Judah any more vex Ephraim; but both together agree to seek the Lord their God, and David their King. And as they shall have no intestine Divisions, so neither shall the Nations themselves have any from one another; but being incorporated into one Body, they shall have only one Interest to promote in obeying that Law, which should go forth out of Zion, and that Word of the Lord which should issue from Jerusalem. Their former Aversions shall cease, and they who were ravenous shall yield to the gentle Discipline of Christ, and put on the humble Spirit of his Followers. (See Isai. lxv. 25. xi. 6, &c. and Micah. iv. 2, 3, 4.)

These Prophecies had filled the Jews with such general Expectations of Peace, under the Reign of Christ,

Christ, as made them impatient of his coming, to free them from the Roman Yoke, and begin his triumphant Government. Their Disappointment was greater, and it hardened them in Infidelity, when they saw the blessed Jesus, who assume this Character of the Messiah, appearing in a low Condition and submitting to Death, and leaving both them, and his Followers in Miseries. This has kept them from us in all Ages and pushed them on to blaspheme the Saviour, they pretend to expect.

From hence, therefore, instead of convincing the Jews and other Infidels of the Truth of our Religion, we find a most formidable Objection raised against it. The Jews were reduced, soon after its Publication, to the utmost Necessity, and have ever since been Vagrants over the World, the Scorn and Derision of Men.

And the Christians were warned to expect Divisions and Persecutions. Jesus sent his Disciples to oppose the Corruptions, the Prejudices and Lusts of Mankind; and this would not fail to provoke those Persons, who were govern'd by them. He foretold they should be persecuted by both Jews and Heathens. Luke xxi. 12. 16, 17.

And meet with such outrageous Malice, as would even extinguish the Flame of natural Affection. Luke xii. 53. and that Men would think they served God, by killing them. Nor were they to meet this Usage only from their Enemies, there should of their own selves Men arise, speaking perverse Things, to draw away Disciples after them.

All which Things, the History of the Church acquaints us, fell out accordingly. She was grievously distressed from without by the Persecutions of the Civil Power, and distracted within by numerous Heresies and Divisions.

158 The gradual Revelation of the Gospel.

Now how do these Things agree with those Predictions which foretold the Peace and Tranquillity of the Reign of the Messiah? Or, how should that Character belong to him, who undertakes not, but through much Tribulation, to conduct them to the Kingdom of God? To which I answer, That tho' the Prophecies of Peace are of such different Sorts, some of them more general, others more particular, and pointing out the special Instances and Effects of it; some relating to one Period, and some to another; that there is no Solution, which will fit them all, or perfectly satisfy the Objection to be formed from them; yet upon a serious Consideration of the whole Matter, it will appear, that the Jews and Infidels are mistaken in the Management of this Objection, in one or other of these three Particulars; either,

First, In the Nature of that Peace which the Messiah was to give: Or,

Secondly, In the Persons on whom he should bestow the Privilege; or else,

Thirdly, In the Time from which it should commence.

1. Then, they are mistaken in the Nature of that Peace, which the Messiah was to give.

Their carnal Desires of temporal Prosperity, have given such a wrong Turn to their Expectations from this promised Redeemer, that what the Scripture intends to point out spiritual and eternal Privileges, is by them restrained to sensual Ease, and Pleasures of an earthly Canaan. The Jewish Religion might instruct them better, that Sin has made a Separation between God and Men, and that the greatest Benefit they can expect, is to be at Peace with him. The Sacrifices of the Law were necessary to be often repeated. But they were to figure the Sacrifice of Christ, which being absolute in itself, should make those typical Sacrifices cease, and bring in

in everlasting Righteousness. (Dan. ix. 24. 27.) This, though as a Priest, he must offer up to God, yet, as a King, he should bestow its Benefits on Men; this being that perfect Peace which the Law could not give, (Rom. viii. 3.) and which Christ was promised to secure to us. It was founded in Acceptance of that Sacrifice he offered from whence he is said by Isaiah to have been heard in an acceptable Time, intimating that his Intercession is heard in our Behalf. This is that Peace of God which passeth all Understanding, vastly superior to all temporal Happiness, in respect whereof the Messiah was promised as Prince of Peace, and his Ambassadors, as they who should publish Peace and Salvation, and bring good Tydings of good Things. For this Reason it is farther explained to consist in such Assurance or Confidence towards God, as was to be the genuine result of that Righteousness introduced by the new Dispensation. Isaiah xxxii. 17.

Accordingly the New Testament applies the Matter without scruple. By Faith we have Peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. v. 1. 11. And our Saviour says, Peace I leave with you; my Peace I give unto you———In the World ye shall have Tribulation, but in me ye shall have Peace. However they were persecuted from without, yet the Kingdom of God was erected within them, which consists in inward Righteousness and Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost. In consequence hereof they were instructed to possess their Souls in Patience. See John xiv. 27. Rom. xv. 13.

Again as the Law could not offer this Peace, but only from the typical Relation, which it bore to Christ, so neither did it make its Proposals to any, but the Seed of Abraham, and to Profelytes to the Law of Moses. But under the Messiah, the Blessing of Abraham was to extend to all Nations:

Again

I have shewn before, how the other Nations were to cleave to the House of Israel. Which the Prophets insist upon as an Argument of Peace in the Messiah's Reign. Nor do the Jewish Writers disown the Character, provided we suppose them to unite in the Observation of the Law of Moses. But since that Law was given for a Note of Distinction to one Nation, and for a Prefiguration of that Privilege, which should be granted to all, we insist that upon the actual Proposal of such Privilege to all Nations, that Note of Distinction was of course to be abolished: so that now there is no longer Difference between the Jew, and the Greek. Rom. x. 12. Eph. ii. 13, &c.

Lastly, It may be proper to distinguish between the Nature of his Doctrine, and the Success of it. He preached nothing but Unity and good Agreement of all Mankind: But if they chose to indulge such Passions as kept his Peace from ruling in their Hearts, this ought not to be charged upon the Doctrine.

And if the Jews now are so grievously mistaken in the Nature of that Peace, which the Messiah was to give, they are no less,

Secondly, in the Persons on whom he should bestow it. The Messiah being promised as the King of the Jews, they have from hence flattered themselves, that they shall receive the principal Favours of his Government. And tho' they own the Gentiles shall enjoy the same Peace, yet this they admit only in a subordinate Degree. This may in some Sense be allowed, it being certain, that the Law was to go forth from Zion, and the Heathen Nations, by being converted to it, were reckoned to cleave unto the House of Israel. From hence the Church of the Messiah, tho' consisting of all Nations, is sometimes described as the Jerusalem and Israel of God; and consequently the high Characters and Privileges appropriate to it, are not literally to be understood of that City, or those Inhabitants of Palestine, but rather of those faithful Adherents of their Saviour, of whom the Jews, as a collective Body, were a Figure.

Mean while, the Peace which his faithful People should enjoy, hinders not but he and they might meet with Enemies, tho' not able to subdue him, yet should he have Occasion to use Acts of Hostility and Judgment over them. See Psal cx. 5, 6. Psal. ii. 9. Isa. xi. 4. xlviii. 22. And therefore whatever Miseries are inflicted upon them, ought not to be judged inconsistent with the Peace of Christ's Kingdom, but is rather what is necessary to secure the Quiet of his Reign.

Nor would the Jews dispute this with us, provided it might be allowed them, that the Enemies thus to be destroyed, were the Gentiles, and not so great a Part of their own Nation. And yet nothing can be plainer than that Prophets have actually foretold how their Land itself should be smitten with a Curse, and the greatest Part of the Nation should reject the Messiah, and be cut off. See Zech. xiii. 8, 9. Mal. iii. 2, 3. Isa. viii. 14, 15. Isa. x. 22. That finally that People should for a long Time abide without either King or Sacrifice. Hof. iii. 4, 5, before they should be persuaded to return to seek the Lord their God and David their King. These Passages referred to, do so aptly describe the State of that unhappy People, that the Peace of Christ's Kingdom may not be judged inconsistent with the Miseries they endure. For if his Enemies are excluded from his Favour, and they are so clearly included in the Number of them; what remains but that there is no Peace belonging to them, and that the Peace of his faithful Subjects will be best secured by the Overthrow of the Jews?

Yet after all, it is certain, that some Prophecies relating to this Matter, do presage a more general Call and Restoration of the Jews; and withal, such universal Peace as consists not with many Nations, subsisting upon Earth in a State of Enmity. But even here,

Thirdly, The Jews are likewise mistaken in the Times from which those Blessings are to commence. For it is no where said that the Church should enjoy perfect Peace upon the first appearing of the King Messiah. Besides the Conquests he was to make, it was moreover foretold, that his Enemies should be suffered sometimes to prevail over his Church. Mic. vii. 4, &c. We ought therefore to look for the Accomplishment of those Predictions which foretel Oppressions, as well as of those, which promise Peace, and not to look for all at the same Point of Time. The Persecutions were broken off, when the Princes of the Earth became Christians. So that then the Wolf was seen to dwell with the Lamb. And if the Saracens have since overrun some Parts of the Church; if the World is not brought to such a Temper that they need not learn War any more; if the Church be not perfectly at Unity in itself; if the Fulness of the Gentiles be not yet come in; if the Jews be not converted; nay, if the whole Church be extinguished by a general Apostacy; let us look upon this as nothing more than the Accomplishment of former Prophecies. Let it therefore be so far from shocking our Belief in the Messiah, or discourage our Expectation of the utmost Peace under his Protection, as to incline us rather more stedfastly to look for the Accomplishment of Prophecies not yet fulfilled. What we have accomplished is a just Confirmation of what we still expect: And as it is most unreasonable in the Jews to object against the Christian Religion, upon Account of the Prophecies not yet fulfilled, except they could assign some Character of the Time for their Completion, which is already expired; so we have just Ground to argue against them, from those Prophecies which are actually fulfilled, that the Messiah is already come. Since we have Witnesses of many of those Events, which were foretold to happen under his Government, we are taught how he should rule in the midst of his Enemies, till at last, after a due Trial of his Servants, all the other shall be consumed by him: After this all their Rage and Opposition shall cease. Jer. xxiii. 6. Psal. lxxii. 3. Isa. xi. 9.

we

I presume not to say at what Distance of Time this glorious State of Things shall occur, the Times and the Seasons are kept by the Father in his own Power, and cannot be understood, but by actual Fruition. Those secret Things belong unto the Lord, but the Things which are revealed, belong unto us; and so far as they are fulfilled they may be urged to confirm our Faith, and to quicken our Obedience.

Thus much may suffice to have been said, for the clearing of those Prophecies of Peace, which occur in the Old Testament as a distinguishing Mark of the Messiah's Reign: and withal to satisfy the Objection, which is made by Jews, and other Infidels against the Christian Scheme, as not having this Character to produce.

I come now to consider,

Thirdly, The perpetual Duration of the Kingdom of Christ.

The Expressions are very strong, which do assure the Perpetuity of the Kingdom to the House of David. See 2 Sam. vii. 12. &c. Psal. lxxxix. 3.

Heb. vi. 17. Pfal. lxxxix. 28, 29. Which cannot be applied to Solomon, or his Successors, because the regal Power was greatly diminished at his Death, and quite lost in the Captivity. And we may find some Intimations of those Changes in the Terms of the Prediction itself, Pfal. lxxxix. 30, 31, 32. Yet, God promised, at the 33d Verse, &c. that tho' the Kingdom might be cut off from the House of David for the Iniquity of his Successors, there should in due Time arise One of his Posterity, in whom this Promise of an everlasting Kingdom should be punctually fulfilled. Accordingly the Description is applied to one single Person, Pfal. lxxii. 5, 7, 57. It were easy to add other Passages, in Confirmation of this Point, that the Kingdom was not to be perpetuated by a Succession of many Princes, but by the Continuance of one. See Isa. ix. 7. Dan. vii. 14.

It must however be acknowledged, that the Destruction of the temporal Kingdom was such a shocking Dispensation as the Faithful hardly knew how to reconcile with the Promises of Perpetuity, and tho' they expected their Accomplishment in due Time, yet they were grieved with the Reproaches of those who mocked at the Delay of them. See Pfal. lxxxix. 38, 39, 49, 50, 51.

For this Reason the later Prophets enlarge much in giving Satisfaction to this Difficulty. See Amos ix. 11. Jer. xxiii. 5. Isai. ix. 7. Now tho' some of these Descriptions of Perpetuity are expressed in such Phrases as do allude to Things of a temporal Duration (as long as the Sun and Moon endureth, and the like) yet that may be imputed to a poetical Representation of a Fact, which could not be exemplified by any visible Thing exactly parallel; so that Things of a very long Continuance are put for a Figure of that which is properly eternal. Besides, if we understand this literally of his Kingdom's dom's continuing to the End of the World, its eternal Duration will follow by an easy Consequence, there being no Ground to think of any Change after that. We may better trust to this Solution, when it is remembered, that the Matter is otherwise set forth in such Variety of Expressions, not only mentioning this Kingdom to be eternal, but expressly denying any ending of it.

But this Text, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou at my right Hand, untill I make thine Enemies thy Footstool, the modern Jews would wrest to Abraham, or David, or to any Body, rather than to whom they belong. But he whom David, (who is the Author of the Psalms,) in Spirit called his Lord, must be his Superior, and not himself. And he who was possessed of regal Authority, and invested with eternal Priesthood, both which Characters are ascribed to him in this Psalms, could neither be Abraham, nor David, nor any other Worthy of the Old Testament. For which Reason when Jesus urged this Text to prove the Dignity of the Messiah, the Pharisees had nothing to answer. And tho' the present Targum upon the Psalms has otherwise explained it; yet that is known to be a Writing of no great Authority, which appeared not till the fourth Century, by which Time the Jews had their old Prejudices confirmed by new Forgeries.

It will be easily admitted, that to be placed at God's right Hand is a figurative Expression, and imports a State of Dignity and Power, not only of silent Dignity, but active Power, whereby the Reign of the Messiah should commence. For however some have conceived him to be here represented as sitting unactive, whilst God subdued his Enemies, and not beginning his Reign till they were brought under his Footstool, yet the Apostle dates it earlier: For he must reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet. The Words have a plain Reference to this Passage, fit thou at my right Hand, until I make thine Enemies thy Footstool, he must reign till then, and his Investiture with such Authority is set forth by his Exaltation to the right Hand of God. Nay, this regal Act of putting down his Enemies is indifferently ascribed in Scripture, either to God or Christ. See Phil. iii. 21. Psal. cx. 2.

But tho' the Phrase of sitting is too rigorously strained by them, who make it an Argument of Inactivity, yet it fairly imports, 1. That his Reign is quiet and serene, and secure. 2. That he remaineth moreover a King for ever. And as Christ being raised from the Dead is to die no more, so being now at the right Hand of God exalted, his Glory shall sustain no Decrease forever.

If it be objected that the Psalms does suggest that there will be a certain Period of his Government, when his Enemies shall be made his Footstool.

Answer that in the Hebrew Idiom the Word untill is often used only inclusively of the Time before, without importing an Exclusion of that which is to come. So that it is a good Argument of Christ's reigning at present, and till the Consummation of Ages (in Opposition to the forementioned Conceit of his Silence and Inactivity) but not of his abdicating then, or ceasing to govern any longer. Rather the Phrase, which follows, does imply the contrary. For to what End should his Enemies be made his Footstool? Surely to increase the Glory of his Majesty, and not to put an End to it. A Footstool, though not honourable in itself, yet adds Honour to him it supports, and implies him seated on a Throne. And therefore since these Enemies are to be made his Footstool, it is unreasonable to suppose that his Empire ceases with their Opposition, when it will but shine forth with more Lustre.

From

From another Passage, 1 Cor. xv. 24, 28. some have concluded, (Whitby in Loc. Outram. de Sacrif. in Fine) that Christ's Mediatorial Kingdom shall be abrogated when the End of his Mediation is accomplished. And then what will become of those Texts which speak strongly of the eternal Duration of his Government. They would suppose that those Things, which are only of a long Duration, are represented as if they were eternal. But neither the Reason of the Thing, nor the Propriety of the Expressions, will lead us into this Solution.

Others again have attempted, (Limborck. Theol. Christiana Lib. 3. cap. 25. §. 14.) to reconcile the seeming Difference, by distinguishing between Christ's Kingdom considered as Messiah, and as Mediator, and have thought that the former should have no End, but the latter might. But this is a Distinction without a Difference, because he is called the Messiah in the same Respects, and for the same Reasons, as he is the Mediator, as being anointed to his sacred Offices, and so appointed to mediate between God and Men. His Kingdom therefore, as Messiah, and as Mediator is the same; and it must be vain to expect any Advantage from so groundless a Distinction.

But there are two other Ways of accounting for the Matter, which seem less liable to Exception. In the first Place it is certain that great Part of his regal Office will cease, when he shall have subdued his Enemies, rewarded his Servants, and done granting those Assurances which are necessary for this State of Trial and Temptation. Consequently he may in some Sense be said to deliver up his Kingdom, as forbearing to execute those Parts of his Office, which are proper only for the present Church militant. But still he may preside over the glorious Members of his Church triumphant, and exercise such Acts of Government, as we cannot now fully understand.

This accounts in some Measure for the Surrendry of the Kingdom, without supposing it to be really abolished. Or in the second Place it may be said, that by delivering up the Kingdom to the Father, is only meant the referring it to him as Head and first in Order. And then as to that Subjection or Subordination of the Son, which the Apostle mentions, it is not to be imagined, that any new Subordination shall then commence. But as he was always subordinate to the Father as a Son, so will he then be also. And that Subordination shall be more amply displayed, when he shall have subdued all his Enemies, and shall bring all his Friends with him, Then shall he reign in Peace, and of his Kingdom there shall be no End. His Father also shall reign by him and with him, and be acknowledged still as his Head and Father, to whom he is referred. To this Purpose he is represented, as sitting on the same Throne with his Father; and it is accordingly proposed as the utmost Hopes and Ambition, that we shall also reign with him. Which surely does not imply his Government shall be abolished, but rather that it shall display itself to greater Advantage.

There is indeed mention made in Scripture of a temporary Reign of Christ for a thousand Years, in which his faithful Servants shall reign with him. See Rev. xx. 6. Which Passage, whatever it intends, cannot be inconsistent with the eternal Duration of Christ's Kingdom, but does really confirm it. Because those thousand Years are represented to expire before the last Troubles of the Church, and the final Condemnation of the Devil and his Adherents. (Verse 7, &c.) After which the Throne of God and of the Lamb, Rev. xxii. 1, 3. is said to be made conspicuous in the heavenly Jerusalem, where there shall shall no more be Night, but his Saints and his Servants shall reign with him for ever and ever. Rev. xxi. 25. xxii. 5.

Besides this regal Character of Christ, which has been explained from the Psalms and the following Prophets, it might be observed that many other Characters are intermixed, relating to his Life and Actions; but as it was not my Intention, nor necessary to our Purpose to discourse of every particular Prophecy, I shall only observe one Circumstance, which is so singular, that it deserves our Attention. It was declared to our first Parents, that the Sced of the Woman should have his Heel bruised by the Serpent. This has been explained to mean the Suffering of Death; and that Exposition was probably confirmed to them by the Appointment of those bloody Sacrifices, which we find to have obtained in the earliest Antiquity. The same was afterwards typically represented in Abraham's intentional offering his Son; in the Erection of the Brazen Serpent; in the Institution of the Paschal Lamb, and other Sacrifices of the Law. All which might reasonably be understood to refer to that Annoyance, which this promised Redeemer should sustain from our grand Enemy, when he undertook the Work of our Redemption. But when David and the following Prophets had drawn out the regal Character of this great Deliverer, it was proper, lest the Notions of his Sufferings should seem to be excluded by the Pomp of their Descriptions, that some more exprefs Declarations should be added of the Sufferings to which he should be exposed, and the great Atonement to be made by him.

Accordingly we read both in the Psalms, and in the following Prophets, particularly Isaiab, several Predictions full to this Purpose,

The

The Jews however were generally better pleased with attending to the brighter side of the Messiah's Character, and as their Commonwealth declined eagerly expected the Advent of this promised Deliverer, and in the warmth of such Expectation, seem to have forgot the Description of those Hardships and Sufferings he was to undergo. Even the Disciples of Jesus were not clear from this national Prejudice. They looked upon Christ's dying at all inconsistent with their Notions of the Messiah. Though Christ was pleased to assure them of his approaching Death and Resurrection, yet even those divine Discourses did not remove their Prejudice, but they were so confounded at his Death, that they would not believe the first Reports of his Resurrection. Such was the Discourse of the two Disciples going to Emmaus, when Jesus unknown joined himself to their Company, and took Occasion to upbraid them; O Fools and slow of Heart to believe all that the Prophets have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these Things and to enter into his Glory? This gave him a handle more fully to explain the Passages which they had overlooked, or misunderstood, so that beginning at Moses and all the Prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the Things concerning himself.

Without explaining at large every Thing of this Kind in the Old Testament, the most remarkable Prophecy is that of the 52d and 53d of Isaiab, in which some eminent Person is described under the Title of the Servant of the Lord, who should with great Meekness and Patience suffer many Miseries, and Death itself for the Sake of the People, and of his own accord: And at last should be highly honoured for his Obedience, and see the Success of all his Sufferings in the Justification of those, whose Iniquities he had borne, and in their Admission to divide the Spoil of his Enemies, and enjoy a State of Glory and Happiness with him. The

The principal Thing to be observed for the Explication of this Passage, is the Unity of Character, which runs throughout the whole. It is the same Person, the same Servant of the Lord, that without any Demerit of his own, met with such Treatment, and submitted to it with such Willingness, that procured by it such Pardon to other People, that was recompensed at last with such Glory.

The Jews would persuade us, that their Nation in its present Captivity, is here designed under the Figure of a single Person. But there is no Colour to be alledged for their enduring such Hardships in any Country, as may answer the Description of Prophet. Besides the suffering Person is expressly distinguished from the People of God. Besides after all, will any one pretend that the Jews are free from Blame or Wickedness and suffer without any Fault? Can it be said they submit without Murmuring? Or can any one think that their Sufferings should expiate the Sins of other People? That they should see the Success in the Justification of many, that they should be satisfied with this Fruit of their Sufferings, and observe this Pleasure of the Lord to prosper in their Hands?

The like Exceptions may be made against their Application of this Prophecy to King Josiah. He was indeed a pious Prince; but the Expedition, in which he fell at Megiddo, was undertaken against the Command of God; his Death therefore was the Punishment of his own Sin and Temerity. And he did not submit to it voluntarily, for he was slain by the Enemy. Much less had it the Virtue of an Atonement: For divine Vengeance pursued the Jews, who were led Captive to Babylon a few Years after.

There is no better Pretence for applying it to the Prophet Jeremy. (See Grotius in loc.) He indeed underwent great Afflictions but not voluntarily. Nor does it appear that he died a violent Death, and much less, that his Death was a Means of appeasing the Wrath of God, and averted his Vengeance from Transgressors.

But the Targum of Jonathan and the more ancient Rabbins have applied some Passages of this Section, and particularly the first Words of it, to the Messiah; and their Successors have no way to elude the Force of the Exposition, but by two Pretences, which they have devised, which are neither consistent with the Text, nor countenanced by what remains of that ancient Exposition.

Sometimes it is suggested, that they meant only to apply the first Verse of this Section to the Messiah, where he is introduced under a pompous Character, as one that should be exalted and extolled, and be very high, which three Words the same Ancients have explained to intimate his being exalted above Abraham, and extolled beyond Moses, and higher than the Angels of God. (See Abarbanel in loc.) And then 'tis thought the humbler Characters may be reasonably applied to some other Person: But 'tis more reasonable to believe that they who applied the beginning of this Prophecy to Christ, would understand the Continuation of it in the same Sense. Besides some Parts of the suffering Character have been actually expounded by the ancient Jews to belong to the Messiah, (See Chandler's Defence of Christianity.) who have likewise spoke in plain Terms of the Afflictions, which he was to endure, as a third Part of the Afflictions which were to happen in the World.

At other Times, when the Ancients appear too express for the afflicted State of the Messiah, they have then recourse to another Fiction of two Messiahs, one of them should be the Son of David, a potent Prince; the other of the Tribe of Joseph, who should be miserable and oppressed.

But

But neither Scripture nor any Tradition more ancient than the Gemara and the later Targums give them any Reason to expect two Messiahs. And the Mention which these Writings have made of the Messiah is so little consistent with the other Jewish Notions, that Maimonides left it out, when he collected the Traditions which relate to the Messiah.

Again, what is the Use of this other Messiah of the Tribe of Joseph? All the Benefits which the Prophets have foretold, they look for only from the Son of David. So that this Son of Joseph is only a Fiction invented to account for that Mention, which is made of the Afflictions of the Messiah, which they would have the Son of David stand exempt from.

But if we admit their Fiction of two Messiahs, it could neither help them in their Explication of this Text, nor in accounting for the traditionary Exposition of their ancient Doctors. The same Person is understood throughout the whole Prophecy. If then it was the King Messiah, the Son of David who was to be exalted; it must be the same Son of David, that was to be despised and rejected of Men, &c. accordingly some of these Characters are referred by the Exposition of the ancient Jews, to the same Messiah. So that the modern Fiction of two different Messiahs is absurd, and unapplicable to that Purpose, for which it was invented. But in the Christian Scheme the whole Matter is plain; the same Person, who suffered Affliction, and offered himself an expiatory Sacrifice, was afterwards raised to a State of Glory. These then are the Parts of that distinctly considered; as being predicted in the Old Testament and accomplished in the New.

I. That he should voluntarily expose himself to Sufferings.

II. That these Sufferings should make an Atonement for Sin.

III. That

III. That they should be previous to his State of Exaltation.

I. That he should voluntarily expose himself to Sufferings.

This is taught in such Variety of Expressions that there can be no Dispute about it. Isaiab says, he was brought as a Lamb to the Slaughter, and as a Sheep before her Shearers is dumb, so he opened not his Mouth. Which Character agrees neither to Josiah, nor Jeremy, nor to the People of the Jews, nor to any other, to whom their Expositors might be glad to apply so important a Prediction; but to the blessed Jesus, whom we receive under the Character of the Messiah, it agrees perfectly well. He bore all his Afflictions with the greatest Patience, and far from reviling his Persecutors, he prayed for them; and tho' he could have summoned more than twelve Legions of Angels, yet he chose to wave his Power, and to give himself a Ransom for all. And that was the,

II. Second Thing considerable in Isaiab's Prophecy, that these Sufferings should make Atonement for Sin.

There are many Expressions to this Purpose, Isaiab liii. 10, 4, 5, 6, 7. And tho' modern Jews have absurdly endeavoured to apply this to some or other of the Worthies of the Old Testament, yet they are forced to admit a kind of Expiation to be designed in some of the Clauses of this Prophecy; and after this we may leave their Application of them to sink under the Weight of its own Absurdity. Could it be said of Josiah or Jeremy, that their Sufferings made Atonement for the Sins of the People, when they not only left them still exposed to greater Miseries in their outward State, but marked out as Objects of divine Vengeance from the Guilt of their complicated Wickedness?

But

But upon the Christian Scheme, the whole Passage is plainly applicable to the Sufferings of Jesus, who gave himself for the Sins of Mankind, that all those, who submit to him by Faith, may be rescued from the Dominion of them at present, and hereafter from their Punishment.

But there is one considerable Objection lies against the Christian Scheme in this Particular; and that is, that St. Matthew himself seems to have interpreted this Text of Isaiab after another Manner. For tho' he applies it to the Person of Christ, yet it is upon Occasion of his miraculous Cures performed upon Demoniacks, and such as were troubled with other Illnesses, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the Prophet, saying, himself took our Infirmities, and bare our Sickneses, Matt. viii. 17. From whence it may be argued, that the Prophet meant nothing else, but his taking away Diseases by healing them; and not his taking Punishment upon himself, or enduring it instead of others. But if we recollect in what Variety of Phrases this Matter is set forth by Isaiab, it will be impossible to explain them of his healing Diseases, or other miraculous Effects of his Power upon other Men; and therefore as St. Matt. has quoted only a Part of this Prophecy, so it is most reasonable to think he has expressed only a Part of its Meaning. All the Miseries of Life being the Consequence of Sin, there is no doubt but Christ, who made a perfect Satisfaction for Sin, had in that Regard a Power to remove them. His miraculous Cures therefore, consider'd as the Result of his Atonement, might be fairly deemed a fulfilling this Prediction of Isaiab, and more particularly of that Clause which in the Form of the Expression seems to be accommodated to that Purpose. Accordingly they are pertinently joined with the Remission of Sins, and performed as the Reward of Faith, either in the Patient itself, or in those Friends that offered him for Cure. And though this was previous to his suffering upon the Cross, yet it may be considered as posterior in the View of the divine Counsels, in Respect of which the Mercies of God were exhibited through Christ to former Ages, and he is said to be the Lamb slain from the Foundation of the World. There is one Thing more to be observed in this Prediction, and that is,
the

III. Thirdly, That these Sufferings of Christ were previous to his State of Exaltation. (See Isa. lii. 14, 15. liii. 10, 12, 11, 12.)

From all this Jesus argued that Christ ought in the first Place to have suffered these Things, and after that to enter into his Glory.

I have now gone thro' those Prophecies, which I thought most material to be considered, which were delivered from the Time of the Erection of the Jewish Monarchy, in the House of David, to its Downfal in the Babylonish Captivity. And in treating of them I have anticipated a great Part of what might have been said, concerning the succeeding Period, which reaches from the Downfal of the Jewish Monarchy in the Babylonish Captivity, to the Birth of the promised Messiah: there being many Predictions within that Period, which relate to the same Events, namely, to the Glories of Christ's regal Character, and also to his suffering Estate. But then as there was more than ordinary Need, under that Diminution of the House of David, to raise the dejected Spirits of the Jews with Hopes of the Restauration; so there are some Circumstances added by these latter Prophets, which do more punctually fix the Time for the Coming of the Messiah; namely that it should be before the second Destruction of the Temple; that it should should be within such a precise Number of Years, and after the Preaching of a certain Messenger, to make all fit Preparations for the Introduction of so great a Saviour.

The two first of these Characters are pointed out in that Prophecy of Daniel. Ch. ix. 24—27. both which it will be proper to state, in Order to perceive how the Knowledge of this great Doctrine was gradually increased.

In stating the first of these Characters, I would take this Prophecy of Daniel in Conjunction with that of Haggai. Chap. ii. 6, 7, &c. who foretels that shaking of all Nations, in Order to introduce a glorious Alteration, when the Desire of all Nations should come into the second Temple, and fill it with such Glory, as should exceed the boasted Glory of the former; which was raised by Solomon. The Prophecy of Daniel is in this Point less particular; for tho' it foretels an utter Overthrow to succeed the Excision of the Messiah, yet it is not so express, that there should be none before it, but this promised Deliverer should certainly appear whilst their second Temple was standing, and before it should be demolished by their Enemies:

Daniel's Prediction was delivered just at the Expiration of the 70 Years of Captivity, before their Temple was built, he promises a Restoration of their State and Polity, but lest they should rest in it, as their greatest Happiness, he warns them that its Duration should be temporary, that when the End of their Dispensation was accomplished; their City and the Sanctuary should be then subject to an utter Desolation. The latter Part of this Prediction, some have thought, foretels the Ravages and Profanation of Antiochus; yet there can be little Doubt but, if other Characters agree, this Part will also be most strictly applicable to the Destruction of Jerusalem by Titus: as I will show by and by.

But the Prophet Haggai is more exprefs in fixing the prefent Character, that there fhould be no more Deftitution of the Sanctuary, before the Coming of this promifed Deliverer. This Prediction was occafioned by the Slacknefs of the People, to improve the Licence which had been given by the Emperors of Persia for rebuilding the Temple, or rather by their Defpair of finishing it in any Manner anfwerable to its former Glory. The Prophet bids them go on with Courage, in full Affurance that God would take Care for the Glory of his Houfe, Ch. ii. 4, 5. And abundantly fupply all that Defect of Glory, which they fo much apprehended, v. 6, 7, 8, 9.

This Prophecy fome Jews pretend to underftand of that third Temple they expect to be built in the Days of the Meffiah. Which Notion is not only inconfiftent with the plain Design of the Prophecy, but likewife with the exprefs Authority of their own ancient Doctors, as well as the Suffrage of many of the modern Rabbins.

Nor are thofe Chriftians right, who excluding the literal Interpretation of this Prophecy, would explain the Temple therein mentioned in a figurative Senfe, to denote the Chriftian Difpenfation, which is far fuperior to the Jewifh. For whatever typical Reference of this Kind might be allowed, yet that is fecondary, and that the material Fabric, which was then erecting, muft be literally underftood, appears from the manifefit Occafion of the Prediction itfelf. Againft this,

1. It is objected both by Jews and Chriftians, Patrons of the Opinions abovementioned, that the Temple meant by the Prophet, is called the later Houfe, by a Word in the Original, which they fay, is never ufed to denote the laft of two, but always of three Things or more. To

To which I answer, that were there any more than one, there may be certainly Priority of Order, and the Names of former and latter may as justly be applied where there are but two Temples, as they may be, where there are two Hundred. Again,

2. It is objected, that that which we suppose to be the Glory here foretold, did not fall out whilst that Temple stood, which Zerubbabel was now building, but after that rebuilding of it by Herod the Great; and consequently we are bound to own, some future Temple was intended by the Prophet.

To which I answer, that the Jewish Sanctuary was reckon'd to continue, so long as it was not destroyed by their Enemies. To repair, or even to rebuild was not considered as any Discontinuance of it, and therefore the Temple thus rebuilt, was esteem'd the same. The Continuation of Worship, in the daily Sacrifice, prevented any Need of a new Dedication of the Temple, which had been judged necessary in a former Instance, to the same numerical Building, after the Impieties of Antiochus. To this Purpose 'tis observed, (Vide Selden. de Synedr. lib. 3. cap. 13. §. 8.) that the Jews call'd Herod's Building the Second House, or Temple; and whenever they make Mention of the Third House, they mean by it that future Temple, they still expect in the Days of the Messiah.

Nay Josephus himself, upon whose Authority this Account of Herod's Temple depends, had the same Notion of the Matter, and as he call'd that which was rais'd by Solomon the first Temple; so he calls that the last, which Haggai began to build in the second Year of Cyrus. From hence 'tis manifest that he did not look upon Herod's, tho' a new Building, as a third Temple. And what should hinder us to understand the Prophet Haggai foretelling to his Countrymen, that their Messiah should appear in Person, to make them ample Amends for the Absence of the Shechinah, and fill their Temple with Glory greater than ever Solomon's could boast of, before it should be demolished by their Enemies.

Nay, it may be added, that the Temple from its first Erection by Solomon, to its final Destruction by the Roman Army, as it stood in the same Place, and was directed to the same Ends, so it seems, in the Account of the Prophet, to be one and the same House. And accordingly the Opposition of former and latter should not be applied to the House, but rather to the Glory of the House. It should not be said the Glory of this later House shall be greater than of the former ---- but --- the later Glory of this House shall be much greater than the former (Glory). Thus much seems to be collected from the Style of the Prophet at the 3d Verse; who is left among you that saw this House in her first Glory, and how do ye see it now? This House therefore is the Jewish Temple, whether built by Solomon or by Zerubbabel; and if Solomon's Structure were included in that Character, what should hinder but that Herod's might be included in it too? So that the Prophet considers the Temple as one, but in different Estates, and Promises that the latter Estate shall be most glorious. Let us see how this is found in Fact.

It is certain that the Temple rebuilt by Herod was by nothing so magnificent as Solomon's.

Neither again is the Glory of this later House, or the later Glory of this House to be sought in its Duration. For altho' we should allow, that there was a greater Difference between them in this Respect, than that trifling space of ten Years, as the Jews compute it, yet how mean a Notion must they have of Prophecy, who can imagine this to be the boasted Glory here foretold in such lofty Expressions?

For was this an Event worthy the shaking of all Nations, only that this Building might stand a few Years longer than the former? Was this that Desire of all Nations that was to come? Much less then could this make it preferable to the admirable Structure of King Solomon, and compensate for the meanness of its Utensils, and the Absence of some of its most distinguishing Privileges of the former Temple, as having now no more the sacred Fire to consume their burnt Offerings, no more the Oracle of Urim and Tbummim, no more the divine Shechinah between the Cberubim, nor the Ark of the Covenant in the most holy Place.

The Phrase of filling this House with Glory has an especial Reference to those ancient Phrases whereby the Glory of the Lord is said to have filled the Tabernacle or the Temple, Exod. xl. 34, 35. 2 Kings viii. 11. and now that ancient Glory was withdrawn, the greater Glory with which this House was to be filled, must be proportionably understood to consist in some other more sensible Appearance of the divine Majesty, and how should that be, but in the Advent of the promised Messiah? He therefore must be the Person here design'd under the Character of the Desire of all Nations, which suits well with those other Descriptions, that were given of him from the beginning. (See Gen. iii. 15. xxii. 18. Psal. lxxii. 8. Dan. vii. 14. Isai. xlix. 6. xi. 10.)

The Jews indeed, who understand this Prediction of the outward Ornaments of Use in Building, and its Utensils, would confine this Phrase to denote the precious or desirable Things of every Country, to beautify this Place of the Sanctuary of God, and to make the Place of his Feet glorious. And it cannot be denied, but by help of other Words put in Construction with it, it may sometimes signify precious Things of any Kind.

But as there is nothing in the Event to answer the Prediction so interpreted, so there is plainly no other Word put in Construction with it, to lead us to such Interpretation. But the Desire of all Nations is simply mention'd, and remains to be explained from the Analogy of other Descriptions in the Old Testament.

We have the Word expressly used of that Affection with which the People are acted towards an intended King. On whom is all the Desire of Israel? Is it not on thee, and on all thy Father's House? and when Jehoram had lost this Affection of his People, it is said that he departed without Desire, without any such loyal Dispositions to his Memory. (2 Chron. xxi. 20.) And how natural is it then to suppose, that the Messiah, who was to have an universal and prosperous Empire over the whole World, should be described under the Character of the Desire of all Nations; since all must needs wish for such Improvement as he only could give?

And Words of the like import are applied to the Messiah by Malachi iii. 1. The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his Temple, even the Messenger of the Covenant whom ye delight in, saith the Lord of Hosts. Which many of the Jews understand of the Messiah in Person. See Kimchi. Comment ad Loc.

The Privilege which is here promised at his coming, is the same which the other Prophets insist on, as the main Characteristic of the Days of the Messiah, viz. that Peace which is foretold as the great Advantage of his Government: And in this Place will I give Peace, saith the Lord of Hosts.

So great a Change was not to be effected without much Agitation and Commotion; but the State then introduced, being to be stable and perpetual, it is added, that this Commotion shall yet be but once. See Haggai ii. 6, 7. All

All this the Prophet foretels should be accomplished within the Time of the Continuance of the second Temple, as it was in those general Commotions of the World, which preceded the Empire of the Romans, and in the ensuing Publication of the Gospel-Scheme. And after such Accomplishment the Prophet Daniel has foretold, that the Jewish State should be overturn'd and Jerusalem destroyed. The Roman Army laying all desolate about them, and demolishing the Temple, was emphatically that Abomination of Desolation spoken of by Daniel, standing in the holy Place; which since it could not come, before the Desire of all Nations had appear'd, does bear a signal Testimony to the Truth of the Christian Religion, giving Proof that the Messiah is come, and that the Time of his coming is the same in which Jesus did appear.

Having shewed that the Messiah should appear before the Destruction of the second Temple; I come now,

2. To consider the precise Time; the Prophet Daniel says, that 70 Weeks were determined for that Purpose, 69 of which were to pass before the Messiah enter'd upon his Office, and in the last, he should confirm his Covenant, and be cut off in the midst of it himself.

There are two Methods made use of by this Prophet, for settling the Time of the Messiah, the one more general, the other more precise. By the first I mean that Description which is given in Nebuchadnezzar's Dream. Dan. ii. 31, &c. and in the Prophet's Vision of the Beasts. Cb. vii. 3, &c. of four successive Kingdoms, with which the Church of God should be concern'd; under the last of which another Kingdom should be erected by the God of Heaven, which though it might be suppressed for a While, yet in the End should subdue all Power to itself, and endure all Ages.

Some of these Particulars are farther explained. Ch. viii. 3, &c. xi. 2, &c. and whoever compares these Passages with the Histories of the following Times will find such evident Characters of the Chaldean, Persian, Grecian and Roman Kingdoms, and of the Christian Dispensation commencing under the last, and putting a Period to all, that he must conclude a Prediction so punctual in its Circumstances, and so exactly fulfilled in the Event of Things, is a most weighty Argument for the Truth of our Religion, a Demonstration from Experience of what is past, for the Truth of what is still expected.

But though this Prediction will fix the coming of Christ to the Days of the Roman Empire, there is another in the same Prophet, which does more directly point out the Period of Time, in which he should appear, and after which the holy City should undergo its final Desolation, to endure till that Consummation of Ages, to which the glorious Restoration of Israel is refer'd, and their Incorporation into one Body with the Faithful gather'd out of all Nations. See Dan. ix. 24. 27.

The Person who is in this Passage described under the joint Titles of Messiah the Prince at the 25th Verse, and under each of those Titles separately in the Verse following, I take to be no other than that great Deliverer, whose Office, and Character had been gradually unfolded by the former Prophets, the Nagid, the Prince is a Title by which Isaiab described him. See Isai. lv. 4. 1 Chron. v. 2. And then for the other Title of Messiah, or Anointed, though it be elsewhere applied to other eminent Persons, upon Account of the Unction to some high Office, or as Types of that more eminent one to come, yet being used there by way of Distinction, inction it can be refer'd to none but him, whom the Jews from that Time expected under no Character so much as that of Messiah or the Christ.

Besides the Things which are here foretold of this Messiah Nagid that he should be cut off, and that the Jews should be no more his People, but another People be surrogated in their Room, call'd here the Nagid's People that shall come, or his future People, are no other than what we find mention'd by other Prophets, with Respect to the Son of David.

Nor are they who contend for any other Interpretation either agreed with one another, or consistent with themselves in the fixing of this Character. Sometimes the Messiah the Prince, (See Sir John Marsbam) in the 25th Verse is some extraordinary Person; and yet it is insisted that the Messiah to be cut off, in the next Verse, is not the Character of any singular Person, but attributed to the Temple, and Priethood which was cut off, or interrupted by the Profanation of Antiochus. At other Times, Messiah the Prince shall be Cyrus, or Zerubbabel, or Josua the High-Priest. Messiah to be cut off Agrippa Minor, the last of the Jewish Kings. And the Nagid or Prince mention'd afterwards, shall be Titus at the Head of the Roman Army marching to destroy Jerusalem. But 'tis impossible by any Computation of these Weeks to point out Cyrus or Zerubbabel; and Agrippa could not possibly be the Messiah cut off, because he survived the sacking of Jerusalem, and enjoyed the Favour of the Romans.

Mean while I accept of this Concession made by Jews, that the Desolation here foretold was effected by the Roman Army, and not the Profanation of Antiochus. For however the Abomination of Desolation, or the Wing of Abominations making desolate, may

may be reasonably understood of an Army of Idolaters, with the Images of their Idols painted on their Colours, and is applied by Daniel xi. 31. and in 1 Macc. i. 54. to the Army of Antiochus; yet here it must be understood of a greater and more lasting Desolation, such as should endure until the Consummation, and that determined, shall be poured upon the desolate, or Desolators. And what other should this be but the Desolation of the Roman Army, which has lasted nigh 1700 Years; and therefore we may suppose will last till the Consummation, when the calling of the Gentiles shall be compleat, the Enemies of the Church destroyed, and the Jews received into Favour.

Our Saviour speaks of it, Matt. xxiv. 15. as future, and the Event falling out so exactly agreeable to his Prediction, affords a strong Argument for the Truth of his Interpretation. And St. Luke, in representing this Discourse of our Lord, has more clearly expressed the Matter to our purpose, paraphrasing as it were the Words of Daniel. (See Luke xxi. 20.

All these are such Characters as strongly argue for the Christian Exposition, and yet to these it may be added, that the Benefits here promised point out the Offices of the Messiah, and cannot be ascribed to any one else. Whom else may we expect but the Lord our Righteousness, who is at the same Time that righteous Servant, Isa. liii. 11. that is to justify many, and to bear their Iniquities?

Whom else may we expect to finish the Transgression and to make an End of Sins, by making Reconciliation for Iniquity, and bringing in everlasting Righteousness? Who else should cause the Sacrifice to cease, but he who made himself an Offering for Sin? Who else can be supposed to seal up Vision and Prophecy, but he who was the Subject of the Prophecies, and in whose coming they are accomplished? Lastly, Who is that Most Holy here said to be anointed, but the same, who in the Verses following is emphatically stiled the Messiah or anointed. And whom the Prophets have described as being anointed of the Lord to preach the Gospel or good Tydings to the Meek.

This last Clause indeed the Jews contend should be understood of a material Unction and that not of a Person, but of the inmost Sanctuary, called the Holy of Holies. But because the want of the holy anointing Oyl is reckoned by the Jews among the Defects of the second Temple, to avoid this Difficulty, they understand the Sanctuary here to be anointed to belong to the third Temple, which they expect in the Days of the Messiah. To which I reply, that as it is impossible for them to fix on any Computation of Time, which will suit with that Hypothesis, so it would draw with it this most terrible Consequence, that there is another Desolation and Captivity to be expected, subsequent to the building of that other Temple, and which must endure till the Consummation.

Nor can the Holy of Holies be here taken typically, either for Heaven itself, which our Priest has enter'd into, and has prepared for us, and which answers to Moses's consecrating the typical Sanctuary with Oil; nor else, for the Christian Church, which Christ has anointed, that is, consecrated in the room of the Jewish, by his Blood has purchased, and by his Grace directs: For as that illustrious Person, who is the general Subject of all the Prophets, has in the following Verses the Title of Messiah, I would explain this Phrase by an Allusion to the same Character, as speaking of the Unction of that most holy One.

Being convinced then by all these Considerations, that this most signal Prophecy of Daniel, refers to the Time of Christ's coming in the Flesh, it remains that we examine into the Period of Time prefixed for this great Occurrence. Seventy Weeks are determined upon thy People, and upon thy holy City. By Weeks is here understood Weeks of Years, which is both agreeable to the Prophetic Style, in which it is usual to count a Day for a Year, and seems to be intimated by the Prophet himself, when speaking of the Vulgar Weeks, he terms it a Week of Days, as it were on Purpose to distinguish it from the Week of Years in the foregoing Chapter. Now seventy Weeks, or seventy times seven Years amount to 490, or if you reduce them to Jubilees, there may be one Year added for every Jubilee, that is ten, which will bring the Computation to 500 Years.

These Weeks now were to be computed from the going forth of the Commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, that is, from the Promulgation of some royal Edict to grant leave for the Jews to return and build their City. But as there were four different Edicts of the Kings of Persia, which concerned this Restauration of the Jews, the first by Cyrus, the second by Darius, and two more by Artaxerxes, it has been disputed which of these should be the Epocha of Daniel's Weeks; from whence we are to reckon to the Time of the Messiah. And it has been a Matter of Doubt, what Darius might be meant in the sacred History, whether Hystaspis or Notbus; and what Artaxerxes, whether Longimanus or Mnemon. Moreover as this Computation is made by Weeks or Sabbaths of Years, it may be questioned whether they should take rise immediately from the Promulgation of such Edict, or rather be postponed till the Observation of Sabbatic Years was restored, and from thence computed to the Term of their Completion. Farther as the Angel in Daniel has divided his Period into the distinct Intervals of seven seven Weeks, sixty two, and one, it has been questioned, whether he means they should all be numbered in one continued Succession, or whether it might not be equitable to suppose an Omission, for some Years between those several Intervals.

It may also be disputed, whether they should terminate in the Birth, or Ministry, or Excision of the Messiah, or be so extended, as to take into the last Week, the Overthrow of Jerusalem.

These are such Difficulties, as may reasonably create some Variety of Opinions. But as it would be Matter of too great Length to enquire into the Merit of these Controversies, so the Main of the Argument would not be affected by the Issue of such Enquiry, so long as we are allowed, that the coming of the Messiah was meant to be pointed out by this Period. For whatever be determined about those other Questions, thus much is certain, that the Date of this Prophecy must long since have expired, that more than two thousand Years have passed since the Commencement of it, and that the Term of its Completion would fall much about that Age of the World when Jesus lived: That the Excision of Messiah should be followed by the final Desolation of Jerusalem, and if both did not fall within the 70 Weeks, yet neither could be long after them.

It appears evidently from the new Testament, from Josephus and the Pagan Historians that the Jews about the Time of Christ's Birth and from thence to the Sacking of the City, expected his coming with the greatest Impatience. And when they saw the Destruction of their City, without finding their Expectations answer'd, they were in the darkest Doubt and Hesitation, they became an easy Prey to Impostors. (Vid. Othonis Hist. Doctor. Misnicor. p. 109.)

With

With what an Air of Desperation was that Complaint anciently made, that all the Characters of Time were compleated, and yet the Son of David was not come? And if of late the Jews abide not by the old Interpretation of the Prophets, they yet in effect give up the Cause, and confess the Time to be expired for his Advent, when they pronounce a Curse on those, who shall presume a Calculation, destroying hereby the End of such Predictions, and giving Reason to suspect, that their present Belief is not consistent with those ancient Promises, upon which it should be founded. For to what End should God acquaint his People with this Time of their Salvation, but to teach them to rejoice in the Continuance of their outward Privileges, and to aspire after those spiritual ones to be enjoyed under him, to expose the Folly of all vain Impostors, and point out the real Object of their Hopes? And should they then neglect to improve his Mercy to this gracious End? Should they not advance their Hopes, as that Time drew nearer on, and believe in him as their promised Messiah, in whose Advent it was finally completed?

If then upon the best Calculation we find the Time to be expired, from hence we are to collect, that the Promise is fulfilled, that the Messiah is come, and answer'd what was written of him by the ancient Prophets.

'Tis but a weak Evasion of the Jews, to say that their Sins are the Occasion of this Delay. The Promises of his Coming have no such Limitation to confine them. The Time was precisely determin'd; and the Wickedness of the People was so far from hindering his appearing, that the Prophets have most clearly foretold the Vices of the Age he should appear in, and the Indignities they would offer him. And Abarbanel says, that tho' this Condition of Repentance

Repentance be not fulfilled, he must come at the appointed Time.

This shews another weak Pretence which the Jews have recourse to, viz. That the Messiah did really come within the Time appointed, but he hid himself from an unworthy People. For he was not only to come in the Flesh, but to execute his Office; and tho' he might not be own'd by a sinful Nation, yet he was so far to appear among them, as might expose him to that Contempt which the Prophets had foretold. He was to come, and to be cut off; he was to make Reconciliation for Iniquity, and to bring in everlasting Righteousness. He was to suffer from his Enemies for a little Time, and come off at last with Glory. Which shews again the Weakness of another Jewish Pretence, that their State at present is neither good enough nor bad enough for his appearing, which must be in a Generation either altogether sinful or righteous. 'Tis certain that when the Fulness of Time was come, he shewed himself faithful who had promised, by sending his Son to take human Flesh upon him, to submit to the Discipline, and fulfil the End of the Mosaic Law, for the Salvation of such as expected him.

Having shewed that the Coming of the Messiah was to be in a precise Number of Years; I proceed

3. To shew, that it should be after the Preaching of a certain Messenger, and here I shall consider,

I. What Grounds there were for this Expectation.

II. What was the Business of this Messenger; and,

III. How this was accordingly fulfilled in John the Baptist.

I. As to the Grounds of such Expectation, there are three Passages in the Old Testament, which intimate some Harbinger of the Messiah. The first is that that of Isaiab, which the Baptist has applied to himself. The Voice of him that crieth in the Wilderness, &c. Isaiab xl. 3, 4, 5. This Passage very clearly alludes to the Preparation that is usual to be made by mending of the Ways for the Entry of Princes. And that the Prince, here intended, is the Messiah, appears from these Words; the Glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all Flesb shall see it together. The Glory of the Lord signifies the bright Appearance of the divine Presence in the ancient Sanctuary. And when in reference to that, there is a greater Glory foretold to be manifested to the Gentiles; it means the glorious Days of the Messiah, which are elsewhere drawn out under the like stupendous Characters. The Messiah therefore is that Jehovah, that Lord, whose Way is here to be prepared; and before whom a Voice or Preacher was to be sent out.

That this is the natural Account of that Prediction of Isaiab may be cleared from another of Malachi, which St. Mark, Ch. i. 2, 3. has joined with it; in which the Messenger to be sent must be the same with the Voice in the forgoing Prophecy, because the Office of both was, to prepare the way of the Lord. And that the Lord, whose way should be prepared, was the Messiah, may be gathered from those Characters of their seeking and delighting in him, and his coming suddenly to his Temple.

Accordingly Jewish Expositors do admit this to be a Prediction of the Messiah. Whom then do they suppose to be this Messenger sent before his Face? Some will have it to be Malachi himself, whose Name signifies Messenger, and who being last of the Jewish Prophets and nearest to him, is therefore said to go before his Face. Others understand it of Messiah the Son of Joseph, whom they expect to come before the Son of David, and be slain. But as the Notion of a double Messiah has been confuted; they are most right, sight, who understand this Messenger to be the same Person who is called Elijah in the Chapter following, where we have the last Description of this Harbinger. Behold, I will send you Elijah the Prophet before the coming of the great and terrible Day of the Lord; and he shall turn the Heart of the Fathers to the Children, and the Heart of the Children to their Fathers, lest I come and smite the Earth with a Curse.

That the coming of Messiah which brings Joy and Gladness to such as look for his Salvation, will nevertheless be dreadful to Opposers, especially as it is opened by the Prophet Daniel, and more fully in the Gospel itself, to include his second coming to judge the World. Now as these two Advents are for the most Part not distinguished in the Old Testament, but the whole Oeconomy of the Messiah is spoken of as one entire State of Things, it is no Wonder if that same Harbinger, who is elsewhere promised to go before the Lord, whom they sought and delighted in, should here be reckoned to precede the great and dreadful Day of the Lord.

He is called Elijah the Prophet, and it appears from the New Testament as well as other Evidences to have been a common Opinion of the ancient Jews that that very Prophet should return in Person to anoint Messiah to his Office, and manifest him to his People. But as the Allusion of a Name may be easily supposed without Identity of Person; and as Christ has been promised under the Name of David, without designing to intimate that David should return; so some of the Jews have had the same Candour to allow the same with Respect to this Promise of Elijah for his Harbinger: that it should not be Elijah himself, but some great Prophet like him, and called by that Name, for his declaring the Knowledge and Name of God. And Menaffab Ben-Israel infists upon this only as certain, that there must come a Forerunner, to incline and create better Dispositions in Men. So that the Allusion to the Name of Elijah may import no more than his Resemblance of that Prophet in the Manner of his Life, and in the Tendency of his Doctrine, that he should come in the Power and Spirit of Elias. And this leads me,

II. To consider what was his Office. Which is twofold. 1. To point out the Meffiab. 2. To instruct the People, or incline them with Dispositions to receive him.

I. To point out the Meffiab.

This is implied under the Phrases of preparing his Way, and being sent before him. After a long Interruption of the Order of Prophets, it was suitable to the Dignity of the Meffiab's Character, that one more than a Prophet should be sent to signify the Approach of so great a Deliverer. When he designed to visit and adorn his Temple with his glorious Prefence, it was fit that some one should give Notice of his coming to accomplish the ritual Worship, and declare him to be the Person that had been figured out by the legal Expiations. Lastly since the End of his coming was to take Vengeance on his Enemies, and to effect the Salvation of his chosen People, it was proper that this great and dreadful Day of the Lord should be notified, that he was coming with a Fan in his Hand, and would thoroughly purge his Floor, gathering the Wheat into his Garner, but burning up the Chaff with Fire unquenchable. By such Notices, he would not only point out the Person and Offices of the Meffiab, but at the same Time instruct his People with what Dispositions to receive him. Which is expressed by the Prophet Malachi; He shall turn the Heart of the Fathers to the Children and the Hearts of the Children to their Fathers. See Luke i. 16, 17. Such then is the Character and Office of the Messiah's Harbinger. It remains to be enquired in the

III. Third Place, how this was fulfilled in John Baptist.

Tho' Elijah the Tisbite did not come in Person, yet there are such Lines of Resemblance between him and the Baptist, as may justify such Application of his Name.

The Austerity and Reservedness of his Life was one considerable Argument of such Resemblance. But the Tendency and Purport of his Doctrine, the Opposition which he made to prevailing Prejudices and Corruptions of the Jews, did at once answer the Character of Elijah, who so zealously endeavoured the Reformation of the People from Baalitical Idolatry, and likewise to those Predictions which have been produced of the Messiah's Harbinger, and the Nature of his Office to regulate such Things, as were irregular, and correct the perverse Wills and Dispositions of Men. See Mat. iii. where after he had obviated the reigning Prejudices of the Times, and had prepared an easy Way to encourage their Belief in the Messiah, as a Person quickly coming after him; he let them know that his coming which gave such Satisfaction to them who did rejoice in his Salvation, would yet be great and terrible to them who improved not by his Influence, when he should come, not only in Mercy to save his faithful Servants, but in Vengeance to consume his Enemies.

It is true indeed, that former Prophets too, as well as John Baptist did in some Sort prepare the Way of Christ, both by directing the People to believe in him, and teaching the Necessity of Repentance and inward Piety. But they did not so boldly warn the People how vain those Confidences were, by which they flattered themselves in being the holy Seed of Abraham. They did not so clearly discover to them the Inefficacy of a bare, tho' nice Observance, of the Mosaic Ordinances. They did not set before their Eyes that unquenchable Fire, prepared for ungodly Men and Hypocrites. Nor did they press the Necessity of Repentance, by this strongest Motive, the Kingdom of Heaven being then at Hand. Consequently they could not be said like him to go before the Face of the Lord.

So far we have seen how the Baptist did fulfill the Character, and answer the ancient Predictions of the Messiah's Harbinger; but there are two Objections to be made against it, which I will remove.

1. It is objected that the Baptist himself did expressly disclaim this Character. John i. 21. When the Jews sent Priests and Levites to ask him, whether he were Elias, and he said I am not. But to this I answer, that though the Baptist said he was not that real Elias whom they expected; yet nevertheless he was that Prophet Elijah designed by Malachi, i. e. one fitly resembling that ancient Prophet, by coming in the Spirit and Power of Elias. And that he was so in Reality he declared, when at the same Time he applied to himself this Prophecy of the illustrious Forerunner. I am the Voice of one crying in the Wilderness, &c. John i. 23.

2. It is objected that St. John did not fulfill those Predictions of Elias, which have been recited; that his Preaching had no such Efficacy as those Passages had promised; that he did not restore all Things; that he did not turn the Hearts of the Fathers to the Children, and the disobedient to the Wisdom of the Just. For the Jews were hardened against his Doctrine, attached to all their old Prejudices, and rejected that Person, whom he is said to introduce. To this I answer, that the

Baptist's

Baptist's Doctrine was agreeable to that which the Scriptures had foretold of the Messiah's Harbinger, that he converted great Multitudes of common People and some of the Pharisees and Scribes, who submitted to his Baptism, and learnt of him to believe in him, that should come after him. That finally there were no Grounds to expect that the Success of his Ministry should be universal, since in this Case there had been no Room for that severe Denunciation of the Prophet, that this Day of the Lord shall be great, and terrible to burn up as an Oven all that do wickedly: So that it will be reasonable here to take the Angel's Exposition: Many of the Children of Israel shall be turn to the Lord, their God.

But as we are taught to expect a second Coming of Christ, which is more emphatically stiled the Times of Restitution of all Things; what if we should suppose, that there should be also a second Coming of his Harbinger, when this Part of his Office, shall more eminently be fulfilled in the restoring of all Things and making ready a People prepared for the Lord? But I will not insist upon a disputable Point, when I think there is enough to be alledged of what is clear to give us Satisfaction.

In stating the Evidences of the Gospel Scheme, as they were gradually opened to those Ages before Christ, I had Occasion to make mention of the Law of Moses, as a standing Prophecy of his Office and Character. And if it be admitted, which I have shewn, that the Nation of the Jews was figurative of the Christian Church; and consequently that the more remarkable of God's Dealings towards them were Types of his future Acting through Christ; there is no Doubt but the Dispensation of the Law, among the Rest, should be referred to the same stupendous Oeconomy, and designed as well to point out, as to make some present Application to faithful Men, of the Discipline and Benefits of the Messiah. But as this is a Matter of great Concern, and which adds the greatest Beauty to the Writings of the Old Testament, at the same Time that it confirms the New; I will state it at large, and in Order to treat it with the greatest Ease, I shall digest what I have to say under the three following Heads.

198 The gradual Revelation of the Gospel.

I. I shall explain the Antithesis between the Law and the Gospel.

II. I shall shew that the Mosaic Law was not to be of perpetual Obligation, but served as a preparatory Discipline to lead Men to the Gospel, and was to terminate in the Days of the Messiah.

III. I shall explain how it served this Purpose by its Types, which foreshewed the Office and Character of the Messiah, and made such Application of his Benefits as was suited to that Age of the World, and proportioned to the Faith and Sincerity of its Observers.

I. I will explain the Antithesis between the Law and the Gospel. Which lies in three Particulars.

1. In the Titles and Characters of both; the one is termed the Law, the other is described to be Grace and Truth.

2. In the Method of their Dispensation; the one is said to be given, the other to come or to be effected. And

3. In the different Authors of them: the one was given by Moses; the other came by Jesus Christ.

I. Let us attend to the Characters of both: the one is termed the Law, the other is described to be Grace and Truth. John i. 17.

By the Law we understand that System of Precepts which was given to the People of Israel. Now as the Precepts contained in this Law are of different Kinds, so they are called by different Names, the Commandments or Testimonies, the Statutes and Judgments. And considering Men have treated, agreeable to this, the Law of Moses under three Heads, the Moral, the Ceremonial, and the Judicial, or Forensic.

By the moral Law we are used to understand those Precepts which are founded in known Principles of Nature; and tho' this Law differs only in the Method of Promulgation from the Dictates of right Reason, yet considering the Corruption of Mankind, by which the Reasonings of Men were perplexed, and the Light of Nature extinguished, it was no small Advantage to the Jews, that their Duty in these Matters were set right by a new Revelation, in clearer Characters than their own Reason could suggest.

The ceremonial Law is that which prescribes the Rites and Ceremonies of religious Worship, and some of a more private Nature correspondent to it. Which Rites were typical of future Benefits, and pointed out the same Truths which should be afterwards unfolded by Messiah himself.

The judicial Law concerned the Constitution of Government, the settling of Property and the Administration of Justice.

But Moses has not particularly digested them under these Heads, but has so intermixed them together, that we may observe the same Law to partake of the Moral, Ceremonial and Political.

However the Jews may from hence be led to look upon them as of one Purport and Obligation; yet upon a careful Examination we may observe a manifest Difference between them, and where the same Law is compounded of different Parts, to separate what is moral from the ceremonial, and those political Rules which are founded in Nature, from those which respect the Jewish Oeconomy. Even the Decalogue itself, however justly computed a Compendium of the moral Law, is not without some Mixture both of the political and ceremonial Kind.

The fourth Command, for Instance, besides that Vacancy from Business which natural Light would prescribe for the Celebration of divine Worship, has something typical and ceremonial in it, viz. the special Observation of the seventh Day, signifying God's resting from the Work of Creation, his delivering the Israelites from their Bondage, that Delight he takes in his Elect, which is proposed as an eternal Sabbath to his chosen People. Withal it has something political or judicial, both as it prescribes a Vacancy from worldly Cares, and also as its Observation is enforced with Death. Numb. xv. 32. 36.

So again the fifth Commandment is moral as it requires Children to give Honour to their Parents; it is political as it contains a Promise of the Land of Canaan. And it has something ceremonial, inasmuch as Canaan figured out a better Country. i. e. an heavenly: And was annexed both as a Memorial of those Promises, and that salutary Doctrine which was given to the Church.

Once more the Law against Murder is plainly moral: but the Penalty was of a judicial Nature, as the Cities of Refuge protecting the involuntary Manslayer till the Death of the high Priest, which set him free, were typical or ceremonial respecting Christ our great high Priest, by whose Death we are delivered from the Guilt of Sin, and protected from the Malice of the Devil.

From

From all this it will be easily understood, that tho' the whole Law of Moses may in some Sense be reckoned to refer to Christ, as it served to keep up a select Body of Men, who were trained up in Expectation of him, and likewise as it shewed the Curse, from which we wanted something to deliver us, yet it was the ceremonial Law which did especially point out the Benefits of his Redemption, and is therefore meant as the Law given by Moses, in Contradistinction to that Grace and Truth which came by Jesus Christ. We will distinctly state this Opposition under both Particulars.

The Grace of the Gospel either implies our Justification and Forgiveness of Sins; or else the supernatural Gifts and Graces of the Holy Ghost. In the former Acceptation we are said to be justified freely by his Grace, Rom. iii. 24. Eph. i. 6, 7. ii. 4, 7.

In this View the Grace or Mercy of God is opposed as well to any Merit in Works, as to any real Efficacy of the legal Expiations, to import that our Salvation could not be effected by our Care, but solely by the Favour of God manifested to us through Jesus Christ. Eph. ii. 8, 9.

And hence it is easy to discern how the Grace which came by Jesus Christ could never be attained by the Law of Moses. The Imperfection of human Nature must needs disqualify us for discharging any perfect Obedience to the moral Law; here therefore was Need of Pardon to them who owed an Obedience which they could not discharge. To this the ceremonial Law pointed out the Way by Types, and by symbolical Atonements prepared the Way for that real Atonement, which alone can take away Sin. But the Victims of the Law could not make him that did the Service perfect as pertaining to the Conscience. Heb. ix. 9. x. 4.

Herein

Herein therefore the Mosaic Law gives place to the Grace and Mercy of the Gospel, by which all who believe are justified from all Things. Acts xiii. 39. Heb. ix. 14. A Privilege which the first Christians were forbidden to expect from the legal Institutions; and to as many as pretended to look after Forgiveness from a Law which could not justify. Christ is declared to be of none Effect to them. Rom. iii. 20. 1 Pet. i. 10. 2 Tim. i. 9.

But besides this Sense of Justification, and Forgiveness, the Grace of the Gospel is otherwise understood to denote the Gifts of the Holy Ghost, whether inwardly sanctifying the Affections of Men, or endowing them with extraordinary Abilities. Rom. xii. 6. 1 Pet. iv. 10. 2 Pet. iii. 18. Now this Gift of the Spirit is promised as the Consequence of Faith in Christ. John vii. 38. Now the Law of Moses in its literal View undertook for no such Benefit, but strictly prescribed the Duties to the Transgressors; whereas the Gospel not only promises Pardon for past Offences, but offers Aid for future Obedience.

Indeed the old Church was not entirely destitute of the Gifts and Graces of the Spirit, but as the one were less frequent, and the other less clear, so they were neither of them properly contained in the Law as given by Moses, but distinct from it, and as it were the Dawnings of the Gospel. The Letter of the Law (which is what was properly given by Moses) prescribed the Use of outward Ordinances, which were attended with an outward Efficacy.

But if we look to the inward or spiritual Blessings designed by them, in that View it differed nothing from the Gospel itself, which gives as it were Life and Spirit to the Law, and has been all along the same, tho' not delivered in every Age with the same Clearness.

Clearness. The Gospel we have seen was preached to our first Parents, and after that to Abraham; and as the Prescription of Sacrifice and Circumcision in their Days did not, so neither could the Mosaic Institutions be afterwards meant to disannul such gracious Promises. Nay it will appear that those ritual Institutions were designed to figure out the Grace and Mercy of the Gospel: which while it argues the Weakness of the Law by itself, implies the abundant Efficacy of the Grace of Christ, and teaches us that what that did in Types, he has done in Truth. St. Paul says, that the Law had only a Shadow of good Things to come, but not the very Image of the Things. The good Things to come seem here to intend that future Inheritance of everlasting Glory, in Respect of which Christ is termed an High Priest of good Things to come. Of these now we under the Gospel enjoy that very or true Image; whereas the Law had only the Shadow and gave but an imperfect Prospect of the future Happiness by figurative and dark Representations.

Or if the good Things to come be taken for the whole Christian Priesthood and Sacrifice, and all that Christ suffered in Order to perfect our Redemption, then we have the very Substance of those good Things of which the Law was but a faint Shadow. The Jewish Tabernacle and Temple (as will appear hereafter) were only figurative of the heavenly Sanctuary, into which Christ as our Forerunner hath already entered: so again the legal Purifications which only purified the Flesh, foreshewed the Blood of Christ which should purge our Consciences from dead Works. So the annual Atonement figured out that eternal Atonement made by Christ. And the Admission of the People in the Service of the Tabernacle, when cleansed by legal Sacrifices, denotes our Right to enter into Heaven, when cleansed by by the Blood of Jesus. So that the Truth in this Case is to be looked for in the Gospel, but the Shadow of it was the Subject of the Law. And as the Thing prefigured was often something done by Christ in Person, the Truth is in this Respect very emphatically said to be effected by him. Take and sacrifice a Lamb for your Houses, says the Law. But Christ became himself the very Paschal Lamb, the Truth intended by that Figure, and offer'd up himself. Again it is written in the Law, Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the Words of this Law, Deut. xxviii. 26. But Christ has redeemed us from the Curse of the Law, being made a Curse for us, Gal. iii. 13.

After all this Enlargement upon the Titles or Characters of the two Oeconomies, in that one is termed the Law, and the other described to be Grace and Truth, I proceed,

2. To say something concerning the Method of their Dispensation, in that one is said to be given, the other to be effected. The Law was only given, i. e. issued out or delivered by Moses, but the very Thing intended by it, that Pardon and Salvation, which it could only notify by Types and Figures, was the Grace and Truth which was effected by Jesus Christ. In him all the Promises of God are yea, and Amen. The Law made nothing perfect; but the Gospel shadow'd by it did, by giving Foundation for a better Hope than the Letter of the Law contain'd, and really effecting that Salvation which the Law typified. It then remains now,

3. To say something in few Words of the different Authors or Promulgers of these two Oeconomies, Moses and Christ.

Moses verily was faithful in all his House; but as a Servant. He did not give Laws in his own Name; but as he continued some Ceremonies which had been anciently used, as Circumcision and Sacrifice, and established others which were new ; so he delivered them as the Result of divine Appointment, and generally referr'd to the same End of Religion, which had been always in view, to keep up the Hope of a promised Redeemer. From hence we may collect, that the outward Observances of these Ceremonies could not be necessary in themselves, inasmuch as it had not been requir'd in all Ages, and was then only subservient to a future Good, and when that should be attained, be of no farther Use. But Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and to-day, and for ever ; the Benefits of his Redemption is the Foundation of revealed Religion, and runs thro' every Oeconomy of Worship, which God has been pleased to prescribe from the beginning, Rev. xiii. 8. So that the Christian Religion was taught from the Time of Man's Apostacy, and tho' the outward Shell might be Matter of temporary Institution, yet the inward Design of it was that same Grace and Truth, which has Jesus for its Author, and is of unalterable Benefit. I come now to the

2. Second Head, Which was to shew that the Mosaic Law was not designed to have a perpetual Obligation, but served as a preparatoy Discipline to lead Men to the Gospel. And to do this with the better Dispatch, I shall,

1. Overthrow the Jewish Arguments for the opposite Opinion ; then,

2. Propose those by which our own is supported.

1. First therefore, I begin with examining those Arguments which are alledged by the modern Jews both from Reason and Scripture, to assert the perpetual Obligation of the Law of Moses.

1. As to those Arguments which are drawn from Reason, the Sum of them amounts to this, that the Law of the Lord is perfect, the Result of that divine Wisdom, which is unchangeable, and directed to an End which is always necessary, viz. to promote the Happiness and Good of Men.

To which I answer, that tho' God's Wisdom is unchangeable, and his Laws the Result of such consummate Wisdom, yet they have not the same absolute Perfection; because they relate to Men, who are mutable and finite Beings. From whence many Grounds of Variation may arise with respect to Time and Place, and other Circumstances; and for that Reason, because the Author is invariable, he may chuse to make some Alteration in his Laws, that they may better suit the alterable State of Mankind. This can be no Argument of Mutability in God, but of the most constant and tenderest Regard to the Weakness and Necessity of Men.

Accordingly we find in Fact, that some of his Laws have been differently suited to the Circumstance of Time and Opportunity.

Thus different Precepts were prescribed to Adam, Noah, Abraham, and the Israelites; and if then it be no Impeachment of the Divine Wisdom that those Rites were not prescribed to the first Ages of the World, there can be no arguing from Reason, that future Ages may not be released from them again.

Nay Maimonides himself has ascribed such Causes or Reasons for divers Institutions, as are plainly of an alterable Kind, and may serve to intimate, that when those Reasons ceased, it could be no way unworthy of God to set aside the Institution. The first Intention of the Law, he says, was to root out all Remains of Idolatry, Divination, and Enchantment: And though the true Worship of God consists in the inward Love and Fear of him, yet, he says, many external Rites were added in Opposition to the Rites of the Zabians. Since then the Rites, against which they were levelled, are now forgotten, why should it be urged as any Proof of Incon-

Inconstancy, if God sees fit to abrogate the Precepts, as of no longer Use.

But upon the Christian Scheme this Argument may be farther push'd. The Law was intended for a School-master to lead to Christ, but when he was come in Person, there was no more Occasion for a School-master. It was not then for the Dishonour of the Law, that its ritual Injunctions were no longer necessary; their End was served, and they expired of Course. It can be no Argument of change in God, that those ritual Precepts are rather obsolete, than abrogated; that those Institutions, which were not good in themselves, but only expedient for a time, are no longer exacted since that Time expired, and their Expediency has ceased. For this Reason the Gospel is so far from pretending to be a new or different Law, as to any essential Parts of Duty, that it even ventures to establish itself upon the old Foundation, and appeals to Moses for the Proof and Confirmation of it. Heb. iii. 5. And for that Reason taxes the Jews for not believing Moses, because they believed not Jesus of whom he wrote. John v. 46. vii. 17. v. 39. I come now, II. To consider what the Jews have to offer for the Perpetuity of the Law, from the Scriptures.

The first Text alledged to this Purpose, is that of Deut. xii. 32. What Thing soever I command you, observe to do it; thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it. From whence Maimonides concludes that the Mosaick Law is neither capable of Increase nor Diminution. But no more can be understood from this Text, than that Men shall not add nor diminish for their own Pleasure, but by no means to exclude God from making such Alterations.

The next Text urged by him, is Deut. xxx. 12. It is not in Heaven, that thou shouldst say who shall go up for us to Heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may bear it and do it? Which he would have meant that there was no new Law to be expected from Heaven. Whereas this Place neither respects the Change nor the Duration of the Law. But as Moses was exhorting them to Obedience, so he enforces his Advice from the Easiness of complying with it, in that this Word was neither bidden, nor far off, neither in Heaven, nor beyond the Sea, but very nigh unto them, in their Mouth and in their Heart, that they might do it.
may

Malachi iv. 4. Remember ye the Law of Moses, my Servant, which I commanded to him in Horeb, for all Israel, with the Statutes and Judgments, is sometimes mentioned to the same Purpose; but as there is plain Reason to be given from the Degeneracy of the People, at that Time, from their being newly returned from Captivity, to the Opportunities of publick Worship, and from the near Expiration of Prophecy, why they should then more particularly be required to look to the Mosaic Institutions, as the Rule then in force, without implying them to be absolutely immutable; so indeed the following Words do rather intimate there was a Day a coming, when a new Direction might be reasonably expected, which should be preceded by the Coming of Elias.

The Argument from these Passages is inconsiderable; but there is more Appearance of Solidity, in what is argued from Deut. xxix. 29. Those Things which are revealed belong unto us, and to our Children for ever, that we may do all the Words of the Law. And this seems to be greatly confirmed by such other Passages, where any of the ritual Institutions are prescribed to be a Covenant for ever. (See Gen. xvii. 13. Exod. xxxi. 16, 17. —xii. 14. 17. 24. Levit. iii. 17. —vi. 18. 22. —vii. 34. 36. —x. 9. 15. —xvi. 29. 31. 34. —xvii. 14. 21. 31. 41. —xxiv.

3. 8, 9. —xxv. 34. Exod. xxvii. 21. —xxviii. 41. —xxix. 2. 28. —xxx. 21. —xl. 15. Numb. x. 8. —xv. 15. —xviii. 8. 11. 19. 23. —xxv. 13. —xix. 10. 21.) From all which Places, the Zealots of the old Law argued, that the Law was to be perpetual.

But in answer to all this, it has been justly observed by Jewish as well as Christian Writers, that the Words olam and l'olam, or ad olam, which we render for ever, do properly signify for the Age; which will admit of very different Interpretations according to the Nature of the Things, to which it is applied. Thus when Jehovah is stiled the everlasting God, or the God of the Age, we understand that Age, to be as unlimited as his Existence; which is eternal. But when Hannah devoted Samuel to appear before the Lord, for the Age, (which we translate for ever) she could not possibly mean it beyond the Term of Life.

So likewise when the Servant refused to accept of his Liberty, the Law prescribed that he should be to his Master Ebed Olam a Servant of the Age or for ever: But this could not extend beyond the Life of the Servant. Nay the Jews generally agree it could not extend beyond the Year of Jubilee.

I would mention but two Places more, and they respect a limited Duration for time past. The first is, that of Proverbs xxii. 28. Remove not the ancient Land-mark, which thy Fathers have set. The Hebrew is the Bound of the Age, which (if we render it conformably to other Places) will be the everlasting Bound, and yet it means only for a long time. The other is that of the Prophet Jeremy, Chap. ii. 20. For of Old (in Hebrew from the Age) I have broken thy Yoke and burst thy Bands, and thou saidst I will not transgress, which cannot possibly be carried beyond the Time when Israel became a Nation, and suffered Punishment for their Iniquities.

The Jews have a Tradition which they refer to the House of Eleasar, that Netzabb, Selab and Ad are Words of a stricter Import; and in all Places where they occur, there is intended a continual Duration without end; since therefore, no one of these Words is ever used in all that Variety of Places, which prescribe the Ceremonies of the Law, but only the Word Olam, which appears in many Places to have a limited Signification, 'tis not improbable, that it is here also used in a restrained Acceptation, and means a Continuance of long standing, but short of everlasting.

Now though it is not demonstratively certain from all this, that where the Phrase is applied to the Mosaick Institutions, it must needs be understood of a limited Duration; yet it is evident however, that we are not obliged to understand it of such as is to continue throughout all Ages. And if the Phrase does admit of Limitations, what should hinder us from applying them in this Case?

But then especially, if it should appear, there is any allowed Acceptation of the Word Olam, which is applicable to such limited Duration of the Mosaick Institutions; in such Case it will be highly probable, that this is the Acceptation intended in such Passages; and so what the Jews are used to glory in as an invincible Proof of the Perpetuity of the Law, will become almost an Argument against it.

There is a celebrated Distinction among the Jewish Writers between this Age or World, and the Age or World to come; by this latter meaning the Age of the Messiah, and by the other meaning that State of Things previous to it. Sometimes indeed that Distinction may mean the present mortal Life, in Opposition to the State of the Soul after Death: And at other Times it may mean the present State of the World in Opposition to a future State.

But

But at other Times it is certainly used among the Jews as well ancient as modern, in the Sense above-mentioned: Which is countenanced by Isaiab and Haggai, who describe the Days of the Messiah under the Character of new Heavens and a new Earth, (Isai. lxxv. 17.) introduced by the shaking of the Heavens and the Earth and of all Nations, Hag. ii. 6, 7. From whence with reference to this Distinction, some Expositors have explained that Declaration of Jesus concerning the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, that it shall not be forgiven, neither in this World, nor in the World to come. And that of St. Paul, when stating the Excellency of the Christian Dispensation above the legal, he has this Expression, Unto the Angels he hath not put in Subjection the Worle to come, whereof we speak. Heb. ii. 5.

Now this being the allowed Use of the Word Olam, it seems natural to suppose that when any of the Mosaick Precepts are mentioned to endure for the Age, this should not be taken in the most absolute Sense, but respectively to the Mosaick Oeconomy, as being to endure throughout that Age, in which they were instituted, or till the other should commence. And this might be the Meaning of those Phrases, that their Rites should be observed in their Dwellings throughout their Generations, that is, as long as they had Possession of the Land of Promise. Thus it seems to be explained by Moses. Deut. xii. 1.

Accordingly in the Captivity of Babylon, the Jews did not think themselves obliged to observe the legal Festivals. (See Jenkins's Reas. of Christ. Rel. Vol. 2. Chap. 15.)

Daniel fasted three Weeks in the first Month, and consequently did not keep the Passover. Dan. x. 2, 3, 4. And from hence St. Chrysoptom blames the Jews of his Time for observing their Festivals in other Countries, against the Example of their Ancestors. (D. Chrysoft. adv. Judæos, Orat. 1. Tom. 6. Edit. Savil. p. 315, 316.) The believing Jews were indulged in adhering to the legal Precepts while the Temple stood, but the compleat Destruction of their City and Temple has now put a final Period to the Law and its Prescriptions.

We may also observe, that as the legal Precepts are capable of being distinguished into such stated Rules as came on course, and such as may be called occasional; so the Character of a Statute or Ordinance of the Age, or for ever is most properly applied to such Rites as were ordinarily required in the Course of their Religion.

This was plainly the Case of the Feasts of Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles, the Day of Atonement, the Vestments of the Priests, and Possessions of the Levites, and those Sacrifices which were made by a fixed Obligation: And if the same Phrase is also used in the Prescription of those Sacrifices, which were occasional only, yet it is not applied to the whole of the Institution, but only to some general Rule, that is laid down concerning it, as a Matter that was designed to be constant, whenever such sacrifices were performed; or perhaps a Rule, that should obtain, not in that instance alone, but throughout all their Sacrifices, and in other Cases also. Thus in the Laws of free-will Offerings, (Levit. i, ii, iii.) there is no Expression to enjoin them by an Ordinance for ever, but after its being mentioned that the Fat upon the Inwards should be burnt for a sweet Savour to God. It is added, (Chap. iii. 17.) It shall be a perpetual Statute, that ye eat neither Fat nor Blood. From which we may collect, that the true import of the Phrase is calculated to point out a standing Rule, in opposition, to such as are occasional.

Having

Having refuted the Arguments the Jews bring either from Reason or Scripture to establish the Perpetuity of the Law; and having shewn that that Perpetuity, which seems to be ascribed to them, is not absolute, but relative; and therefore may, without any Inconsistency, admit a Change or Variation. It remains,

II. That we prove they are changed accordingly; which I will do,

(1.) First, From the Nature of the legal Precepts, as not being founded in the Reason, and Natures of Things. I mean here the ceremonial Precepts of the Law, whose Obligation we may consistently dispute, as not appearing to rest upon the same Foundation with the moral Precepts.

It must also be owned, that the Will of God revealed, is a sufficient Ground for our Obedience, though there were no apparent Ground to be collected from the Reasons and Relations of Things. But then since he who placed Things in such Relation, and made that the most general Method of notifying his Will to Mankind, there is Reason to believe that the Duties herein founded, are fixed and unalterable, as being conformable to the Nature and Attributes of God himself: Whereas the same is not to be said of those Duties, which are founded upon Precepts, since they may be variously accommodated to Persons, Places, and Seasons, and for the same Reason may be convenient at one Time and not at another.

It must nevertheless be granted that even these Duties have an inward Meaning which is moral and unalterable; and tho' the outward Matter be liable to change, yet the Faith and Obedience expressed by it, is always necessary; and will have the same Acceptance with our Judge, when it exerts itself, in positive, as when in moral Duties. But the real Difference lies here, that though the outward Act is in neither Case acceptable by itself, yet in one Case it ought to flow from the inward Disposition, supposing a Concurrence of proper Circumstances, tho' there were no outward Law to require and exact it; whereas in the other Case, it depends on the Subsistence of some positive Law to exact and make it necessary. The inward Part of both is always necessary, and gives Value to the Action; but the outward Part of one is founded on some mutable Respects, and therefore subject to change. The wiser Jews were sensible of this Distinction; and Maimonides himself with all his Zeal for the Perpetuity of the legal Precepts confessed a Difference; those he calls intellectual, which would deserve to be written if they were not so already; and those, which if not prescribed by an express Law, might have been left unobserved without Sin.

I know it is alledged by the Jews, (Limborch, Amica Collat.) that there may possibly be some secret Relations of Things undiscovered by us, from whence the legal Precepts may be reasonable in themselves, and founded in a Necessity of Nature, and ought so to be accounted, because they are ordained by the Wisdom of God, though that Reason be not apparent to the Wisdom or Philosophy of Men. But to this I answer, that our Obedience can be no further rational, than whilst we see sufficient Grounds for it.

The Command of a supreme Lawgiver is no doubt a rational Ground of our Obedience, and we may from thence collect, that there is a Fitness in the Thing commanded, though we see no Reason but the Command itself. But if we would say, whether this Fitness is necessary and immutable, or occasional, there must be other Considerations taken in for the Decision of this Question; and except the Matter be supported by other Arguments we are not certain, but the Command may some time or other be revoked.
Matter

Of the ritual Precepts in general it may be said, that they cannot be necessary, because they were not always required. And many of them, the Jews own, have had such Respect to such Customs of other Nations, as are now forgotten; And if the Ground of their Prescription ceases, can it be any Reflection on the divine Wisdom, or any Argument of Mutability in God, that the Prescription itself should cease with it? Lastly, it will appear that they were meant to introduce the Gospel Dispensation, and did figure out the Blessings and Benefits of it. But when the Substance came in View, it was but fit the Figures should be drawn off. They were confessed to be good in their Time, and tho' they had not the same intrinsic Goodness with the moral Precepts yet they are joined together. Neb. ix. 13. But,

(2). I observe that some of the Mosaic Rites are explained in the Old Testament to have an inward and spiritual Meaning; from whence I judge, that the Matter which was chiefly intended, was not the outward Observation of the Rite prescribed, but that principal Regard was had to something which was denoted by it; something which was not less necessary before the Prescription of that Rite; and as it then subsisted, so it may continue, though the external Rite should be abolished.

Thus in the Case of Circumcision, there was an outward Rite prescribed, which was not necessary till commanded; but it betokened an inward Disposition which has been always necessary, viz. the mortifying and casting off of vicious Appetites. See Deut. x. 16. xxx. 6. Jer. iv. 4. And those whose Affections are not in this manner mortified, are described as uncircumcised in Heart. Lev. xxvi. 41. Jer. vi. 10. ix. 26. Ezek. xlv. 7, 9. Col. ii. 11. Phil. iii. 3. Acts vii. 5. Rom. ii. 28, 29.

So likewise in the Case of Sacrifices, it was the inward Principle of humble Obedience, which made them acceptable, 1 Sam. xv. 22. Psal. l. 14. lxix. 31. li. 17. Isai. i. 11. 17.

The Prophet Jeremy has spoken of this Matter in such Terms, as if the Use of Sacrifices had not been at all prescribed. See Jer. vii. 22, 23. Upon which Passage Maimonides moves a Difficulty, how this Declaration can be reconciled in Fact: which he solves thus, that the first Design of the Law was to secure the Belief and Worship of one God, and that what relates to these ritual Observances being only of a secondary Nature, and instituted only for the better securing of the first End, is spoken of as if it had not been prescribed at all, in Comparison of the other, which was the Thing principally designed.

It may be added that these Sacrifices are not expressly mentioned in the original Covenant between God and the People at Mount Sinai, (Exod. xix. 3, &c.) but only a general Stipulation for Obedience. After which these are not mentioned, but after the moral Precepts of the Decalogue. Sacrifice then was prescribed in Consequence of this Covenant; but the Thing directly engaged for was Obedience. The Covenant was indeed ratified by Sacrifice, but that was no proper Part of the Covenant, but only the Method of ratifying it.

Now tho' it cannot be argued from this, that the Institutions of this Kind may be neglected at Men's own Choice, so long as the Precepts requiring them are of Force; yet they may certainly be changed or abolished at the Will of the Lawgiver, when the great End which was served by them at first, may be secured afterwards, in another manner, more effectually; here is then the same Reason and Wisdom in abrogating them, as there was in appointing them before. But (3). Our next Argument will shew that this was not a likely Case, but that in Fact the Mosaic Institutions were so peculiarly adapted to the People and Land of Canaan, that many of them must be impracticable under the Reign of the Messiah, whose Kingdom was to extend over the World.
the

They were meant to distinguish the Israelites from other Nations; but this Distinction must cease of Course, when all should become one Nation, and have one King over them, when Jehovah should be one, and his Name one. Which was to be the State of Things in the Days of the Messiah.

The new Moon, or first Day of every Month, was required to be observed with the Blowing of Trumpets, and the Offering of solemn Sacrifice. Num. x. 10. And this was yet more strictly enjoined on the first Day of Tisri, which being the Beginning of the Year for some Uses with the Jews, tho' the seventh Month in other Respects was more eminently distinguished as the Feast of Trumpets. Now the Knowledge of this Beginning of the Month depended on the Observation of the Phasis of the Moon at Jerusalem; and as their other Festivals were fixed to certain Days of their Months respectively, it follows that the Observation of the Kalends, or the Term from which their Month began, could be had only in Judea, or the neighbouring Places. And how then can this consist with the universal Extent of the Messiah's Kingdom?

And as this creates a Difficulty in their monthly and annual Festivals, such as obliges them to observe two Days together for their new Moons; which was never the Intention of the Law; so there is another to be observed in their weekly Festival of the Sabbath. The seventh Day to be kept holy was computed from the setting of the Sun on the sixth Day, to its setting again on the Day following. But surely this Law was never designed to reach to every Country, since the Measure of Time can never be the same in all. At the same Time that it is Noon in Judea it is but Morning in Britain, it is Evening in China, and Midnight in America; and different in Places still more different. Now under this Variety, how should the Sabbaths or other Festivals be reduced to any certain Computation? The Law has made plainly no Provision for this Exigence, from whence it is at least a reasonable Presumption, that the Law was only calculated for the Inhabitants of one Part of the World; and therefore could not be designed for the Subjects of the Messiah, who should be spread over the whole Earth.

Let us look again to their sabbatical Years returning in a Course of seven Years, when their Land was to rest; and by a Rotation of seven of which Sabbatic Years the grand Sabbath of Jubilee or general Release was regulated. Now these Years were to commence (Levit. xxv. 9.) from the tenth Day of Tisri, which answers to our September, after the Fruits both of the Field and the Vineyard were got in, and about five Days before the Feast of Tabernacles, (Levit. xxiii. 34, 39.) which was prescribed to be observed when they had gathered in the Fruit of the Land. By this Means the Fruits of the sixth Year were clearly got in, before that rest of the seventh. But that could be the Case only in those Places where the Seasons kept the same Course as in Judea; so that neither was this Law

Law calculated for the whole World, since Summer and Winter cannot be the same in all Places. And it is remarkable that this Law tho' given to the Israelites forty Years before they entered Canaan, yet was not to take Place, till they had Possession of the Land: Lev. xxv. 2.

Some Laws were given to them as Inhabitants of Canaan only. Thus it was in the Case of the Leprosy of Houses. See Lev. xiv. 34. And it is observable that in many of those Places where their Rites are prescribed by an Ordinance for ever, there is this Limitation expressly added in your Dwellings and throughout your Generations.

But, to proceed, at the Feasts of Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles all the Males were obliged to appear before the Lord; but how could this possibly be from all Parts of the World? Or how could Jerusalem receive such Multitudes? Or the Temple admit such infinite Oblations? Or where could be found Priests to sacrifice?

And yet after all the Difficulty will increase, if it be remembered that there were many other Occasions for repairing to Jerusalem; which render it impracticable to perform; and therefore the Mosaic Law, could never be designed for the Discipline of the Messiah, whose Kingdom was to extend over the whole Earth.

Perhaps it may be urged against us, that the moral Law, which is confessedly in Force, is yet impossible to be observed as well as the ceremonial. And why then should that Impossibility, which cannot vacate the Obligation in one Respect be judged to do so in the other? But who does not see in this Case the Disparity; that the Impossibility of observing the moral Law to Perfection, arises not from the Nature of the Law, but from the Corruption of Man; whereas the Impossibility of observing observing these Rites in all Nations, arises from the Nature of the Rites themselves, without any Fault of Men.

Again it may be said, that the Jews assert the Perpetuity of the Law as to themselves, and not to the Gentiles. But this discriminating Law cannot be continued, when the Difference of Nations shall be abolished in the Days of the Messiah. Either then the Law must be universal in its Obligation, or must be superseded in the Days of the Messiah, whose Kingdom reaches over all. Besides the Prophets, as we shall see hereafter, have made Mention of Priests and Levites to officiate, of Sacrifice and Incense to be offered among all Nations; which however inconsistent with the literal Prescriptions of the Jewish Law, and therefore necessary to be mystically interpreted, must argue at least that there should be but one Law and Worship prescribed both for the Jew and Gentile.

Lastly, it may be alledged that in such Cases as are utterly impracticable, God may relax the Rigour of his Laws, and yet as to all other Matters the Law may continue in full Force. But this is an arbitrary Solution of the Difficulty without any Foundation in the Law. The Instances which have been mentioned do make up a main Part of that Body of ceremonial Precepts of the Mosaic Law. They are prescribed in the same strict Manner with the Rest. What Reason is there then to imagine, that so great a Part of the ritual Precepts, should be dispensed with, tho' no such Thing was intimated by Moses or the Prophets, which will not argue with greater Probability, that the whole was meant to be set aside? The Conversion of the Heathen World was foreseen and foretold; and had it been designed that they should become subject to the rest of the Mosaic Precepts, it would have been easy

easy to have excepted the impracticable ones, which would have confirmed their Obligation to the rest; but since no Exception has been made, it is more reasonable to conclude there is no Need of it, because the whole System of ritual Observances is expired, and so the Objection of Impossibility set aside. Upon this Foot we are able to defend the Honour of the divine Laws, the Harmony that is between them, the Order and Beauty of the whole Oeconomy; but they who would assert the perpetual Obligation of the legal Precepts, will have the Difficulty to account how such extraordinary, such impossible Things should be prescribed; and yet no Provision be made to dispense with them in any Case. But,

(4). We have express Predictions in the Old Testament that some of the principal Mosaic Rites, such as the Ark of the Covenant, the Priesthood and the Sacrifices should be altered or abolished; much more Matters of less Importance.

(1). Then as to the Ark of the Covenant, (which was as it were the Centre and Compendium of all legal Ceremonies, the Throne of God exercising a peculiar Kind of Jurisdiction, and the principal Symbol of the whole typical Covenant,) the Prophet Jeremy foretold the Absence, and utter Abolition of it, Jer. iii. 16; and this not as a Calamity, such as the taking of it by the Philistines was deemed, and the final Loss of it at the Babylonish Captivity, but indeed as a Privilege and Note of happy Times, they should esteem it no more; they should in the Prophet's Phrase no more speak of it, no more remember it, neither should it come into their Mind, neither should they vent or seek after it; neither should that be done any more. So that here is no Room for any Objection of the Jews, that the Abolition of the other Ceremonies cannot cannot be inferred from the Absence of the Ark; because they continued to be necessary after the Captivity, tho' the Ark was wanting; since we do not argue merely from the Absence of that Utensil, but from the setting aside of any Value for it, and this mentioned as a Note of Happiness.

Nor have the Jews any better Refuge in that other Pretence, that this is not spoken of an utter Abolition of the Ark, but only in a certain Respect, that Israel should meet with such a ready Submission of the Nations, that they should have no more need to carry out the Ark into the Wars.

It does not appear that this was any original Design of the Ark, and though it might be sometimes carried out upon special Occasions, and by the express Command of God, yet the only Instance we read of it without such Authority, was in the Days of Eli, when it was taken by the Enemy. Besides that upon the Erection of Solomon's Temple the Ark was shut up, and never was removed from its place, till the Temple was destroyed. It must then be absurd in the Prophet here to foretel the disuse of a Practice which had been left off Ages before his own time.

(2). The Levitical Priesthood was foretold in the old Testament to be abolished; which will imply the consequential Abrogation of all that ceremonial Worship, that Train of ritual Observances, for the Sake of which the Priesthood itself was instituted. As the Apostle argues. The Priesthood being changed, there is made of Necessity a Change also of the Law.

Let us see what Proof we have from Scripture, that the Priesthood was to be changed in the Days of the Messiah. The High Priesthood in particular was designed to figure out the Offices of Christ, who, as Zachary foretold, should not only sit upon his Throne; but should be a Priest upon his Throne.

But

But yet there are such Circumstances in the Letter of the Institution, as could not consist with Christ's Investiture with that Dignity, which is therefore an Argument that the literal Priesthood must expire, when once the spiritual one of Christ took place.

The most remarkable Passage to this Purpose is this, The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, thou art a Priest for ever after the Order of Melchisedeck. I have already observed that the Messiah is the Subject of this Psalms in whom the regal and sacerdotal Offices were to be united. And tho' the Jews have excepted that the Word Cohen does not necessarily signify a Priest, but is sometimes applied to secular Princes; but the Word Cohen in a political Sense is never put for the royal Majesty of the King's Person himself, but at most for the next after him. Since then the Messiah is represented with the Character of Majesty, it remains, that when the Title of Cohen is ascribed to him, it cannot be understood in the political Sense, but in the Ecclesiastical, as it had been anciently ascribed to Melchisedeck King of Salem, who was also the Priest of the most high God.

Now this Prediction that the Messiah was to be a Priest, amounts to a clear Implication that the Levitical Priesthood was to be abolished. For by the Law none could be a Priest but one of the Tribe of Levi, but the Messiah was to spring of the Tribe of Judah; and therefore, if he were invested with the Priesthood, the Mosaic Law must be set aside. See Heb. vii. 13, 14.

Besides the Psalmist expressly refers him to another Order of Priesthood, and thereby clearly intimates the Insufficiency of the Order then subsisting to bring them to Perfection. To this Purpose the Apostle argues, Heb. vii. 11, 15, 16, 28, 23, 24.

After this we may the less wonder to find it mentioned by Iſaiab, as the Privilege of the Goſpel Times, that God would take unto him Prieſts and Levites out of all Nations, ſuch as might be proper Minifters of this great High Prieſt, who was to be of the Tribe of Judah. We may the leſs wonder to read of an Altar to be erected in the miſt of Egypt, that in every Place Incenſe ſhould be offered to his Name, which was of old limited to Jeruſalem. The Prieſts and the Levites, the Altar and the Incenſe here foretold, are called ſo by a Figure: but the very Tranſlation of theſe Names to Places, and Perſons diſqualified by the Law, implies the Diſſolution of it. But,

(3). The Ceſſation of Sacrifices will deſerve a more attentive Conſideration.

Sacrifices made up a great Part of the ceremonial Precepts, and therefore if theſe were to ceaſe in the Days of the Meſſiab, the whole Body of ceremonial Inſtitutions muſt fall with them.

That they were to ceaſe then is plain from Dan. ix. 27.

I may have farther Occaſion to purſue this Argument hereafter. At preſent we may add, that the Renting of the Veil of the Temple at the Time of our Saviour's Crucifixion, gave a ſignal Teſtimony to the Expiration of the legal Myſteries; and the Deſtruction of the Temple, where only Sacrifices could be offered, with the utter Diſſolution of the whole Jewiſh Polity, has cauſed an actual Ceſſation of thoſe bloody Sacrifices, that ſince their Significancy ceaſed at the Appearance of the Anti-type, their Continuance might no longer be permitted.

(4). I add ſome traditional Sentences of ancient Rabbins, which contain ſome Footſteps of a general Opinion, that a great Alteration ſhould be made in the Precepts of the Law. To this Purpoſe is this this Saying, that all Oblation (except the Eucharistical) shall cease in the future Age, the Age of the Messiah.

To the same Purpose we have another Tradition, that all Festivals shall cease, besides the Feast of Purim and the Day of Expiation. And there is no Reason to be given why these should be excepted, when all the Rest were to expire.

It is a very lame Evasion which Abarbanel has Recourse to in this Matter, that the Tradition implies not an utter Abolition of the Festivals themselves, but only an Oblivion of those Benefits, upon Occasion of which, the Feasts of Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles had been instituted, because the Deliverance wrought by the Messiah shall so far exceed all others, that the People of Israel shall no more attend to the Remembrance of them. Jer. xxiii. 7, 8. But this Solution is not applicable to the Case, because the Tradition is express for the Cessation of the Festivals themselves; nor is it consistent with itself, because the principal Ends of those Festivals, (next to their typical Relation, which the Jews disown) was to preserve a grateful Memory of ancient Benefits; and therefore if those Benefits should be forgotten, it will imply the Festivals to be no more in Use.

Nothing can be replied, except it be, that the Deliverances wrought by the Messiah may happen, and the Ancients did believe they should happen at the very Season of these Festivals; and then the Festivals may be continued, but instead of being applied to the Commemoration of those ancient Deliverances, they shall then be applied to those new and great Deliverances wrought by the Messiah at the same Season of the Year. But I answer that this is inconsistent with the Continuance of the Law, which not only prescribes the Festival, and the Services pecular to it, but likewise the exprefs Commemoration of thofe ancient Deliverances, and that they fhould carefully instruct their Children in this Meaning of thofe Services. So that whilst the Laws prefcribing them were fet afide, they would then be no longer Mosaic Festivals. Or if that can be fuppofed to be fulfilled by commemorating another Deliverance, this will greatly countenance our typical Exposition of the Law, and argue that its literal Prefcriptions may myftically be referred to Matters of another Nature, and in future Times.

Another Instance to fhew that the ancient Jews expected an Alteration of the Law in the Days of the Meffiah is in Refpect of the Prohibition of Meats. Whatfoever Creature is unclean in this Age, i. e. under the Mosaic Difcipline, it is faid, God fhall make it clean in the Age to come, infomuch that Swine's Flefh fhall be lawful to be eaten; which is therefore faid to have its Name from a Root that fignifies to return. Now whoever obferves how fcrupuloufly the Jews have abftained from Meats forbidden, cannot but preface the Abrogation of the Law with thefe Obfervances.

Abarbanel has fuggelted two poor Solutions of this Matter. One is, that this may be underftood only of a temporary Suspension of thefe Precepts, that in Cafe of fome Neceffity the Difinction of Meats may be fufpended for a while. But befides that the Law has made no fuch Provision for any Cafe, and this is a Cafe not more to be expected in the Days of the Meffiah, than in the Ages before him: Befides this, it is clearly mentioned as the Privilege of the future Age to have all Meats reftored to their primitive Indifference, which argues it not to be meant of any occasional Relaxation of the Law, but of a total Abolition.

He suggests farther, that these Dispensations themselves being matter of Tradition may be understood to be of the Substance of the Law, because the Law taken in its whole Latitude, includes not only the Books written by Moses but likewise those Precepts which were delivered by Word of Mouth, whereby the written Law is explained, and Rules laid down for amplifying or restraining it in Time to come: and then such Restrictions taken from the Substance of the Law, ought not to be reckoned Contradictions to it. But till the Authority of the oral Law is established, and the Way shewn for preserving it pure, it is too obscure and precarious a Principle to give us any real Satisfaction. Besides that in Effect it vacates the whole written Law, to suppose it liable to change, by that which is unwritten; which how it may consist with the Honour of the divine Oeconomy, and the Opinion they so stiffly contend for, of the Perpetuity of legal Rites, let them, who advance this Paradox, consider at their Leisure.

Having shewn that the principal Rites of the Mosaic Law were to be abolished, I proceed now in the,

(5). Fifth Place to infer the same Conclusion from the express mention that is made of a new Law to be given by the Messiah.

It is insisted by some, that as the Covenant of the Messiah is a Covenant of Grace and Mercy, importing the Pardon of Sin, and the Justification of those who by the Covenant of Works are liable to Punishment, he cannot for that Reason in a proper Sense be termed a Lawgiver, which would import the Prescription of certain Terms of Duty, with the Sanction of Penalties annexed to them. So that though there are Rules of Practice set before us in the Gospel, yet these are thought by such Persons not to be given properly under the Notion of a Law, in which View its Obligation must be fetched from the former Covenant, but proposed as the Result only of that gracious Aid, which is vouchsafed us by the Spirit of Christ, to discharge such Obedience as God will now accept by pardoning our Defects. And though again there are Penalties threatned, yet this is considered, not as any Thing introduced by the Gospel, but as the Remainder of the former Law of Works, to the Curse whereof they are still exposed, who by neglecting the Motions of the spiritual Life do forfeit the Terms of the Gospel Covenant. I should be loth to dispute about the Use of the Word, if we can agree in the main, as to our Notion of the Thing. And therefore since the Dispensation of the Gospel is indifferently termed in Scripture, a Law or Covenant, I shall use those Terms, and shall have enough from them, on either Scheme to answer the Purpose of our present Enquiry. Withal it should be added that the Jews themselves have some Fragments of a Tradition, which speak of a new Law to be given by the Messiah. (Vid. Raymund. Martin. Pug. Fid. par. 3. dist. 3. cap. 20.)

The Prediction of a Prophet like unto Moses has already been explained. At present it is material to remind you of that Part of the Prediction, where God promises to put his Words into the Mouth of this Prophet, that he might speak unto them all that God should command him, requiring the People to bearken unto him. The Ground of this Prediction was that Terror which had seized the People, when they heard God, with a tremendous Voice, delivering the ten Commands; which moved them to petition, that he would no more speak unto them in that Manner, but make known his Laws by Moses. They were not only gratified in this Request; quest; but they were moreover assured, that another Prophet should arise, who should deliver God's Words in the same easy Manner, and he would no more interpose with that awful Solemnity, which he had used in pronouncing the Decalogue. This intimates that the Mosaic Discipline would then be at an End; and then there would be Occasion for another Prophet to deliver anew the Words or Will of God.

Particularly it deserves to be remembered, that the Mosaic Law was delivered only to the Hebrew Nation. But the Law of the Messiah was to reach to other Nations. Isa. xlii. 4. Now though this makes no Alteration in the substantial Parts of Duty, which must be eternal as those Relations upon which they are founded, and that divine Sanctity to which they are conformable, yet it must import a material Change in the outward Oeconomy, when the divine Law should reach to those, who seemed to have been disregarded, and be proposed without Terror.

Another remarkable Passage to this Purpose, is that of Jeremy xxxi. 31, 32, 33, 34. which is strongly urged, Heb. viii. 8, &c. Behold the Days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new Covenant, &c.

The Mention of a new Covenant, as the Apostle argues, implies the old to be growing out of Date. Now the old was not the Covenant of Works simply considered, which had been given to Man originally in the State of Innocence, and was vacated by the Covenant of Grace made with him after his Fall. But it was the Sinaitical Covenant made between God and Israel, and this considered as an outward Rule, confirmed by typical Sacrifices and the sprinkling of Blood, and containing as well ritual as moral Precepts, to the Discharge of which the People had obliged themselves. If this be taken with a View to the inward Meaning of the whole, it will be understood to refer to that Covenant of Grace, which took Place from the Time of Man's Fall, and is the only Method of Acceptance with God under every Dispensation. But when it is considered literally, for a rigorous Prescription of outward Precepts on the one Hand, and an Engagement for the strictest Obedience on the other, it is then a distinct Thing from the Covenant of Grace, and properly opposed to it. And so it must be taken by the Prophet in this Place, because the new Covenant is expressly set in opposition to the Covenant made with their Fathers, which shews their Absurdity who will not allow the Introduction of a new Law to be here intended, but only a Confirmation of the Old one. The inward Part of the Law is the same in all Ages; but the outward Method of prescribing it, was alterable, and so the Law of Moses must give Way to that of Christ.

The Covenant therefore, proposed with all its outward Force, and without the Cover of ritual Precepts, is the new Covenant here mentioned to be written in our Hearts, to convey the Knowledge of divine Truths, and contract for Pardon. And so it is plainly distinct from the Mosaic Covenant, if literally taken, as consisting of Rites and Ordinances.

Not that they who lived under the former Dispensation were destitute of the Benefits of this new Covenant, for it took place from the Time of Man's Apostacy, and was in a different manner notified through all Ages of the World. But when this Covenant came to be displayed, and manifested in a clear Light, its Benefits proposed without Ambiguity, its inward Influence most expressly avowed, without the Cover of ceremonial Precepts, it is then aptly repre-represented as a new Covenant, in respect of that former ritual one, under which it lay concealed, and which the People had abused to make it ineffectual.

That ritual Dispensation, as it stood literally ratified at Mount Sinai, made no express Promises of Grace and Pardon, but the People in their own Names undertook for the exactest Obedience. Exod. xxiv. 7. But they fail'd of the Obedience for which they undertook, and therefore wanted a more gracious Dispensation to assure them of the Pardon of their Sins, and convey such spiritual Aid as might help them to render acceptable Obedience, in and through the great Atonement made for their Defects. To which Purpose Jeremy observes that in the Days of this new Covenant, under the full and clear Manifestation of such Grace, God would put his Law in their Hearts, and extend to them so full a Pardon of their Sins, as even to blot out the Remembrance of them.

There were Atonements appointed by the Law for particular Trespases and ritual Pollutions: But there seems to have been none appointed for the main Points of Immorality; so that the Curse of the moral Law remained in Force for any Thing the Mosaick Law could do to remove it.

The Nature of the legal Atonements was such, that some Beast used to suffer Death for the Offender. But in Cases of grosser Immoralities, as well as those Offences that were committed against the ritual Law, presumptuously, there was no Pardon. Numb. xv. 30.

There is nothing looks like an Overture of Pardon for such Offences, except it be the yearly Expiation, which is represented as designed to expiate all the Iniquities of the Children of Israel. Levit. xvi. 21. But then this perhaps might reach only to Such Sins as were consented to in Compliance with some strong and sudden Impetus of Passion or Appetite, and forsaken again : It might extend to such Sins as were done with an high Hand, the Authors of which are by the Law directed to be cut off without any Expiation. And therefore it may be thought there should no Benefit accrue to these Persons from the Day of Atonement. Or if the Benefit did reach to such Persons, yet still it was nothing but the outward Privilege, which could be given by the Law, and only typically of that Salvation which is proposed by the Gospel : For the Atonements of the Law themselves were but ritual or symbolical. They had an outward and symbolical Effect, in restoring to the Privilege of Church Membership, but they had no inward Efficacy of their own, as pertaining to the Conscience ; and whatever Effect of that Sort may seem to be ascribed to them, can be reasonably understood only in their typical Relation, as they served to figure out the Benefits of that future Sacrifice of the new Covenant, which was to procure the real Pardon of Sin. And the mention of this leads me to the, (6.) Sixth Argument to shew that the Obligation of the Mosaick Precepts was never meant to be perpetual, and that is taken from the plain Tendency of the ancient Rites to prefigure and introduce the Gospel Benefits.

But because the Jews do not admit they were instituted for this End, but rather rest in them for their own Sake and look to be justified by a regular Observance or Obedience to them ; that I may effectually overthrow this fundamental Error, I proposed it as the,

III. Third general Head upon this Subject to explain how the Law did prepare the Way for the Gospel, by its Types, which foreshewed the Office and Character of the Messiah and made such Application cation of his Benefits, as was suited to that Age of the World, and proportioned to the Faith and Sincerity of its Observers.

Which that I may do in the clearest Manner,

1. I would enquire what Grounds may be assigned for this typical Interpretation of the ancient Rites, as prefigurative of the Gospel Mysteries.

2. I would remove the principal Objections that lie against it.

3. I would shew how apt and natural this Interpretation is, and how beautifully it unfolds to us the ancient Institutions.

1. I would enquire what Grounds may be assigned for this typical Interpretation of the ancient Rites, as prefigurative of the Gospel-Mysteries. Which are taken partly from the ancient Usages of other Nations, partly from what has been already observed of the Jewish Discipline. And lastly from the uniform View which it appears to have upon the Christian Exposition, and the Confirmation which is given to it by the Miracles and other Evidences of the New Testament.

1. For the ancient Usages of other Nations:

Those who are conversant in ancient Writings, know that it was the Custom of their Authors to convey their Instructions into vulgar Minds under the Cover of Fables, or parabolical Allusions, and express by symbolical and hieroglyphical Representations their theological and moral Sentiments.

Whence this Practice had its Rise is not material to enquire; yet we are able to assign such Grounds of this Method of Oeconomy, as are not unworthy of God, nor unsuitable to the ancient Condition of his Church.

To teach Men Humility and to exercise their Industry are no inconsiderable Ends of Religion, and yet such as were properly consulted by involving its Doctrines

Doctrines in such Degree of Obscurity, as might shew them the Weakness of human Faculties, with the Need of Study and Application.

Again there were some considerable Points in the Scheme of our Redemption, which were to be brought about by the Wickedness of free Agents. And as an open Discovery of these Matters might have tended to have defeated them, so neither was it fit that the Depths of the divine Counsels should be proposed to Persons of such malicious Affections, as would have been apt to ridicule them. And therefore, though these Mysteries were in some measure discoverable by Men of humble Minds and earnest Industry, yet it is no Wonder if they who were slack in their Enquiries, or had no Relish of spiritual Knowledge, and were averse from God, that he would chuse to hide himself from them.

And if thus it appears worthy of God, under the covering of Types to conceal his Mysteries from the wicked Opposers of his Laws: It may be added on the other Hand, that such Method of Instruction, so far as it was understood and explained, was fitted to make a stronger Impression upon vulgar Minds, which would better understand what was represented before them by some visible Symbol, than if it had been foretold in simple Terms as future. 'Tis true, the Completion of all under the Gospel Light has more evidently displayed the Order and Beauty of the whole Scheme, but whilst Events were treated of as future, and in so covert a Manner, that free Agents might not be hindred from bearing their Part in them, the Addition of outward Signs was of Use, to create some Idea of the Benefits intended, though less clear than might reasonably be looked for as the Happiness of after Times, when the Thing itself should be actually effected.

These then might be the Grounds for dispensing typical Institutions. And so far as the meaning of those Institutions can be fixed, they will have altogether the same Force, in arguing for those future Events, to which they are referr'd, with those Prophecies which are delivered in express Words. The only Use of Words is to stand as the Signs of Ideas, and if Types and Figures are understood, and allowed to signify the same Ideas, where will be the Difference of Certainty, between these Predictions which are delivered by Signs, and those which are expressed by Words?

It was upon this Foot I advanced that the Law of Moses was a standing Prophecy of the Messiah, inasmuch as the Rights ordained by it, were calculated to point out his Offices, with the Benefits to be procured and conferred by him. So far as this View appeared to those who waited for Redemption in Israel, to the humble and sedate Enquirers after Truth, so far it had as much or more Efficacy, than the plain Method of a verbal Prophecy. And if that View had been cleared up to after Times, if it has been justified by the due Accomplishment of every Particular, if the Application of Mosaick Rites upon this Foot to the Christian Scheme, has been uniformly drawn out, and confirmed by all the Evidences of the Christian Revelation; surely we may be allowed to produce this Argument among the Proofs of our Religion; and are so far from reckoning the Gospel to stand excluded by the old Law, that we are bold to appeal to that very Law itself for the Proof of it.

That the Law has that typical and figurative Meaning we ascribe to it, remains to be shewn by other Arguments. To which Purpose,

(2.) I propose to argue from what has been observed before of the very Nature of the Jewish Discipline. The

The selecting the Jewish Nation was not merely to aggrandize them, but to disperse by their Means some Knowledge of divine Truths, to preserve some Expectation of that great Deliverer, who had been promised to the first Parents of Mankind. But in such Terms and in such Conveyance of Tradition that the Promise was in Danger of being lost, if Care had not been used to train Men up to the Belief of it. Upon this Foot it is natural to conclude, that the legal Rites must be calculated with a View to this great End of their Establishment, and some mystical Meaning concealed under them, something which refers to the same Promise of Redemption; and under the Cover of typical Observances, Points out the future Certainty and Method of its Accomplishment.

This Conclusion appears more necessary, because there is no other common End assignable for that great Burden of Ceremonies. Barely to keep the Jews separate from other People without any higher End of such Separation, might have been secured with much less Difficulty. And though it be true that God may have wise Reasons for his Institutions, which we cannot discern, and that his Command is Ground enough for our Obedience, though no other Reason should appear besides: Yet where there is a clear Account to be given of the Reasons of his Institutions, an unprejudiced Mind will naturally close in with such Accounts, and judge it more expressive of the Honour and Goodness of God to have acted with this View, than to have conducted his Church under a ritual Dispensation for so many Ages, without any apparent Reason at all. And when to all this it is added, that some of the legal Rites are explained in the Old Testament to have a spiritual Meaning, this cannot but give great Countenance to such typical Explication tion of the whole, as is given of it in the Christian Scheme, whereby at once it adds Lustre to the Mosaic Oeconomy, and gains a farther Manifestation of its own. For if once we admit a mystical Meaning to lie concealed under the Letter of external Observances, and it is also evident that the Interpretation assigned in the New Testament is rational, and not clogged with the Incumbrances of any material Differences; it will lie upon the Adversaries of Christianity, either to assign a better Interpretation of these ancient Mysteries, or else acquiesce in this Account of them, which recommends itself by the Uniformity of all its Parts, and is clear from the Accusation of any palpable Absurdities. But this Consideration may be farther urged,

3. Under the third Argument which was mentioned, as taken from the uniform and harmonious View which the Mosaic Law appears to have upon the Christian Exposition, and that Confirmation which is given to it by the Miracles and other Evidences of the New Testament.

It will appear hereafter what is the View ascribed to the Mosaic Law by the Christian Exposition; and tho' there may be other subordinate Regards attended to in some particular Precepts, yet that there is one grand Design kept up throughout the whole to which all its Parts are reconcilable. This cannot but be thought a reasonable Inducement to admit it as the best Exposition till some other be offered to exceed or equal it. We have the Satisfaction of seeing the whole System placed in an advantageous Light, such as displays the Wisdom and Usefulness of the former Dispensation, at the same Time that it bears Witness to the present. And shall we reject an Account so rational, that we may suppose the ancient System either to have had no determinate View at all, or none to be assigned with such Uniformity formity in its Parts. A candid Mind would rather accept of such Exposition as is most for the Honour of divine Revelation; especially when it is considered after all, that this Exposition, being advanced in the Writings of the New Testament, has a Claim to all that Evidence, by which those Writings themselves are attested, this must confirm it to us with the greatest Certainty; and then the Christian Scheme which explains to us the ancient Types will be in return explained by them.

That the Books of the New Testament are genuine, that they were anciently received as Matter of divine Revelation, and contain the Records of our Religion: That they were proved so by the Miracles of those who wrote them; that the same Power is to be argued from the Success that followed them, and bore Witness that God was with them of a Truth.

All this and more has been often urged to assert the Christian Revelation; and if it be sufficient for that Purpose, it must approve at the same Time that Exposition of the legal Rites, which is clearly asserted by the Christian Revelation and contained as Part of it.

Look in the New Testament and you will find the Style and Phrases of the Mosaick Law transferred from the literal Meaning to which Moses applied them, to denote those spiritual Benefits which are proposed to us in the Church of Christ. The Pomp of Sacrifices and outward Services are made to signify the inward Devotion of the Mind; and the express Construction of the ancient Ceremonies import the whole Mystery of Christ's eternal Priesthood, and Sacrifice, and Intercession for us.

Thus far of the Grounds to be assigned for such typical Interpretation of the ancient Rites, as prefigurative of the Gospel Mysteries. I come now in the (2). Second Place, to remove the principal Difficulties and Objections that may seem to lie against this Method of Interpretation. And they are reducible to three Heads, (1) That it is obscure. (2) That it is arbitrary. (3) That it is inconsistent. (1). It is obscure.

But in answer to this, so long as there appears no palpable Absurdity in the Reason of the Thing, it is not for us to pronounce what Method may be most worthy of God. His Wisdom may have wise Ends to serve, by his Dispensations, which we cannot penetrate, whose Views are confined, by the Condition of our Being, to a very narrow Compass.

But though this Answer may suffice to satisfy an humble Mind, yet it has been shewn, that this Method of Instruction is proper to teach vain Man a Lesson of Humility, in shewing them that their own Reasonings and Faculties cannot instruct them fully in their Duty, but they must submit to be taught of God, by the unerring Precepts of Revelation. This surely is an End worthy of God, to design, and highly conducing to the Benefit of Man. And this End will further be promoted by that Care which is required for the thorough Knowledge of such Mysteries. Nay let it be remembered, that if the Prescription of Symbolical Rites were attended with some Obscurity, yet it made however a stronger Impression upon vulgar Minds, than bare Prophecy, and so became rather an Help than any real Disadvantage to human Weakness.

Nor is it perhaps the least Ground of such a Method of Proceeding to conceal the sacred Mysteries from evil Spirits and evil Men. Had the Notices of the Messiah been so full as to make it impossible for the most obstinate Prejudice to have mistaken it, who would have imagined that Ju- das

das or his Countrymen, should have run the Lengths they did? It seems as if Satan himself was not apprized of the Mystery of the Cross of Christ, and therefore armed to defeat the Design of our Salvation by the very Method that was proper to effect it. Heb. ii. 14. Col. ii. 15. But had there been no Obscurity in the Method of our Redemption, it is likely the Tempter would have employed his Malice any other way, than in promoting that Effect which he aimed to defeat. So much for the Objection of Obscurity.

(2). It is objected that this typical Interpretation of the ancient Rites is arbitrary.

To which I answer, that so far as this Interpretation is already authorized by Men inspired of God, whose Character has been attested by Prophecies and Miracles, so far it must be as well grounded as any literal Interpretation. And though it may not be pretended, that there is no Type to be alledged, which has not been expressly applied to that Purpose by some inspired Writers; but rather on the contrary that the Instances we meet with of this sort in the inspired Writers, do afford an Intimation that the like latent Meaning remains to be searched out in other Instances; yet those who are cloathed with such Authority, are ever to be received with greatest Difference and Certainty: and for the rest, there are certain Rules to be prescribed, which may serve to guard us against any Exorbitances of a crazy Brain.

The principal Direction in that Case, is to keep to the Analogy of the Faith, and not to admit any Interpretation of a Matter mystical, that shall any way clash with what is clearly revealed. The Doctrines expressly taught are as a Guide to direct us to avoid all Absurdity in interpreting such Passages as are obscure and mystical. So again the

Rites

Rites literally delivered in one part of Scripture, if they be explained to have a mystical View in another, that Explication gives an Handle for expounding other Rites in order still to the same View, and in Subserviency to the same Design; which far from overthrowing what is clearly revealed, helps to illustrate what might otherwise be obscure.

We should be careful however whilst we are looking after a mystical Meaning, that we do not exclude the literal.

Our Argument from the typical Interpretation of the ancient Rites, and the allegorical Explication of ancient History, must depend upon the Supposition of their having been literally transacted; and in vain shall we look after the hidden Meaning, if the Fact under which it is said to be concealed be fictitious. If the History of the Creation and the Fall of Man be by themselves supposed to be fictitious, no Allegory, that is built upon them, can have any weight. And if the Rites of the Mosaic Law were not literally prescribed, it can be to little purpose to look after their Significancy.

Lastly, it should also be remembered, that where we have not the express Authority of some inspired Writer, to support our Interpretation, we are not to lay any great Stress on any single Type or Allegory, but to go through the whole System of Revelation, preserving the Harmony of all its Parts, and ever giving Preference to those Expositions, which best suit with the uniform Design of the whole taken together.

And from these same Considerations, which have been thus far urged to give Satisfaction to the second Objection, we may also proceed to satisfy the (3.) Third that remains, (viz.) that this way of interpreting the Scriptures by Types and Allegories, is inconsistent with itself.

To which I answer, that if in assigning such mystical Interpretation, we keep within the Limitations before laid down ; if we keep the Analogy of the Faith constantly in view ; if we do not advance our mystical Interpretations upon the Ruins of the literal ; if we lay not too great a Stress on any single Type or Allegory, but preserve the Harmony of all the Parts of Revelation, there can be little Danger of Inconsistency among us.

Or if in some Particulars there should be different Interpretations, yet they shall not affect the great Concerns of Religion ; where the Analogy of Faith is preserved, there can be nothing contrary to Faith admitted ; and if in other Respects there should be some Variety, it is what happens in assigning the literal Sense of Scripture, as well as the typical or allegorical. So that if the difference of Interpretations be any Objection against the Method of interpreting, it will lie against every Method that shall ever be proposed.

I come now in the (3.) Third Place to shew how apt and natural this Method of Interpretation is, and with what Beauty and Significancy it displays and unfolds the ancient Mysteries.

I shall here confine myself to that internal Evidence which arises from the Fitness of such Interpretation, from its being suited to the Genius of the Jewish Discipline, and giving a most consistent Account of the End and Purport of the old Oeconomy. And in order to shew this, it will be enough if the main Heads of the ceremonial Law may be fairly deduced to this View, and accounted for by this Method of Interpretation. To this purpose, I would would take the Epistle to the Hebrews, with other Places of the New Testament, for my Guide, in these three essential Instances of the Levitical Worship, viz. the Tabernacle or Temple; the Method of worshipping by Sacrifice and Incense, and the Administrator, which was in some Cases the High Priest alone, and in the rest, any of the Sons of Aaron.

But here I must premise, that it is declared in general, that the ritual Precepts of the Law were calculated with a view to the Messiah; that its great End was to point out the principal Parts of his Office and Character, together with those Benefits which the Church was to expect from him.

Therefore they are wrong who affirm that the principal of the Jewish Rites were ordained in imitation of the Heathen Superstition, to which the People had been so long addicted, that God thought fit to indulge their Fondness for outward Ceremonies, and transfer to the Worship of himself, what had been abused to Idolatry. For the Old Testament labours every where to reclaim the Jews from every Appearance of idolatrous Practices. And can we imagine, that God should prescribe the Ceremonies of such idolatrous Worship, in order to indulge in his People that Fondness to them, which was one principal End of all his Discipline to extirpate.

As then it is asserted without Proof, that many of these Rites had been used in Ages elder than Moses, and applied originally to idolatrous Worship; so if that Fact could be maintained of any of them, some other End of the Resemblance ought to be assigned, which may consist with the general Tenor of the Old Testament, and not this of a Compliance, which contradicts itself. It might be rather supposed, that one of the Mosaic Usages had been in use among the ancient Patriarchs, which was true of Sacrifice; and as the Nations that sunk into Idolatry had not lost all Footsteps of this traditional Religion, so without Doubt it was carefully preserved among the Hebrews, and God thought not fit to discard it in his legal Worship. And since a consistent End of the whole is assigned by the Writers of the New Testament, referring the Origin of all to God, and their Interpretation is confirmed by Miracles; we ought to admit the Sense which they have given, and esteem that the just account of the Ordinances of the legal Dispensation.

244 The gradual Revelation of the Gospel.

This allegorical Genius of the old Law is set forth by St. Paul under the Type of Moses receiving a Glory in his Countenance by conversing with God, which when the People were not able to behold, he veiled it from their Sight. Moses is here proposed as the Minister of the former Dispensation, whose Ministry was not without its Glory, as it revealed the Will of God, and pointed out to Christ, the Mediator of a better Covenant. But since the People could not stedfastly look into this great End of the Law, it had a Veil cast over it till the Time was to come, when that Veil should be taken away, and all with open Face behold, as in a Glass, the Glory of the Lord.

The Jews themselves, though they deny the Christian Exposition, yet are not backward to acknowledge some allegorical Meaning to lie concealed under the Precepts of the Law. (Maimon. More Nevoch. ex version. Buxtorf. par. 3. cap. 9.)

And whilst the Jews own a mystical Meaning, and the Gospel has shewn Christ to be the End or Purport of the Mosaic Discipline, we may with more Confidence search into Particulars.

lars. And though all Particulars are not expressly applied by the Writers of the New Testament, yet the Specimen which they have given, authorises us to enquire after the rest; especially since they have assured us, that the whole had the same Design. There is not indeed the same Certainty in those Particulars, which are searched out by human Sagacity, as on those of which express Application has been made by some inspired Writers. But yet when they are not urged apart by themselves, but in Conjunction with the whole System of ritual Religion, not to gainsay the Applications that are made in Scripture, but conformably to them, there is then a Weight in such Interpretations, they display the Harmony of the Mosaic Precepts, and shew how the same Wisdom, which had been more evidently taught of some, did really run throughout, and give Sanction to the whole.

Now as all the Treasures of Wisdom are hid in Christ, so there is great Variety of Benefits in his Religion which centre in himself. We are not to wonder, if on the one Hand many of the legal Prescriptions should be calculated to signify the same Mystery, and on the other Hand, variety of Mysteries should be referred to by one and the same Rite.

Thus much being premised, I proceed more particularly to give some Specimen of them in the Instances abovementioned.

1. First then I proposed to explain the Mystery of the Tabernacle, afterwards the Temple. In these Places God was pleased to vouchsafe a symbolical Manifestation of his Presence. From whence the Tabernacle had its Name Mischan, as being the Habitation of God; and the like Name of Shechinah is given by the Jewish Writers to that bright Appearance of divine Glory which resided in it. This figured out that Mystery to be accomplished when the Son of God should cloath himself with Flesh, who is therefore said to make his Tabernacle (σκηνώσαι) with us; to have the Fulness of the Godhead, (answering to that Fulness of Glory sometimes manifested in the Old Sanctuary) dwelling in him bodily.

Again, the Temple was also fitted to denote every private faithful Member of Christ, who are the Temples of God, and in whom Christ dwells, and sanctifies and enlightens by the gracious Influence and Direction of his Spirit. (See Rom. viii. 9, 10. 1 Cor. vi. 19. 1 Pet. ii. 5. Eph. ii. 20, 21, 22.)

The Skins and baser Materials which covered the Sanctuary, whilst its inward Utensils were of great Value, figured out our Redeemer, who, tho' in his outward Form, may appear despised and rejected of Men; yet by Faith we can easily behold his Glory, the Glory as of the only Begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth. So also was figured out his Church by them, which though outwardly despised, is all glorious within.

Once more, the Condition of the Israelites being at first moveable, the Tabernacle was of such Materials, as might be easily removed; till at last when they were in peaceable Possession of the promised Land, its sacred Utensils were fixed in the Temple. So Christ was in this World, as in a Wilderness, not having where to lay his Head; but being raised from the Dead, he sitteth at God's right Hand, in a State of endless Triumph. So also is his Church in a State of Travel at present, but shall hereafter be translated to a State of everlasting Rest and Glory.

But besides this general Consideration of the whole Sanctuary taken together, we may find
Mysteries

Mysteries concealed in every part of it. The great Court which surrounded the Sanctuary, and in which were the Laver, and the Altar, &c. fitly represents to us the visible Church of Christ, which has its own Enclosure, separating its Members from the Heathen World, admitting them to the Privilege of outward Worship, but still retaining them in Hope of better Things that are invisible.

The Altar and the Laver, which were situated in this Court, were Types of Christ, the one as he is the Fountain opened to the House of David, Zech. xiii. 1. the other as he is our only Mediator. 1 Tim. ii. 5. At the same Time the Laver prefigured Baptism, called the Laver of Regeneration, and the Altar the Eucharist as the Memorial of that Atonement Christ has made for Sin. Luke xxii. 19. The sacred Fire is a Type of that eternal Spirit, through whom Christ offered himself without Spot to God, and without whose sanctifying Vertue the Oblation of ourselves will never be acceptable. The Horns of the Altar may set forth the Power and Acceptance of our Redeemer, Luke i. 69. Heb. vii. 5.

So much for the Court, by which the Sanctuary was encompassed. The Sanctuary was divided into two Parts, the one called the Holy Place, the other the Holy of Holies. None entered the Holy Place but the Sons of Aaron, who do figure out all the true and faithful Members of Christ's invisible Church, who are declared to be a royal Priesthood, and to be made Kings and Priests unto God, inasmuch as they are admitted to those unseen and spiritual Advantages, to which the carnal Professors can never penetrate. In another Respect they prefigure the Ministers of Christ, who negotiate the Affair of our Salvation.

248 The gradual Revelation of the Gospel.

Here was the Table of Shewbread to denote Christ set forth as the Bread of Life to his Servants.

Here also was the golden Candlestick, with seven burning Lamps to denote the Illuminations and Graces of the Holy Ghost. They were lighted every Evening and required to continue till Morning, to intimate, that that Light might have its Use, during the Night of ritual Types, but might be superseded when Christ should arise to give us stronger Light. 2 Pet. i. 19.

Lastly, here was the golden Altar of Incense in the nearest Situation to the Holiest of all, whose Horns were yearly sprinkled with the Blood of Sacrifices, but whose daily Use was the burning of sweet Odours, not only as a Symbol of the People's Prayers daily offered, but likewise of that continual Intercession of Christ before the Throne of Heaven, which alone can render our Prayers acceptable.

Beyond this holy Place was the Holiest of all, the Emblem of the highest Heaven, containing the most significant Symbol of divine Glory and of Christ in his State of Exaltation. This was divided from the former Apartment by a Veil, as that was from the inner Court, which as it denoted the Concealment of these Mysteries under the Darknes of legal Shadows, and the veiling of divine Glory in the Person of Christ, under a Covering of Flesh; so the High Priest turning it by and entering once every Year, imported that that Obscurity should be removed, and Gospel Truths be openly revealed, when a Forerunner in our Name should enter into Heaven itself to appear in the Presence of God for us.

Within this Veil was the most remarkable Symbol of the old Oeconomy, the Ark of the Covenant, and over it was that Manifestation of divine Glory, distinguished distinguished by the Name of Shechinah. This seems to be that Throne of God mentioned. Jer. xvii. 12. Ezek. xliii. 7. And what could it more aptly signify than Christ represented as our King and Governor, through whom God is gracious to his People. But whereas this Ark was hid from vulgar Eyes, which could not penetrate to look into the Mysteries of our Redemption, we find the Temple of God is represented in the New Testament to be laid open in Heaven, (Rev. xi. 19.) so that the Ark of his Testament was seen in it. Immediately then upon Christ's Expiration, the Veil of the Temple was rent in twain from the Top to the Bottom, to import that the legal Mysteries are now unveiled, and those Benefits conferred in Truth, which were formerly dispensed in Types and Figures.

I need not after this enlarge upon the Things that were reposed in or near the Ark, The Tables of the Covenant, the Book of the Law, the Pot of Manna and Aaron's Rod that budded, which might fitly imply with what Care we ought to keep and observe God's Commandments, and how punctually they were fulfilled by our Redeemer, how Christ is the living Bread that came down from Heaven, figured by the Manna which fed the Fathers in the Wilderness, and they who hold a constant and invisible Communion with him, are admitted to a farther Privilege, in partaking with him of the hidden Manna typified by the incorruptible Manna within the Veil, of which none under the Law might eat: Lastly, how his Priesthood is efficacious, so that though put to Death in the Flesh, yet like Aaron's Rod he quickned and bore Fruit, and remaineth a Priest for ever, after the Power of an endless Life.

(2.) I am to consider what was the Method of worshipping by Sacrifice and Incense.

Of Sacrifices some were of the Fruits of the Earth, as Corn and Wine and Oil, which had the Name of Mincha and Nesek, Meat and Drink Offerings; Others were taken from among clean Beasts and Birds; and these besides having their Blood partly sprinkled about the Altar, or towards the Mercy-Seat, and partly poured out at the Bottom of the Altar, were either consumed whole as Burnt-Offerings, or else had certain Segments offered in that Manner, whilst the rest was disposed, in Proportion to the different Nature of the Sacrifice, either burnt without the Camp, and afterwards without the City of Jerusalem, or else eaten by the Priests alone within the holy Place, or partly by the Priests, and partly by the Offerers. (See Outram de Sacrific.)

Some of the Sacrifices were eucharistical, others, cuttical, to pray for the Continuance of Blessings; others expiatory designed to make Satisfaction and Atonement for Sin.

Some of their Sacrifices seem to have partook of every Kind, though from their principal View they are referred to one, rather than another. And of all of them it is observed, that they had something of an expiatory Vertue, infomuch that Burnt-Offerings are said to make Atonement, Lev. i. 9, 13, 17. from whence they are represented to have made a sweet Savour unto the Lord, The same is to be argued from the Ceremony of sprinkling the Blood, which was used in these as well as in the Sin and Trespass-Offering, the declared Use whereof was altogether expiatory. See Lev. xvii. 11.

Now that these had no real but only a symbolical Efficacy in the Atonement of Sin, will appear both from the Nature of the Thing itself, and from the Terms of the Mosaic Institution. Heb. x. 4. Psal. xlix. 7, 8. it is not possible that the Blood of Bulls,
&c.

Ec. should put away Sin, much less could brute Beasts give Merit to their Sufferings. The Matters to be expiated were generally either legal Impurities or involuntary Trespases, and if some willful Immoralities were allowed the Benefit of Expiation, they were such as were done with less aggravating Circumstances, whilst the more grievous Violations of Duty were punished by the Death of the Offender, who had no special Sacrifice appointed for him. I say no special Sacrifice, because where the Matter was concealed, or the Law not duly executed, it does not appear that such Offenders stood excluded from all Benefit of that general Expiation, which was annually made on the great Day of Atonement, as well by the scape Goat, as by bloody Sacrifices, Lev. xvi. 21. But then having no express Application to such Cases, and having them exposed to the Rigour of the Law, is an Argument of the Weakness of legal Sacrifices, and the Want of some more perfect Sacrifice to purge us from all Sin. The Priest and the Altar appointed for such Atonement were manifestly chargeable with Imperfection, and wanted to be cleansed themselves.

And after all the Effect was plainly symbolical and leads us to acknowledge the Benefit of Christ's Redemption, and those invaluable Privileges he has purchased for us. That temporal Death which was denounced by the Law, will denote that everlasting Punishment to which Sinners are exposed; the legal Impurity will denote the Defilement of Sin; the outward Admission to the Service of the Temple will denote our spiritual Privilege of Access unto God, as well in the present Ordinances of his Church, as in the future Inheritance of his eternal Kingdom. And all this being performed by the Oblation of Sacrifices, clean and perfect in their Kind, will import our being redeemed with the pre- cious Blood of Christ, See 1 Pet. i. 19. Heb. ix. 14. Eph. v. 2. Heb. ix. 24.

I proceed now to the,

(2.) Third Instance, under which I was to consider the mystical View and Meaning of the Levitical Worship, and that respects the Administrator, which was in some Cases the High Priest alone, and in the rest any of the Sons of Aaron.

We have already observed how strictly the Priesthood was confined to the Family of Aaron; and as this did figure out all sincere Members of Christ, who are set apart from the rest of Mankind to be a royal Priesthood offering up spiritual Sacrifices; so more especially did it in another View figure out Christ their Head making a perfect Expiation for Sin. The Sacrifice he offered was his human Nature, paying a perfect Obedience to God, and submitting to Death. For as the Law could do nothing of itself, so it was forced to lay together a Variety of Figures, which under different Views, might represent to the Church the one great Anti-type, who is himself our Altar, Priest, and Sacrifice.

He was not of the Family of Aaron to import that his Priesthood is not of the same Order. But there were such Lines of Resemblance between the Sons of Aaron and him, as were fit to be observed between the Type and the Reality. The Descent from Aaron was not of itself sufficient, except they were descended from such honourable Marriage as the Law prescribed, to legitimate their sacred Services, and qualify them to approach to God. This shadowed out the divine Generation of the Son of God, together with that immaculate Conception of a Virgin, whereby he submitted to be made the Son of Man. Heb. v. 5.

The Aaronical Priests were to be free from any Blemish or Defect of Body, and to be of a religious Frame of Mind, which did but faintly represent the unexampled Purity and Perfection of our great Higb-Priest. Heb. vii. 26, 27, 28.

The Method of Consecrating and Appointing the legal Priests, was also calculated to Figure out the Perfection of our great Higb-Priest, who had all that internal Virtue and Sanctity, which they could only signify by outward Ceremony. The external Washing of Water, at the same time that it upbraided their natural Impurity, did withal betoken the Necessity of unspotted Holiness in him who should approach to God. To their figurative Services a figurative Cleansing might suffice.

But the spiritual Service of the New Testament required a Priest that should be absolutely clean, through whom we may draw nigh unto God, having our Consciencs purged from dead Works.

Again, the putting on of the Sacred Vestments was another Rite of Consecration, which being partly Linnen, were fit to represent the perfect and unspotted Righteousness of Christ, for which we are accepted of the Father, who are therefore said to put on Christ, Rom. xiii. 14. and to be arrayed in fine Linnen, Rev. xix. 8. And partly being adorned with Gold and Gems and curious Workmanship inscribed with the Character of Holiness, and the Names of the twelve Tribes, and figure out the transcendent Glory and Dignity of our Redeemer, communicated in a fit Proportion to his faithful Members, who are in him a royal Priesthood, together with his care over them as the Israel of God.

The Uction of the holy Oil did not only signify the Graces of the Holy Spirit, but him, in a more particular manner, who is emphatically styled the Messiah, or Anointed of the Lord. Psal. xlv. 7.

Once

254 The gradual Revelation of the Gospel.

Once more, in the first Consecration of Aaron, Exod. xxix. there were Sacrifices offered, first for Expiation of their Sins, then for Burnt-Offerings, and lastly for Peace-Offerings. Admitting them, as it were, into the Family, and to the Table of their God. In these Moses acting the Part of a Priest, was an illustrious Type of Christ, as well in granting a divine Commission to the Ministers of the New Testament, as in sanctifying all the faithful Members of his Church, and qualifying them to draw near unto God.

So far of the Appointment of the Priests. The Office of the Persons thus appointed was chiefly exercised in Sacrifice and Incense.

I have formerly shewn how these prefigured the Sacrifice and Intercession of Christ: But since we are now considering him under the Character of the Priest that offered it, I shall attend more particularly to those more solemn Circumstances with which the Oblation of the High-Priest was performed the Day of the annual Atonement.

At that Time besides the two Rams for Burnt-Offering, and the Scape-Goat which was sent alive into the Wilderness, there was a Bullock and a Goat appointed for Sin-Offerings, (Lev. xvi. 3. 28.) of whose Blood the High-Priest having open'd the Veil of the most holy Place, sprinkled before the Mercy Seat, proceeding then to consume the Fat upon the Altar, and send their Carcases to be burnt without the Camp or Gates of Jerusalem.

How beautiful is the Application of all this to the Christian Scheme! The Blood as being the Life of the Beast, might fitly figure out the reasonable Soul, and therefore Christ, when considered as our Victim, is said to shed his Blood for us, when considered as a rational Agent, he is said to pour out his Soul unto Death. At the same Instant that Christ extended

ed on the Altar of his Cross, expired without the Gates of Jerusalem, the Veil of the Temple was rent in twain to import, that what was anciently figured out by those Mysteries was now accomplished; that his divine Nature putting off the Veil of Flesh, and carrying his Soul within the Veil of Heaven, presented it before the Father as the Price of our Redemption.

The Ceremony of the High-Priest performed once every Year, was fully expressive of this Atonement of Christ made for all. Heb. ix. 25, &c. Which being perfect, his Body was not, like the legal Victims, to remain under the Sentence of Death, nor therefore to be burnt, but to testify the Conquest he had made by a speedy Resurrection, and Exaltation to the highest Glory. Then was the whole Humanity presented before God, and the Heavens have received him, not only as our Priest to offer, and intercede, but also as the Lamb, that had been slain for us.

It is in the Continuance of this Oblation, that his Intercession consists; whereby he makes Application of his own Merit to obtain the Pardon of our Sins, and withal to recommend our Addressees at the Throne of Grace, represented by the Incense of the High-Priest offered as the Symbol of the People's Prayers. In Allusion to which the great Angel of the Covenant is mention'd by St. John to have a golden Censer and much Incense. Rev. viii. 3, 4.

This may suffice to illustrate how commodious a Sense arises from the Christian Exposition of the ancient Ceremonies, which being added to other Arguments taken from the Drift and Genius of the Old Testament, and enforced by the Miracles, by which the Writings of the New Testament, and consequently this Exposition is supported; there can be no Reason to reject a Method of Interpreting so amply

amply recommended, both by its internal and external Evidence. If there might be any Doubt of some Particulars, when taken by themselves, yet when the whole System is surveyed together, so harmonious in all its parts, Displaying such Beauty in the ancient Institutions, as well as giving Testimony to the Doctrine of the Gospel; and all this confirmed by every sort of Evidence by which the Books of the New Testament are attested; there can be after this no reasonable Doubt, as to the Purport of the whole, which was clearly calculated to lead Men to the Knowledge of Christ, and had no farther Significancy after his appearing.

I have not particularly stated the Evidences of the New Testament, which do at the same Time confirm the Exposition given of the Old; what I pretend to, is, that there are reasonable Inducements to acquiesce in this Exposition of the Old Testament, even abstracted from the Authority of the New; but when that was taken into the Account, what was rational before, becomes certain. They are Arguments which add Lustre to each other; for as the Authority of the New Testament confirms this Exposition of the Old; so this Exposition, when shewn to be rational and consistent, prepares us to receive the New Testament itself with greater Reverence.

Here therefore I conclude my Subject, as having only undertaken to propose those Evidences of the Christian Religion which are to be gathered from the Old Testament. And I hope I have shewn, that however the fuller Knowledge of this Mystery might be reserved for the Gospel Times, some Notice of so great a Truth had been dispensed from the Beginning, and was opened more and more through the successive Ages of Time.

T H E
I N D E X.

A

A B R A H A M.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

	Page.
T HE Reason of the Calling of him; done for the Preservation of true Religion	37
Several Things required in a Hi- story of him	38
1st , Piety	ib.
2dly , Great Encouragements to be offered him	ib.
His Character	ib.
3dly , How he became a Nation	39
Revelations made to ABRAM	37
Remarks upon them	40
How ABRAHAM became a Nation	43
The 4th Thing required in a History of ABRAHAM and his Family, relating to their Laws	48

BERRIMAN.

	Page.
His Family selected to receive the Promises, which yet did not vacate the original Covenant with Mankind	120
This Promise to ABRAHAM, and to his Seed, confined by some to temporal Blessings, but without Reason	ib.
Difference between the Blessings of Isaac and Ismael	121
Which figured out the carnal and spiritual Seed	ib.
This further enforced by an Allusion to the Name of Hagar	122
The literal Promises to the Line of Isaac were figurative of spiritual Blessings	ib.
This covenanted Nation figured out the Church of Christ, and their Enemies the Enemies of the Church	123
The Church of the Gentiles succeeded at first in room of the Jews	ib.
They who attended to the spiritual Meaning were the spiritual Seed ; as they who did not, were merely natural	124
The Expulsion of Ismael more particularly considered	ib.
As many Sons of ABRAHAM might want the spiritual Alliance, so those of other Extractions might, in vertue of it, be reckoned for his Children	ib.
Thus the Promises, in the mystical Meaning, contained the very Doctrine of the Gospel	125

And

And did not belong to the natural Seed, as such, but only to the spiritual	125
And to these considered as gathered in one Body in Christ	126
ABRAHAM the Father of the Faithful	ib.
The Promise made to Jacob	127
But yet Esau was not absolutely excluded from Spiritual Blessings	ib.
Jacob's Sons were all within the Covenant	128
— Their Division into Tribes, a Type of the Christian Church gathered out of all Nations	ib.
— Their Bondage in Egypt , and their De- liverance from it, did fitly figure out the Christian Church	ib.
The Blessing of ABRAHAM parted among the Twelve Tribes	129

ACTIONS.

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

Human ACTIONS free	221
--------------------	-----

AGENT.

See Free Agent.

AIR.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

	Page.
Objections relating to the AIR considered	247
The Nature of the AIR considered	ib.
A Property of it, Elasticity	ib.
Gravitates towards the Earth	248
Particular Uses of this Element shewn	ib.
By a Fermentation of it, Storms and Earth- quakes, Thunders and Lightnings	250
— Plagues and Famines are occasioned	251

ANIMALS.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Why God made so many noxious ANIMALS	416
The different Motions of ANIMALS, and the Causes of them	435
The locomotive Act itself	436
— Suited to the various Occasions of various ANIMALS	ib.
— In Reptiles slow	ib.
— In Man and Beasts swifter	ib.
— In Birds and Insects very swift	ib.
— The geometrical Performance of it	437
The Place adapted to the several Tribes of ANIMALS	ib.
Their Organs are adapted to their Place	ib.
The Balance of ANIMALS Numbers	ib.
	So

—————So that the World is not overstocked by their Increase	437
—————Nor depopulated by their Death	ib.
The Balance particularly visible in Man	438
—————Of his Life, in different Ages of the World	ib.
The Food of ANIMALS	439
The Adjustment of the Quantity of Food, in Proportion to the Eaters	ib.
The various Food of ANIMALS	440
Peculiar Food that particular Places afford to the Creatures residing therein	441
The curious Apparatus in all Animals, made for gathering, preparing, and digesting their Food	ib.
Of the Mouth	ib.
———In Insects very surprising	ib.
———In Birds	ib.
Of the Teeth of ANIMALS	442
Of their parotid, sublingual, and maxillary Glands	ib.
Of their Gullet	ib.
Of their Stomach	ib.
The Number of Ventricles in various ANI- mals	443
Their great Sagacity in finding out, and pro- viding their Food	ib.
Their Affection for their Young	444
Provision made for the Preservation of such ANIMALS as are sometimes destitute of Food	445
Of their Cloathing	446
Which is suited to their Place of Abode, and Occasions	ib.

	Page.
The Cloathing of Quadrupeds	447
—— Of Birds	ib.
The Beauty of ANIMALS Cloathing	ib.
Of the Habitation of ANIMALS	448
Their Sagacity in Building their Nests, &c.	ib.
Of ANIMALS Self-Preservation	449
Of the Generation of ANIMALS	450
Their natural Sagacity in choosing the fittest Places to reposit their Eggs and Young	451
The suitable Apparatus in every Creature, for laying up its Eggs, &c.	ib.
They chuse the fittest Time for their Gene- ration	ib.
Their peculiar Number of their Young	452
Of the Diligence which irrational Creatures have in Breeding their Young	ib.
Of Incubation	ib.
Their Courage in Defending their Young	ib.
Their Sagacity in Feeding them	ib.
Their Suckling their Young	453
Their Apparatus for this Service	ib.
Different Ways in different ANIMALS, in Feeding their Young	ib.
A Survey of the particular Tribes of ANI- MALS	454
A Survey of Man	ib.

BURNET.

All ANIMALS indued with proper Powers and Dispositions suited to their Ends	441
--	-----

A P O S T L E S.

Vol. I.

B L A C K H A L L.

	Page.
Were commissioned by God, and consequently their Doctrines Divine	400

S T A N H O P E.

Vol. II.

There Miracles exceed those of Moses and the Prophets	427
Their Example who observed the Law of Moses , not inconsistent with the Christian Doctrine, concerning the Expiration of the Levitical Law	460

G U R D O N.

Vol. III.

Judges, whether Christ came to Life	389
Their sometimes not knowing him, no Proof of his not being the same Person	391
Their Testimony concerning the Gospel Miracles, not to be suspected	404
Because no worldly Purposes could be served by such a Testimony	405
Nor could they pretend to impose upon the World	406

	Page.
Considering who they were that were to carry on the Cheat	407
And the People to be cheated	408

A P P A R I T I O N S.

Vol. II.

H A N C O C K.

A Proof of a God	198
------------------	-----

A T H E I S M.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

The Folly of it	3
-----------------	---

G A S T R E L L.

Cause of it	248
To be considered as a Vice	253

H A R R I S.

Proceeds from Wickedness	257
——— From Pride	260
——— From Wilfulness	261

Vol.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

	Page.
Causes of it	84

BUTLER.

By the Principles of it, no such Thing as a foolish Credulity	339
——— There can be no such Thing as Error	340
Credulity in ATHEISM foolish	341
ATHEISM not exempt from Enthusiasm	363

WOODWARD.

The Cause of it from Men's Passions	397
——— From want of Education	ib.
——— From an unjust Conceit of Human Sufficiency	398
——— From an Abuse of Prosperity	ib.
——— From the Impudence of wicked Men	399

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Prevails most in Countries of Restraint	69
Cannot stand a strict Examination	71

GUR-

GURDON.

Difficulties in every Scheme of it	Page. 329
------------------------------------	---------------------

ATHEISTS.

Vol. I.

GASTREL.

The Faith and Practice of an ATHEIST	238
An ATHEIST, who	252

HARRIS.

Whether any Speculative ATHEIST	261
---------------------------------	-----

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

Whether any ATHEISTS	187
ATHEISTS Arguments, that univerfal Consent is no Proof of a God, answered	190

BUTLER.

ATHEISTS unhappy	332
	to 336
Have not the Advantage of the Religious Man, with respect to the Pleasures of the Body	338
ATHEISTS, who	341

What

What Degrees of Evidence is sufficient to vindicate an ATHEIST from a foolish Credulity	342
ATHEISTS Arguments against universal Consent, answered	344
Their Objections, that the Belief of a God might come from Tradition, answered	347
The ATHEISTS Account how Man was made, insufficient and absurd	366

W O O D W A R D.

The ATHEIST must believe a God, or deny Annihilation	402
--	-----

Vol. III.

G U R D O N.

The ATHEISTS Arguments against Religion affect only Superstition	315
ATHEISTS cannot set their Minds easy from the Fears of a God	317
The ATHEIST has no Reason to make Profelytes	319
The Difficulties they complain of in our Notion of a God, do not amount to a Contradiction	325
The Denial of a Creative Power in God, no Service to the Atheist	327
The ATHEISTS Objection against the Goodness of God, answered	328
The Difficulties of the ATHEISTS Scheme examined	329

	Page.
Forced to alter the received Notions of Matter	330
—— To deny that there is any such Thing in Nature as a mutable Being	332
Their Absurdity in denying the Possibility of a Creative Power	334
Their Scheme of a Plurality of necessary Beings impossible	335
The ATHEIST'S Account of moral Good and Evil absurd	ib.
The ATHEIST cannot free himself from the Fears of a Future State	367
—— Unreasonable in complaining of Difficulties	372
His Denial of moral Differences unreasonable	376
His Plea for not enquiring into the Merits of any Revelation, answered	385

A T O N E M E N T S.

Vol. IV.

B E R R I M A N.

Legal, did not reach all Causes	231
Whether Sacrifices on the great Day of Expiation were designed to atone for Sins in general	ib.
A T O N E M E N T S at the best but Figurative	232

A T M O S-

A T M O S P H E R E.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

Its Nature	Page
Its Use	410
	ib.

A T T R I B U T E S.

See Perfections, see God.

A T T R A C T I O N.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

What	52
Not essential to Matter	ib.
Allowing A T T R A C T I O N to be essential to Matter, yet the Atoms of the Chaos could never so convene as to form the present World	54

A U T H O R I T Y.

Vol. III.

G U R D O N.

A good Reason for giving our Assent to a Proposition	392
	The

	Page
The best way of teaching the World in respect of its Certainty	394
— Of its Shortness	397
— Of its Easiness	ib.

B

B E I N G.

Vol. II.

S. C L A R K.

Some one unchangeable and independent BEING existed from Eternity	86
And is Self-existent	ib.
The Self-existent BEING Eternal	93
Infinite and Omnipresent	94
Self-existent BEING but one	95
— Must be Intelligent	96
— From the Beauty of the World	97
— From the Origin of Motion	98
Self-existent BEING a free Being	ib.
Proved from the arbitrary Disposition of Things in the World	99
From final Causes	100
From the finiteness of created BEINGS	ib.
From the Impossibility of an infinite Succession of Causes	ib.
The Self-existent BEING must have infinite Power	101

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

	Page.
Two necessary independent BEINGS impossible	228
The Idea of two such Principles contradictory to each other	229

BURNET.

A Self-existent BEING, what	422
There is such a BEING	ib.
Must be Independent, Eternal, Necessary, Everlasting, Immutable, Omnipresent	ib.
The Properties of a Self-existent BEING incompatible to Matter	425

B I R D S.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Of the Motion of BIRDS, and the Parts ministering thereto	467
Their Body adapted for flight	ib.
Their Feathers facilitate their Motion	ib.
Wings made with great Skill	ib.
The textrine Art of the Plumage admirable	468
The Position of the Feathers on the Wings	ib.
The Apparatus of light Bones	ib.
Their Tail, and use of it	ib.

Their

Their Feet and Legs, wonderful	Page 468
Of the Head of BIRDS	469
Of the Stomach and Ufes	ib.
Of their Lungs, Breaſt, Neck, &c.	470
Of the Migration of BIRDS	ib.
Their knowing the Time of their flight, and the Way where to go, wonderful	ib.
Of the Incubation of BIRDS	471
The Act of Incubation	ib.

B O D Y.

Vol. II.

B E N T L E Y.

Human, a Proof of a God	13
Exceptions againſt it answered	13--15

Vol. II.

S. C L A R K.

The Refurrection of the B O D Y	168
---------------------------------	-----

W O O D W A R D.

The Human a Proof of a God	375
----------------------------	-----

B R U T E S.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

Whether they think	11
	Vol.

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

Where their Souls are immortal

Page.
218

Vol. III.

BURNET.

What become of the Immaterial Principle in them

443

C

CAIN.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

His murdering his Brother, consider'd
The Credibility of the History of Moses in this respect30
ib.

CAUSE.

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

The supreme CAUSE must be infinitely Wise 112
—Must be infinitely Good, Just, and True 113 to 117

(See GOD)

VOL. IV.

T

CAUSES

CAUSES Final.

Page

(See Final.)

CERTAINTY.

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

What	206
------	-----

STANHOPE.

Whatever CERTAINTY the Jews have for the Actions, &c. of Moses , the Christian has more for the Actions of Jesus	429 to 432
---	---------------

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

CERTAINTY of God's Fore-knowledge not repugnant to the Liberty of Men's Ac- tions	III
---	-----

WOODWARD.

A Physical CERTAINTY	382
A Mathematical CERTAINTY	ib.
A Moral CERTAINTY	ib.

CHANCE.

C H A N C E.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

	Page
What	30
The World not made by it	39

C H R I S T I A N I T Y.

Vol. III.

L E N G.

Prejudices against the Doctrine of it	212
Has all the Characters of a Revelation.	to 215
Revelation.	See

C H R I S T.

Vol. I.

B R A D F O R D.

Came to save Men	304
What Kind of Salvation he proposed	310
How he wrought out this Salvation	311
Mediator between God and Man	312
Gave Honour to God's Justice and Wisdom and Holiness, as Mediator	314, &c.
How CHRIST executed the Office of Me- diator	317
His Doctrine an Instruction to us	323
T 2	What

	Page.
What it teaches us, concerning God	323
——— Concerning ourselves	324
Rules he has laid down for the Management of our Tempers and Lives	326
His Life an Example to us	333
Why he passed so great a Part of his Life in Silence	334
His Life Innocent	388
Why he allowed his Disciples in transgressing the Tradition of the Elders, in not wash- ing their Hands	339
Why he rid in Triumph into Jerusalem	ib.
Why he called Herod Fox	ib.
Why he bid his Disciples provide Swords	340
His Life was a Life of Simplicity and Pru- dence	ib.
——— A Life of Piety	341
——— A Life of Charity	342
——— A Life of Purity	343
His Humility } His Meekness } an Example to us	344
His Life an Example of Patience	345
——— Of Constancy	346
Has annexed proper Sanctions to his Precepts to influence our Practice	348
Has promised the Assistance of his Spirit	350
Has settled such Institutions to be used in his Church, as are designed to convey the Grace of the Holy Spirit to us	352
The Efficacy of his Death extends further than the Knowledge of him	360

BLACKHALL.

	Page.
The Credibility of his Testimony concerning himself	395

STANHOPE.

His Miracles exceed Moses's , in the Power by which he acted	419
In the publick Manner of their being done	424
— In the authoritative Way of proceeding in his Miracles	426
His Miracles believed by the Jews	ib.
Advanced the Moral Law	442
Abolished Death	462
Brought Life and Immortality to Life	465

Vol. II.

CHRIST, tho' innocent, might be so a Sacrifice as to bear the Punishment of Sin	45
	to 53
Because he consented to suffer	49
And had a Right so to dispose of himself	ib.
And because the Ends of Punishment were answered by it	ib.

TURNER.

His Death a Sacrifice for Sin	311
By the Severity of his Sufferings, the Dignity of his Person, and by his Conquest over Death	ib.
His Resurrection a Proof of our Redemption	312
His Divinity proved	313

	Page.
He redeemed us by his Relation to us, as he is the Son of God	ib.
His Ascension into Heaven, necessary to our Redemption	314

WOODWARD.

His Divinity confessed always by the Catholick Church	391
No other Notion of him clears the Justice and Honour of God in the Pardon of Sin	393
No other Notion of CHRIST is sufficient to answer the Ends of his Messiahship, which was	394
To restore Men to the Favour of God	ib.
To give the greatest Glory to him	396
This lays the greatest Obligation upon Men to love God	ib.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

His Pedigree from David owned to be necessary by the Jews	113
This made the Evangelists record it	114
Difficulties which appear by comparing St. Matthew and St. Luke , are first to be removed	ib.
Two Difficulties proposed from comparing the Evangelists together	ib.
Which if they could not be cleared, yet would not destroy the Credit of them	115
Africanus's Scheme for reconciling them by the Law of Levirate	ib.
Which

	Page.
Which is a little altered by Grotius	116
This applied to the Case of Salathiel , but not without some Exception	ib.
Whether Jeconiah were pronounced Childless	ib.
Whether Salathiel and Zerobabel , in St. Matthew , might not be different Persons from those of the same Name in St. Luke	ib.
Africanus's Scheme applied in the Case of Joseph	117
This Scheme only shews the Pedigree of Joseph	ib.
This Difficulty removed from the Practice of the Jews to marry in their Kindred	ib.
A second Scheme proposed, which supposes St. Luke to give the Virgin's Pedigree	118
Whose Name is not mentioned, because it was not customary to name the Women in Pedigrees	119
The Phrase not used in the same Sense in every Degree	ib.
No Need that CHRIST's fleshly Extraction be derived from Solomon	ib.
His Descent promised to the Tribe of Judah	129
How CHRIST, as a Law-giver, is opposed to Moses	141
CHRIST's Reign more eminently typified in David's and Solomon's Reign, than in any of the following Kings	145
The prophetic Descriptions import something greater than can be literally applicable to those Times	ib.
Proved from St. Peter	146
And from St. Paul	ib.

	Page.
For this Reason CHRIST is called by the Name of David	146
And a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse	ib.
How said to be both Root and Offspring	147
In CHRIST the temporal Kingdom exchanged for a heavenly	ib.
The Amplitude of CHRIST's Kingdom	151
The Predictions in the Psalms could not be fulfilled in the Times of David and So- lomon	ib.
Particularly the Conquests of Enemies, and Conversion of them to the true Reli- gion	ib.
Shewn to be effected under the Son of Da- vid	152
The People converted are reckoned an Ac- cession to the Jews , and called by the Name of Israel	ib.
Many of the Jews should fall away	ib.
And so the Enemies of the Jews figured the Enemies of the Church, who are either to be reclaimed or destroyed	153
Idolatry to be destroyed	ib.
After which the apostate Jews are to be converted	ib.
And then both Jews and Gentiles shall be joined in one Kingdom	ib.
Which is the everlasting Kingdom described by Daniel	ib.
An Objection, that CHRIST's Kingdom is not extended agreeably to these Predic- tions, answered, tho' all Predictions were not to be fulfilled at once, but gradual- ly, many are now fulfilled	154

	Page.
Particularly, the Destruction of Idolatry	155
Which Christians insist upon, as a Proof of CHRIST'S Kingdom	ib.
And in Effect allowed by Porphyry	ib.
The Peace of CHRIST'S Kingdom	156
The Want of such Peace has been a Pre- tence to harden the Jews in Infidelity	157
The Jews were soon after the Appearance of CHRIST in great Straits	ib.
And Christians were warned to expect Di- visions and Persecutions	ib.
All which fell out	ib.
Those who object upon this Account, are mistaken, First , In the Nature of that Peace which Christ was to give	158
Which means not sensual Ease, but that inward Peace of God, which arises from a Pardon of Sin, &c.	ib.
And so it is explained by the New Tes- tament	ib.
Or else that spiritual uniting of all Na- tions into the mystical Body in CHRIST	ib.
Or the Tendency of his Doctrine, which gave Peace in the utmost La- titude	160
Secondly , Or they mistake the Persons who are Subjects of the Privilege	ib.
Not Israel literally taken, but the spiri- tual	ib.
— Meeting in the mean while with Op- position from Enemies, but finally subduing them	161
Among which Enemies there were to be many of the Jews	ib.

Or,

	Page
Or, Thirdly , They mistake the Time from whence the Blessing promised should commence	162
Conquests, Oppressions, and Divisions are foretold as well as Peace	ib.
So that a Course of Time is necessary for the Completion of all	ib.
The perpetual Duration of CHRIST's Kingdom	163
The Perpetuity promised, could not be fulfilled in David or Solomon	164
The Diminution of the temporal Kingdom did not vacate the Promise	ib.
An everlasting Kingdom promised to one Person	ib.
The Prophets engage for a Completion in Time to come	ib.
This perpetual Kingdom foretold by David	165
The Phrase of sitting at God's right Hand , explained by the Apostle to this Purpose	ib.
And that of making his Enemies his Footstool	166
The Quietness and Duration of his Kingdom, both implied in this Text	ib.
An Objection proposed, That there is a Term expressed for its Conclusion, in those Words, Until thine Enemies be made thy Footstool	ib.
Which are shewn to be inconclusive for that Purpose	ib.
Another Objection proposed from the Mention of CHRIST's delivering up his Kingdom	167
	Two

Two Methods of Reconciliation which are not approved	167
Two other Methods of Solution, either,
1. That this relates only to the militant Part of his Kingdom	ib.
Or else, 2. That by delivering up the Kingdom, is meant referring it to the Father as Head	168
And that the Subordination of the Son imports a fuller Manifestation of his personal Subordination	ib.
The Eternity of CHRIST'S Kingdom, not inconsistent with his reigning a thousand Years	ib.
The Sufferings and Death of the Messiah, were foretold from the first, but more explicitly by David and Ishaiab	169
A twofold State of the Messiah foretold	ib.
Yet the Jews generally overlooked it	170
Nor were CHRIST'S Disciples clear of this Prejudice	ib.
But after his Resurrection he opened the Scriptures more fully to them	ib.
The Sum of Ishaiab's Prophecy to this Purpose	171
Unity of Character confines the whole Prediction to one Subject	ib.
Which could not be the Nation of the Jews	ib.
—— Nor King Josiah	ib.
—— Nor the Prophet Jeremy	ib.
The antient Jews appear to have understood it of the Messiah	172
The first Exception , That they understood only the first Verse of him, and the rest of some other Person, overthrown both
	by

	Page.
by the Unity of Character , and by their applying some other Passages to him	172
The Notion, that there shall be two Messiahs has no Ground in Scripture	ib.
Nor antient Tradition	ib.
Nor are the Jews agreed upon the Matter, about the Office of the suffering Messiah	ib.
Nor is their Notion applicable to this Prophecy of Isaiab , since the same Person who suffers , is also to prosper	173
The Christian Interpretation only is consistent, which is stated under three Particulars	ib.
1 st , That CHRIST should voluntarily expose himself to Sufferings; which Character agrees to none of the Persons whom the Jews would understand it of, but agrees well to CHRIST	174
2 ^{dly} , CHRIST's Sufferings should make Atonement for Sin	ib.
Which cannot be applied to any Persons the Jews understand	ib.
An Objection stated from St. Matthew's Application of this Prophecy, removed	175
3 ^{dly} , These Sufferings of CHRIST were previous to his State of Exaltation	176
His Coming foretold to be before the Overthrow of the second Temple	177
His Coming not delayed upon Account of the Peoples Sins	190
Nor was it enough for him to come in the Flesh, and then conceal himself, on Account of the Jews Unworthiness	191
To come after the Preaching of a certain Messenger	ib.
What Grounds for such Expectation	ib.
	This

This Messenger called in another Place by the Name of Elijah the Propbet , who was expected to come in Person by some, but others thought it not necessary (See Harbinger)	193
Christ acted authoritatively and made an Attonement of perpetual Use	205

CHRISTIANS.

Vol. I.

KIDDER.

Their wicked Lives, weak Arguments, corrupt Doctrines, Contentions and Wars stumbling Blocks to the Conversion of the Jews	83
---	----

STANHOPE.

Have more Proof of the Actions of Jesus , than the Jews have of Moses	429, to 432
Accused by the Jews of perverting both the Law and the Prophets, and of assuming to themselves an undue Exemption from the Law of Moses	441
Their Interpretation of the Old Testament Prophecies concerning the Messiah just	481
CHRISTIANS in applying these Prophecies kept to their true Sense	482
Have differed in expounding the Books of the Old Testament	486
Some have thought that the Prophecies ought to be interpreted in one Sense	ibid.
	Some

Some have allowed several Senses

Page 487

Vol. II.

BUTLER.

CHRISTIAN'S Faith not shameful	326
His Practice not shameful	327
His Life an Imitation of God	ibid.
His Life is doing the Will of God	ibid.
His Practice agreeable to Reason	ibid.
He has taken the wisest Course	ibid.
He has no Reason to be ashamed of his Principles or Practices so far as the publick is concerned in them.	328
He has Reason to be ashamed of his Practice, so far as his own Happiness is concerned	330
Enjoys more Pleasure than Atheists	337
His Pleasures preferable to the others	338
The true CHRISTIAN hath no Reason to be ashamed of any such Credulity, as the Atheists reproach him for	339
A CHRISTIAN, who is so upon insufficient Grounds, need not be ashamed of his Credulity, because he is the better for his Religion	340

CHURCH.

Vol. II.

WOODWARD.

Catholick, has in all Ages confessed the Divinity of Christ

391
C I R-

CIRCUMCISION.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

	Page.
The Reason of it, and the Wisdom of God in its Appointment	43

CLOUDS.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Their Usefulness	411
------------------	-----

COHESION.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

What	242
Particles of Matter are united by it	243

CONSCIENCE.

Vol. I.

HARRIS.

What	283
------	-----

C O V E R

C O V E N A N T.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

	Page:
Made with our first Parents	23
The Condition of the COVENANT	27

BERRIMAN.

A new Covenant foretold.	229
---------------------------------	-----

C O N T R O V E R S I E S.

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Whatever way they are determined do not concern the Substance of our Faith	37
Arise from Mistakes	ibid.
Disputes foretold	38
Done good to Religion	ibid.

C O V E N A N T.

Vol. II.

TURNER.

The Wisdom of God in dealing with Men by COVENANTS	315
The Reasonableness of that COVENANT God made with us in Christ	316
The	The

	Page.
The Flesh of some Animals good for Food	258
CREATURES made originally subject to Death	259
——Have no Notion of Death	ibid.
The State of such animal CREATURES is upon the whole better for being Food for Men	260
The State of such Animals, at the worst, better than that of many other Creatures	ibid.
By Animals living upon one another there is more good upon the whole	261
The permitting such Creatures to encrease would be of very ill Consequence	262
(See Animals)

BURNET

All Creatures indued with proper Powers	440
No living Creatures produced by Matter and Motion	443
Every CREATURE made for Happiness, and by acting according to their Nature this Happiness is attained	ibid.
CREATURES not capable of Happiness themselves, made for the Happiness of others	ibid.
CREATURES necessary to the Happiness of Man made for that End	ibid.
All Things necessary provided for the Preservation of living Creatures	451
——For the Happiness of them	452

DEISTS.

D.

D E I S T S.

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

Whom

Page
252*Vol. II.*

S. CLARK.

The several Sorts of them	118 to 123
Unreasonable in denying the Possibility of Miracles in general	175

D E L U G E S.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

No infinite Deluges	18
---------------------	----

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Of the Deluge or Flood	164
------------------------	-----

U 2

Vol.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The Necessity of an universal DELUGE shewn Page. 52

DEMONIACS.

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

A Proof of a God 199

DEVIL.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

The Power of the DEVIL 302
Jews imagine every Distemper of the Devil 303
 Of Possession 304

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

Why he tempted Mankind as an Angel of
 Light 8
 The Motive of his Temptation ibid
 Curse denounced upon him explained 21

BERRIMAN.

A Restraint laid upon the DEVIL upon the Arrival of Christians in the dark Parts of the World 156
 His Delusions brought into the Church, are are in due Time to be removed 156

D I F F E R E N C E S.

Vol. III.

GURDON.

- A DIFFERENCE between moral Good and Evil evident, and for these Reasons 377
- 1st Because so long as there are intelligent Beings, as can compare one thing with another, the different Circumstances of Persons will necessarily make a DIFFERENCE in the Character of their Actions ibid.
- 2dly, The wisest Men have always acknowledged them 379
- Why Lycurgus allowed of Theft answered 381
- 3dly, They who least of all observe moral DIFFERENCES in their Practice, and refer all to Pleasure, cannot but confess a DIFFERENCE in some Cases 382
- Moral DIFFERENCES appear the same to God as to us 383
- God's not punishing the Bad, and rewarding the Good in this Life no Proof that there are no moral DIFFERENCES ibid.

D I S C I P L E S.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

- The Testimony of Christ's a Proof of the Christian Revelation 180

U 3

What

	Page.
What Things are necessary to make their Testimony complete	ibid.
They could not be imposed on	ibid.
They could not impose on others	ibid.
Their Testimony is truly convey'd to us	181

D R E A M S.

Vol. I.

W I L L I A M S.

One Way of Revelation	166
Difference between them and Vision	ibid.

D U T I E S.

Vol. IV.

B E R R I M A N.

Positive (See Laws)	213
-----------------------------	-----

E.

The E A R.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

Double	427
Its Situation in the best Place	ib.
Its Fabric	428

The

	Page.
The outward EAR different in different Animals	428
Substance of it	429
The inward Part of the EAR	ib.
The Texture of its Bone	430
The Tympanum	ib.
Auditory Nerves	ib.

E A R T H.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

The Figure of it spherical	413
Most commodious upon many Accounts	ib.
The Bulk of it	414
Motions of it	ib.
The Place of it in respect of the heavenly Bodies most commodious	415
Distribution of the EARTH and Waters well adjusted	ib.
The great variety of all Things upon and in the EARTH and Waters for the Uses of the World	416
Of the Globe of the EARTH	417
Its Soils necessary to the Growth of various Vegetables, to the various Occasions of Man, and other Animals	418
Various Strata of the EARTH affording Materials for Tools, Firing, Building	ib.
Conveyance of the sweet Waters	ib.
Of the Subterraneous Caverns, and Vulcano's	419
——— Of great Use	ib.

	Page,
Of its Mountains and Vallies, and their various Ufes and Beauty	419

E F F E C T S.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Some prove the occasional Interposition of God, or some intelligent Being fuperior to Man	175
Tho' we cannot know which by the Work it-felf	ib.

E T E R N A L.

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

Something ETERNAL	207
What is ETERNAL	208
Claims to ETERNAL Existence	ib.
Characters of an ETERNAL Being	ib.
Has all poffible Perfections	209
God is this ETERNAL Being	211

HARRIS.

Something ETERNAL	263
-------------------	-----

Vol

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

	Page.
Something ETERNAL	85
Difficulties in conceiving Eternity not to be regarded	ib.
Absolute Impossibility of an ETERNAL Succession of dependent Beings	86

H A N C O C K.

Something ETERNAL	192
-------------------	-----

E V A N G E L I S T S.

Vol. I.

S T A N H O P E.

Faithful Historians	430
What they wrote attested by other Historians	431

E V I L.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

The Cause of it	112
-----------------	-----

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Enquiry into the Cause of Moral EVIL	219
Method

	Page.
Method of treating the Subject	222
The Weakness of the Hypothesis of two original Principles of Good, and EVIL	227
What Sort of Idea that is of an infinite, independent, necessary EVIL Being	ib.
The true Notion of EVIL stated	231
Concerning the EVIL of Imperfection	ib.
Wherein it consists	232
The Imperfection of the material part of the World considered	ib.
The Imperfection of the particular Qualities of Matter	233
The Imperfection of those Laws of Motion which Matter is subject to	ib.
Wherein the EVIL of Imperfection consists, I. With regard to corporeal Things	235
The Quantity of Matter now existing cannot be called EVIL	ib.
All the Evils that arise from the different Motions of our System only natural Imperfections	239
Which the animal Part of the Creation is subject to	140
All moral EVIL arises from free Agents abusing their Dispositions and Affections	276
The EVIL of Punishment	307

GURDON.

Natural and moral EVIL no objection against the Goodness of God	328
Spinoza's atheistical Account of moral Good and EVIL absurd	335
No other Atheistic Scheme will account for Good and EVIL	338
	Tho'

I N D E X.

299

Page.

The Hypothesis of two independent Principles cannot account for Good and Evil

339

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

The Origin of it cannot be accounted for by natural Reason

93 ——— Accounted for by Revelation

95

E Y E.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

The Form of it	423
The Situation of it	ib.
The Motions of it	ib.
Its Numbers	424
Its Parts and Mechanism	ib.
Its Muscles	425
Its Tunicks	ib.
Its Humours	426
Its optic Nerves	ib.
Its Guard	ib.

F A B L E S.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

Method of instructing by them was antiently very frequent

233

——— To

	Page.
——— To teach Men Humility	233
——— As also to conceal some Myſteries from the Proud and Malicious , as well as to preſerve the Liberty of rational Agents	34
——— And when their meaning is fixed, they have the ſame Force with literal Predic- tions	235

F A I T H.

Vol. I.

BLACKHALL.

Having ſufficient Grounds of, 'tis unreaſon- able to deſire more	402
If Men had more, they, who do not believe, would not be perſuaded	407

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

What	4
To render FAITH a reaſonable Act it is nei- ther neceſſary or lawful ſo to interpret Scripture, as to make all the Doctrines in- telligible to us	11, 10 15

Vol. III.

GURDON.

No Safety in a FAITH, not grounded upon ſome Kind of Evidence	320
	F A L L

F A L L.

Vol. II.

T U R N E R.

	Page.
The State of Men before it, to be immortally happy while they were innocent, but to become mortal upon the first Transgression	275
This proved from God's Covenant with Adam, &c.	ib.
The Reasonableness of such a Covenant, proved from the Difference between Good and Evil	277
Proved from God's acting according to this Difference	ib.
From the advantageous Condition of Mankind in our original State	278
From the Necessity of a perfect Obedience	ib.
After the FALL Men must be in a State of Misery	279

Vol. III.

B U R N E T.

The Nature of the FALL explained	491
The necessary Methods upon it	ib.
Restoration to Perfection and Immortality	492
The necessary Means to this	493

F A T H E R S of the C H U R C H.

Vol. III.

I B B O T.

How far to be determined by them	75
	T o

	Page.
To be determined by them in Facts, but not in Questions of Judgment and Reason, or Interpretation of Scripture	76
Because they were fallible	ib.
Because there is not a competent Number of their undoubted Writings	ib.
Because their Writings treat of but few Things	77
Many of them were ignorant of the Jewish Learning	ib.
Their Writings difficult to understand	ib.
They have been mistaken in several material Points	ib.

F A T A L I T Y.

Vol. I.

H A R R I S.

All Things are not determined by it	287
-------------------------------------	-----

F E E L I N G.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

Its Organ is the Nerves	433
Which is dispersed thro' every Part of the Body	ib.

F E R M E N T A T I O N.

Vol. III.

J. C L A R K.

What	242
By it Heat and Life are preserved	243

F I-

FINAL CAUSES.

Vol. III.Page.

LENG.

Abfurdity of rejecting them 159

F I S H.

Vol. III.

DERHAM.

A glorious Scene of God's Power and Wisdom 479

F O R T U N E.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

What 30

F R E E A G E N T.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Motives proper to influence a FREE AGENT 283

F R E E D O M.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

The Perfection of it to chuse always what is most reasonable 429
3 This

This properly called Holiness Page.
430

FREE-THINKING, or Private Judgment.

Vol. III.

I B B O T.

What true FREE-THINKING is, which every Man ought to exercise in religious Matters 4

Rules to judge freely and justly ib.

A FREE-THINKER must have a sincere Love for Truth 5

Many falsely pretend to it ib.

Reasons to induce him to the Love of Truth ib.

Must have no Dread of any Consequences of it 6

Nothing to be received without Examination ib.

With Sincerity and Impartiality 7

Must use whatever Helps God has given him ib.

If God has given him a Revelation, as the Scriptures, he must not wrest that Scripture, to make it agree with any particular System ib.

Must interpret Scripture by true Criticism ib.

If he has no Revelation, he must do the best he can with meer Reason ib.

Whatever he finds to be true he must embrace 8

What is false or modern FREE-THINKING ib.

Modern FREE-THINKING has not a Love for Truth 9

This appears by its not yielding to the proper Arguments for the Possibility of a Revelation 10

FREE.

FREE-THINKERS afraid of the Consequences of the Truths of Religion	39
Partial Examiners of Truth	40
Some Instances of it	41 to 45
They use not all the Helps that God has afforded them	45
Unreasonably reject all Guides	48
True FREE-THINKING is every Man's Duty	50 to 55
Some Cautions to be observed in FREE-THINKING or private Judgment	55
Private Judgment allowed by all Persons	56
—— No Authority but over itself	ib.
Therefore a Man, who by his private Judgment is led to Atheism, has no Right to impose his Notions on others	57
Nor is he to be exempted from Submission to publick Establishments	ib.
Liberty of private Judgment does not make all Guides in Religion useles	58
Private Judgment to be employed upon such Subjects as we are capable of being Masters of	60
Every one may judge, in general, of the Truth of any Religion	61
—— And see that Christianity is a true one	ib.
Every private Man cannot be a Disputant	62
Objection, That private Judgment causeth different Religions, &c. answered	ib.
That private Judgment may lead to a Disbelief of Fundamentals, answered	65
That this Liberty puts all Religions upon a Level, answered	66
That this Liberty will confound the Distinction of Virtue and Vice, answered	67

	Page.
Objection, That this Liberty begets Pride, answered	68
Advantages of private Judgment	69
One Advantage is, Steadiness in Religion	71
Another is, That it lays a Foundation for mutual Charity	73
Another's Opinion ought not to weigh with us, without Reason	78
Private Judgment recommended by the Fa- thers	79
Objections out of Scripture against FREE- THINKING, answered	ib.
Objection, That human Reason is corrupted, answered	80
Mischiefs of FREE-THINKING falsely hurtful to true Religion	100 101
It incapacitates Men from hearkening to proper Arguments, and tends to uni- versal Scepticism	102

L E N G.

Objection of pretended FREE-THINKERS considered	112
What true Freedom of Thinking is	113
Not inconsistent with being responsible for the Use of it	114

G

G E N E R A T I O N.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

Infinite GENERATIONS of Men absurd	17
No equivocal GENERATION	28
	Vol.

Vol. II.

Page.

H A N C O C K.

The Impossibility of infinite GENERATIONS of Men a Proof of a God	192
--	-----

G O D.

Vol. I.

B E N T L E Y.

Proof of one from the Faculties of human Souls	8
— From the Frame of the World	38
Human Bodies a Proof of one	13

K I D D E R.

How he may be said to harden the Jews	87
--	----

G A S T R E L.

Nature of GOD	200
Relation between GOD and Man	201
That there is a GOD, 'tis possible	ib.
His Attributes proved	202
Probable that there is a GOD	203
The Certainty of a GOD	206
May oblige Men to act such a particular Way	219, 222
Will distinguish between those who sometimes sin, and those who constantly do so	231

H A R R I S.

Arguments against the Being of a GOD re- futed	262
That we have no Idea of GOD, false	263
Eternal	265
Self-existent	266

X 2

Other

	Page.
Other Attributes proved	266
The Notion of him, not from Fear	267
—— Or Ignorance	ib.
—— Or Cunning	268
Objections against GOD's being a Spirit re- futed	270
A spiritual Substance	273
We may reason of the Nature of him, from his Attributes	277
Must be righteous	280
GOD not a necessary Agent	287

BRADFORD.

How GOD may be said to teach Men	299
Who may be said to have learned of GOD	ib.
What Qualifications necessary to learn of GOD	301
His Holiness, what	314

BLACKHALL.

His Confirmation of Christ's Testimony 396 to	400
—— To the Apostles	400

STANHOPE.

His Immutability does not infer that every Ordinance of his must be immutable	469
--	-----

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

One supreme GOD	163
His revealing himself to the Patriarchs, and giving the Law	164
Of his sending his Son into the World	165
Not unreasonable to suppose him making a Revelation of his Son to Men	ib.
	All

All Things alike possible to God 173

H A N C O C K.

His Existence proved by universal Consent 190

Notion of him could not come from Ignorance ib.

— From Second Causes ib.

— Nor from Tradition ib.

— Nor from Fear ib.

— Nor from Policy 191

His Being proved from the Frame of the World 192

From the Bodies of living Creatures 193

From the Regularity of the acting of even inanimate Creatures ib.

From the excellent Harmony of the Creation 195

From natural Conscience 196

From Apparitions 198

From Witches 199

From Demoniacs, Prodigies, and Prophecies ib.

We have an Idea of God 201

Infinity, when applied to God, not unintelligible 202,

Eternal 205

The Original of Motion 209

An immaterial Being 211

Objections against God's Knowledge, answered 218

— Against his Wisdom in the Creation of the World, answered 220

— Against his Justice, taken from the Evils of the World, answered ib.

	Page.
There is in GOD a Necessity of Nature, and a Necessity of acting, yet God is a free Be- ing	221
Objection, Why GOD permits Sin, answered	222
Objection against his Providence, upon Ac- count of the unequal Distribution of Re- wards and Punishments	224
Small Things not below his Care	225

BUTLER.

The Reasonableness of believing a GOD	343
Universal Consent, a Proof of one	ib.
Mens wicked Lives do not destroy the uni- versal Belief in GOD	345

Vol. II.

GOD being Incomprehensible, no Proof that there is no God	346
The Belief of a GOD, not from Tradition	347
Nor from Fear	350
Nor from Ignorance of the Powers of Mat- ter	353
Nor from Policy	354
Nor from ill Humour	357
Proved to be a just Being, from the Terrors of Conscience	358
Men ought to fear GOD, because he is good	359
The Frame of Mens Bodies, and the Powers of their Souls, prove a GOD	366

WOODWARD.

His Being proved from the Frame of the World	374
His Being proved by the manifest Footsteps of an over-ruling Providence	375
	Common

Common Consent a Proof of a GOD	375
Human Bodies a Proof	ib.
The Faculties of our Souls a Proof	376
His Nature and Attributes discovered by the Christian Religion	377
Must be Eternal	403
A future State proved from his Goodness	ib.

DERHAM.

Why GOD made so many noxious Animals, Insects, and Plants	416
GOD not unjust in making noxious Reptiles	478

Vol. III.

LENG.

Mere Belief of a GOD, without a Providence, no Ground of Religion	118
General Belief of a GOD may proceed from common Instruction, conveyed down from the Beginning	142
This confirmed from several Instances, by U- sages of a civil Nature	144
The universal Belief of a GOD, from the Frame of Man's Mind	146
No Nation without the Belief of a GOD	147
Wicked Men no Argument, that the Notion of a GOD is not natural	ib.
Another Ground of the Belief of a GOD, a- rises from visible Effects	148
Sufficient Means of knowing GOD makes it inexcusable to disown him	161
No Defect in the Goodness of GOD, if he suffer those to be miserable who disown his Being	163

	Page.
Goodness, Justice, &c. essential to the Divine Nature	165
God will govern rational Beings in a rational Way	168
God's Goodness and Justice reconciled	208

GURDON.

What is a true Fear of God	316
The Difficulty of conceiving some Perfections in God, no Reason for disbelieving them	324
Nothing but a Contradiction can justify such a Belief	325
The Denial of a Creative Power in God, no Service to an Atheist	327
This cannot be proved to be impossible	328
An Objection against his Goodness, answered	ib.
The Union of God with Man, in the Person of Christ, explained	337
Arguments on which the religious Man builds his Belief of a God	342
The Existence of Motion, a Proof of a God	ib.
The Difficulties that are raised against God's being the Author of Motion, considered	352
God not the Author of Sin, tho' he is of Motion	354
Moral Differences appear the same to God as to us	383
God not obliged to make any Revelation	400

BURNET.

That there is a God, or some self-existent Being	422
Absolutely Perfect	423
Whatever God is, is his very Essence	ib.

That

Page.

That whatever he is, he is independently, &c.	424
That the Perfections of GOD are not com- mon Accidents	ib.
Nor distinct from each other	ib.
That his Nature is simple	ib.
But one GOD	ib.
The Creator of the World	ib.
The Governor of it	425
This proved from GOD's absolute Perfection	ib.
What are those Ideas under which GOD is to be conceived	426
Perfections of GOD. See Perfections.
GOD perfect in Knowledge	428
His Holiness explained	431
His Veracity shewn	ib.
His Goodness shewn	432
The Nature of GOD's Goodness	ib.
Sovereignty no Attribute of GOD	433
The Extent of his Power explained	ib.
Cannot do Contradictions	ib.
The Perfections of GOD—Rules to judge of his Works	437
Made all Things perfect	439
Foreknew all the Actions of his Creatures	440
Consequences from the Wisdom of GOD	ib.
Made nothing in vain	ib.
Consequences from the Truth of GOD	442
	to 444
The Governor of the World	450
Foresees all Things	451
Capable of governing all Things	ib.
He cannot act contrary to the Natures of Things	ib.

He

	Page.
He will not apply extraordinary Means, when ordinary Means will do	451
He is a good Governor	452
Orders all Things for the Happiness of his Creatures	ib.
The Holiness of God in the Government of the World	453
Natures of Things the Rule of God's Operations	ib.
Does not act by arbitrary Will	ib.
Governs natural Things in a natural Way	454
— Rational in a rational Way	455
The Freedom of God in the Government of the World	459
He can act differently	ib.
This applied to the Operations of his Holiness, Goodness, and Truth	460
Does nothing contrary to the Natures of Things, any further than they are altered	ib.
His Nature discoverable by Reason	465
Will supply Men with supernatural Graces, if necessary	494

Vol. IV.

His Wisdom shewn in the Jewish Law	48
1 st , As the Jews were a dull People	ib.
2 ^{dly} , As they were prone to Idolatry	ib.
3 ^{dly} , As they were to be kept a separate and holy People	49
Why God suffered many Egyptians to go away with his People, and why he preferred the Gibeonites	52

G O O D N E S S.

Page.Vol. III.

L E N G.

Essential to the Divine Nature	165
The same in Kind, tho' not in Degree, in all rational Creatures	168

G O S P E L.

Vol. I.

B R A D F O R D.

Imperfect Promulgation of it considered	356
Whether to be preached in a future State	357
Preached in a proper Time	ib.
Why some Parts of the Earth do not know it	359

S T A N H O P E.

Wherein it exceeds the Law	469
----------------------------	-----

Vol. II.

Mysteries of it not repugnant to Reason	2
The GOSPEL Dispensation to be preferred upon Account of its Mysteries	70
Moral Duties of it practicable	72
The Success it met with in the World, an unanswerable Argument of its Doctrine coming from God	74 to 80

B U T L E R.

GOSPEL a divine Revelation	368
----------------------------	-----

W O O D W A R D.

The GOSPEL proved to be the Word of God by the Excellency of its Doctrine	383 Gives
--	--------------

	Page.
Gives us an Evidence of supernatural Aids	384
— By the Accomplishments of many ancient Prophecies	385
The Divinity of the GOSPEL proved by Miracles	ib.
The Success of it, a Proof of its Truth	386
Proved by a Cloud of Witnesses	ib.

Vol. III.

GURDON.

Were either written or allowed of by some Apostle	410
There were GOSPELS written from the Beginning of Christianity	ib.
Are the same now as when they were at first written	412
No Evidence that any of the Apocryphal GOSPELS were writ by that Apostle or Apostles whose Names they bear	413
Great part of the various Readings trivial	415
Not corrupted by Hereticks	417

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

Antithesis between the Law and the GOSPEL	198
The Grace of it sometimes signifies Forgiveness	201
And is so opposed to the Merit of Works, and to the Efficacy of legal Expiations which only figured out the Way to that Pardon, which they could not procure	ib.
The Grace of the GOSPEL does otherwise import the Gifts of the Holy Ghost	202
And so the Law of Moses , literally considered, is opposed to it	ib.
	Not

Not that they under the Law were without all Communications of Grace and Pardon	202
But these were given only in Virtue of the GOSPEL	ib.
The Truth of the GOSPEL is opposed to the Shadows of the Law, either as containing livelier Descriptions of a future State	ib.
— Or as shewing the true Atonement, and not the figurative , which was effected by Christ	203
The Authors of the GOSPEL and Law	204
Moses acted ministerially	ib.
Christ authoritatively	205

G R A V I T A T I O N.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Not essential to Matter	52
-------------------------	----

Vol. II.

J. CLARK.

What	412
------	-----

Vol. III.

What	242
By it the Earth becomes a Globe	243

H

H A P P I N E S S.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Eternal HAPPINESS of the Blessed	170
----------------------------------	-----

WOODWARD.

Eternal HAPPINESS proved from the Goodness of God	403
---	-----

Vol. III.

The HAPPINESS of Man considered as a rational Creature	446
Proper Means of his HAPPINESS provided as a sociable Creature, viz. Language; Society, and a Sufficiency of every Thing	447
His HAPPINESS a rational HAPPINESS	ib.
Man's social HAPPINESS provided for	453
What the End and HAPPINESS of Man	465
How to be attained	467

HARBINGER.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

A HARBINGER expected before the Messiah	191
What Grounds for such Expectation	ib.
Called by some Elijah the Prophet	193
The Office of this HARBINGER	194
— To point out the Messiah	ib.
How this was fulfilled in John the Baptist , who could not be Elijah the Tishbite	195
But had his Name from some Resemblance in the Reservedness of his Life, &c.	ib.
He corrected the Jews vain Conceit of national Privileges	ib.
The Difference between John and the former Prophets	ib.
The Objection, That he denied himself to be the Messiah, answered	196
The Objection, That he did not fulfil the Predictions of Elias , answered	ib.
The

Page.

The Tendency of his Doctrine such as was foretold	197
A second Coming of a HARBINGER not inconsistent to be supposed, since there will be a second Coming of Christ	ib.

H E A T H E N S.

Vol. II.

WOODWARD.

Ignorant of the Original of the World	378
Could give no Account of the Depravity of Mankind	ib.
Could give no Account of the Incarnation, Sufferings, &c. of the Son of God for Men	379
Had no Notion of any Way in which God would pardon	380
Had no Notion of the Sanctification of a Sinner by the Holy Ghost	ib.
Had no perfect Scheme of Morality	ib.
Had no Certainty of the eternal Rewards and Punishments of a future State	ib.

H I S T O R Y.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

HISTORY of Moses credible	7
The Credibility of the HISTORY of the Children of Israel , and of their Afflictions	44
The wise Ends of their Affliction considered	ib.
Their Affliction proper for the Preservation of true Religion	45
Proper to prepare their Minds for their Removal to Canaan	ib.
The Reason of God's Judgment upon Egypt	ib.

HU-

HUMAN NATURE.

Page.

Vol. IV

BURNET.

The Origin of the Depravation of it	11
Whether the Effect of one or more Sins, whether inflicted as a Punishment, or a natural Effect	ib.
Was not the Effect of Sin, merely as Sin	13
Was a natural Effect of a natural Cause	14
Was the Effect of eating the forbidden Fruit	ib.
This agreeable to the History of Moses	ib.

JESUS.

Vol. I.

KIDDER.

His Miracles were as great an Evidence, that God sent him, as those which Moses wrought, were of his Mission	74
His Predictions more convincing than those of Moses	75

BLACKHALL.

His Miracles a Proof of his Mission	398
-------------------------------------	-----

STANHOPE.

His Example, who observed the Law of Moses , not inconsistent with the Christian Doctrine concerning the Expiration of the Levitical Law	460
Whether the Prophecies concerning the Mes- siah in the Old Testament be fulfilled in Jesus	483

Vol. II.

Died for the Sins of Mankind	30
2	His

	Page.
His Death a Sacrifice for Sin	30
Whether God might justly punish him for other Men	48

S. CLARK.

His Life an Evidence of the Truth of the Christian Religion	172
His Miracles an Evidence of his Divine Com- mission	173

Vol. III.

LENG.

Prejudices against his person considered	206
His mean and suffering State	ib.
His dying and yet promising Life to others	207
The Dignity of his Person	ib.
The Unity of his two Natures	209
Objection against the Time of his Appearance	ib.
——— To the Place	210
Prejudices against his Doctrine	212
——— Thought too plain by some, too sub- lime by others	213
——— Deficient in some Points of Morality	ib.
His Precepts too severe	214
——— Not so effectual as it ought to be	215

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The promised Saviour	75
His Agreement with the first Promise shewn	ibid.
How he bruised the Serpent's Head	ibid.
How all Nations shall be blessed	77
How he is a Prophet like unto Moses	ibid.
VOL. IV.	Y
	How

	Page.
How he is a King sitting upon David's Throne	79
How he was a Priest	81
Predictions of the Time of his Coming fulfilled	82
He came at the most suitable Time	84

J E W S.

Vol. I.

KIDDER.

Of their Infidelity	71
Have as much Reason to own Jesus as a Prophet as Moses	ibid.
Have the same Reason to receive the four Gospels, as the Writings of Moses	78
Reasons why they reject Jesus , 1. A carnal Temper	84
2. Malice	85
3. Pride	ib.
4. Overvaluing of Rights and Institutions	86
5. An implicit Belief	ib.
Too great an Opinion of the oral Law	87
Careful in the Education of their Children	89
The Insincerity of convert Jews an Obstacle to the Conversion of the Jews	ib.
Their Objections, against Mark xi. 13, 14. concerning the Fig Tree, answered	90, &c.
——— Concerning the Prayer of Jesus , Luke xxiii. 34, answered	92
——— Concerning the different Relations of the Time, when the Women coming to Christ's Sepulchre, answered.	93
——— Concerning the forty six Years that the Temple was a Building, John xi. 20. answered	96
——— Concerning Mat. v. 34. Swear not at all , answered	98
——— Against

- Against John xiii. 34, answered 98
- Against Mat. i. 25. and he knew her not &c. answered 99
- Against Mat. xix. 17. as if inconsistent with what we believe of the Divinity of Christ, answered 101
- Against Mat. xx. 23. But to sit on my right &c. answered 102
- Against Mark xiii. 32. But of that Day, and that Hour knoweth no Man &c. answered 103
- Against Mat. xii. 40. For as Jonas was three Days &c. answered 104
- Against Mat. xi. 23. And he came and dwelt at Nazareth &c. if misquoted, answered ib.
- Against Mat. v. 43. Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour &c. as falsifying the Law of Moses, answered 108
- Against John vii. 38. He that believeth in me, as the Scripture saith, &c. answered 109
- Against John xix. 28. concerning Jesus's Words, I thirst, answered ib.
- Against John xix. 36. answered 110
- Against Mark ii. 26. In the Days of Abiathar &c. as is falsly quoted, answered ib.
- Against Mat. xxv. 32. From the Blood of righteous Abel &c. answered 111
- Against Mat. xxvii. 9. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy, answered 113
- Against Mat. ii. 15. Out of Egypt have I called my Son, answered 114
- Against Mat. ii. 17, 18. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy, saying,

	Page.
ing, in Ramah was there a Voice heard &c. answered	115
STANHOPE.
Why they believe their Scriptures	417
Their Arguments to prove Christ's Miracles performed by, prove the same against Moses	423
Whatever Degree of Certainty the Jews can pretend to have of the Actions and Doc- trines of Moses being faithfully transmitted, the Christian has this and more for the Ac- tions &c. of Jesus &c.	429, to 434
Why said to be sanctified by ritual Obser- vances	448
Their Objections, that Christ did not abolish Death, answered	461

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

Their demanding Jewels of the Egyptians considered	46
The Reason of their going through the Wil- derness and their continuing so long there, considered	47
Were a dull People	48
Were prone to Idolatry	ib.
Were to be kept a separate People	49
Were to be a holy People	ib.
Proper Motives to observe their Law	50
The Necessity of their having temporal Pro- mises	ib.
The Necessity of their being instructed in the true Religion	51
Why kept so long in the Wilderness	52
The	The

The Reason why God brought them into Ca- naan in that terrible Manner	52
The Reason of their Festivals	ib.
Their Obligation to read the Law	53

BERRIMAN.

Have corrupted the Scripture Doctrine of the Messiah to a low Meaning, so not to be charged with allegorizing in this Point	100
Their Expectations of the Messiah at the Time and some Time after the Appearing of Jesus	189
Their Unreasonableness of forbidding a Cal- culation of the Times, which upon every Scheme must be expired	190

I M M A T E R I A L I T Y.

Vol. III.

GURDON.

Implies no Contradiction	325
Some of the Properties of an immaterial Sub- stance are as well known as some of ma- terial Substance	326
Tho' we form no Idea of an immaterial Be- ing, this would not prove the Impossibility of its Existence	ib.
The Union of Material with Immaterial can- not be proved impossible	366

BURNET.

What becomes of the immaterial Principle in Brutes?	443
--	-----

INCARNATION.

Page.

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

Doctrine of it in the New Testament	18, to 27
Not repugnant to the natural Reason of the Greeks	17

INFIDELITY, and INFIDELS.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Causes of it	182
--------------	-----

BUTLER.

INFIDELS credulous	368
--------------------	-----

Vol. III.

LENG.

Other probable Causes of it may be assigned, besides want of Evidence	108
May proceed from Negligence	109
From vicious Practices	ib.
From Pride &c.	110

GURDON.

Motives to INFIDELITY	320
1. An Affectation of Singularity	ib.
2. An Aversion to Superstition	321
3. A Desire of being uncontrolled	ib.
4. The Want of a careful Examination	323
The Difficulties in conceiving some Perfections in God, no Reason for disbelieving them	324
Nothing but a Contradiction can justify such a Belief	325

I R R E-

I R R E L I G I O N.

Page

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

Several Degrees and Consequences of it	234
The Grounds and Pretences of it	241
How far it is capable of Proof	ib.
The usual Methods of defending it	243

I N S E C T S.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Of the Shape and Structure of them	472
The Shape of their Body adapted to their Manner of Life	ib.
The Make of their Bodies very curious	ib.
Of the Eyes and Antennæ of INSECTS	473
Of the Parts and Motion of INSECTS	ib.
Of the Sagacity of INSECTS to secure them- selves against Winter	474
Of the Care of INSECTS about their young	475
Their great Care in finding out proper Re- ceptacles for their Eggs and Seed	ib.
Their Curiosity in repositing their Eggs	476
Their different Nidification	ib.

I N S P I R A T I O N.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

How an inspired Person can be satisfied of the Truth of a Revelation	135
An Inspired Person must be a good Man	137
Different Senses of it	156
INSPIRATION one way of Revelation	163
Difference between it and Illusion	168

Y 4

I N T E L-

INTELLIGENCE.

Page.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

If a Perfection cannot arise purely out of that which itself had no such Perfection	96
Not possible to be an Effect of Figure and Motion	97

Vol. III.

GURDON.

Three Ways of accounting for it	357
Not essential to Matter	358
Does not arise from Figure and Motion	360
We conceive a Difference between INTEL- LIGENCE and Figure	ib.
Unity of Thought could never arise from Matter	362
That INTELLIGENCE cannot proceed from Matter proved from our Conscioufness	464

J U D A H.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

A constant Preference given to that Tribe	130
A Continuation of it promised till Shiloh come	131
This was so understood by Isaiab's Prediction of the Birth of Immanuel	ib.
This made them not believe the Predictions of their Captivity	132
The Prophets were careful to guard against this Objection by exprefs Promises of Re- storation	ib.
The gathering of the People is by some to be	under-

I N D E X.

329

Page.

understood to be of the People of Israel,
and to JUDAH, not to Shiloh 132

J U D G M E N T.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Of the Day of JUDGMENT 168

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

This Life not a Time for JUDGMENT 307

The true Uses to be made of temporal JUDG-MENTS ib.

Private JUDGMENT (See Free-thinking)

K.

K N O W L E D G E.

Vol. III.

The natural KNOWLEDGE of God, the moral KNOWLEDGE of God 297

L.

L A N G U A G E S.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The Reason of the Confusion of them 34

L A W.

Vol. I.

STANHOPE.

Why God did so severely punish the Breach of the ritual Law 447
Cere-

	Page.
Ceremonial Part of it a Mark of Distinction to the Jews	449
Typical of the Messiah	450, to 456
Insufficient of itself for the Justification of Sin- ners	456
Ceremonial Part designed to cease	458, to 460
Intimation of a future State under and before the Law	465, to 468
Why temporal Blessings were made the ex- press Encouragement for Obedience under the Law	468

S. CLARK.

Vol. II.

Of Nature eternal, universal, and unchange- able	133
Of Nature Obligatory, antecedent to the Consideration of particular Rewards and Punishments	134

LAW Jewish.Vol. IV.

BURNET

The LAW of Virginity accounted for	58
The Reason of the LAW about Genealogies	59

BERRIMAN.

Antithesis between the LAW and the Gospel	198
Consists in the Characters of both	ib.
LAW contains Precepts of different Kinds	199
LAW of Moses distinguished into the Moral , which is founded in Reason but enforced by Revelation	ib.
Ceremonial prescribing towards Rites	ib.
Judicial relating to Methods of Government	ib.
	Some-

	Page.
Sometimes one LAW partook of every Kind	200
Exemplified on the 4th, 5th, and 6th Commandment	ib.
The Antithesis between the LAW and the Gospel further stated as to the Method of Dispensation	204
——In that the LAW only pointed to those Benefits which the Gospel effected	ib.
The Authors of the LAW and Gospel	ib.
Moses called ministerially	ib.
Christ authoritatively	205
The Mosaic LAW not to be perpetual	ib.
The Arguments from Reason for the Perpetuity of the LAW considered	ib.
The Change of the LAW, does not argue a Change in God	206
The LAWS of God in Fact have been changed	ib.
The Reason assigned by Maimonides for some LAWS, is not perpetual	ib.
The same is argued from the typical Tendency of others, to point to Christ	207
The Scriptural Arguments for the Perpetuity of the LAW considered	ib.
As, how it was not allowed to add or diminish from it	ib.
How the Commandment was not to be brought from Heaven	ib.
Why the Jews were required to remember the LAW of Moses	208
The Objection stated from those Texts, which prescribe any of the Jewish Rites by an Ordinance for ever	ib.
The Word Le'olam is used to express as well a limited, as eternal Duration	209
——Sometimes a Term for Life	ib.
——At	At

	Page.
———At other Times, for the Year of Jubilee	209
———Or for a long Duration in Time past	ib.
Words of a stricter Import are not applied to the Ceremonies of the LAW	ib.
There is nothing to hinder us from taking it with Limitations	ib.
The Jewish Distinction between this World and that to come	ib.
———By which some Texts of Scripture are explained	211
This is applied to the Mosaic Precepts, which seem many of them designed only for the Land of Canaan	ib.
Particularly the Festivals in the Judgment of St. Chryostom	ib.
Another Distinction of legal Rites into ordinary and occasional , the first of which may be said to be for ever	212
The Abolition of the LAW argued, 1st, From the Nature of the legal Precepts	215
A Difference between the Duties founded merely upon Precept, and those that appear to be founded in the Reason of Things	ib.
Yet the positive Duties have an inward Meaning	ib.
Whether there be secret Relations of Things to establish the Necessity of positive Duties	214
The ritual Precepts were not always required, and had many of them respect to such Usages of other Nations, as are now disused	215
They had likewise a typical View to Things that are since abolished	ib.
This shewn in the Case of Circumcision	ib.
	As

	Page.
As also of Sacrifices	216
The Prophet Jeremy upon this Subject	ib.
What is instituted for a certain End by the Law-giver if that End be otherwise secured	ib.
Many of the Jewish LAWS were adapted to the Land of Canaan	217
—— Were meant to distinguish the Jews	ibid.
The new Moons not exactly observed but in Judea	ib.
Nor yet the Sabbath, the Days not being every where equal	218
And so the Sabbatic Years and Jubilees could be observed only where the Seasons of the Years kept the same Course	ib.
Some LAWS given to them as Inhabitants of Canaan only	219
Many other occasions of resorting to the Tem- ple which would be equally impracticable	ib.
The Impracticableness of the moral Law a- rises not from the Nature of the LAW, but from the Frailty of Man	ib.
Whether the LAW may be perpetual as to the Jews , tho' not as to the Gentiles , an- swered in the Negative, because one LAW should be for them all	220
That God would dispense with the LAW in impracticable Cases, and inforce it in all others, is an arbitrary Solution	ib.
Some of the Mosaic LAWS, or Rites were to be abolished	221
1. Such as the Ark of the Covenant	ibid.
2. Another Instance we have in the Leviti- cal Priesthood	222
3. The Sacrifices were to cease	224
4. The

	Page.
4. The Tradition of the Rabbins mention the Ceasing of Oblations	224
———The Cessation of Festivals	225
———Concerning the Abolition of Meats	226
That this refers only to Cases of Necessity, refuted	ib.
That these Dispensations, being Matter of Tradition may be understood of the Sub- stance of the LAW, not true	227
Express mention made of a new LAW to be given by the Messiah	ib.
How the LAW prefigured the Messiah	233
The LAW a Standing Prophecy of the Mes- siah	235
The LAW has a typical Meaning	ib.
———proved from selecting the Jewish Na- tion	336
———as there is no other End assignable for legal Rites	ib.
———As some of them are explained in the Old Testament to a spiritual Purpose	ib.
The last Ground is taken from the uniform View, which the Mosaic LAW has upon the Christian Exposition, and its Confirma- tion from thence	237
———The Proofs of the New Testament do confirm this Exposition of the Old	238
———Inasmuch as 'tis advanced, and taught in the Books of the New Testament	ib.
Three Objections that lie against this Me- thod of Interpretation, answered	239
———That it is obscure	ibid.
———But there may be wise Reasons for this, tho' we do not perceive them	ibid.
———AND

- And some Reasons were given to promote Humility, and Industry 239
- As also to conceal sacred Mysteries from evil Spirits, and evil Men 240
2. That this typical Interpretation is arbitrary ib.
- It is answered, that in some Cases we have a certain Application made in Scripture ibid.
- And in other Cases there are Rules to be prescribed for our Security ib.
- As first, to keep the Analogy of Faith ib.
- 2dly, Not to make the mystical Sense exclude the literal 241
- 3dly, Not to lay stress on a single Type ib.
- 3dly, 'Tis objected, that this Method of Interpreting is inconsistent 242
- The Aptness of the typical Interpretation of the LAW ib.
- Which appears in the main Ceremonies of the LAW 243
- It is asserted as the great End of the LAW, to lead Men to Christ, and not to indulge a vain Humour in the People ib.
- The Similitude of some Heathen Rites being more reasonably accounted for another Way ib.
- The Allegorical Sense was intimated by Moses veiling his Countenance 244
- A mystical Meaning acknowledged by the Jews ib.
- And this is reasonably referred to Christ who is typically set forth in many different Views 245
1. The Tabernacle, or Temple figured Christ's Incarnation or Tabernacling with us ib.
- As

	Page.
— As also the Faithful , who are Temples of God, and in whom Christ dwells	246
— It was covered with baser Metals, to denote the outward afflicted State of Christ and his Church	ib.
— As also its moveable Condition, till the Time of Solomon , denoted their unsettled State in this World	ib.
Mysteries concealed in every Part of it	247
The Court represents the visible Church	ib.
The Altar and Laver imported Christ and his Sacraments	ib.
The Horns of the Altar set forth the Power of our Redeemer	ib.
The Holy Place figures out the invisible Members of Christ's Church	ib.
The Shew Bread betokened Christ the Bread of Life	248
The Golden Candlesticks denoted the Graces of God's Holy Spirit	ib.
The Altar of Incense , Christ's Intercession	ib.
The Holy of Holies , the Emblem of the Highest Heaven	ib.
The Veil denoted the Concealment of Mysteries under the Darkness of legal Shadows	ib.
See more to this Purpose	249
Second Instance is, the Method of worshipping by Sacrifice	ib.
The third Instance, of the mystical View and Meaning of the Levitical Worship, and that respects the Administrator	252
— Who fore-shewed Christ , as well in Purity of Descent	ib.

I N D E X,

337

Page.

— As also in unblemished Perfection	253
— And in the Rites of Consecration, &c.	ib.
The Application of all this to the Christian Scheme	254

J. CLARK.

The particular LAWS the original Constitutions of Things upon the Earth are subject to	242
--	-----

LAW of NATURE.

Vol. III.

LENG.

Founded in the Relation of Man to God	125
---------------------------------------	-----

BURNET.

What the LAWS of Nature	468
Primary and secondary LAWS	ib.
All Particulars comprehended in these	470
These LAWS the Foundation of Right and Wrong	480
Motives to inforce the LAWS of Nature	481

LIBERTY.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

LIBERTY not in itself an impossible Notion	100
Spinoza's and Hobb's Arguments against it, answered	105

LEVITY.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

What	412
------	-----

VOL. IV.

Z

LIFE.

	Page.
L I F E.
Vol. II.
J. CLARK.
This LIFE not a Time for Judgment	307
Vol. III.
BURNET.
The Notions of LIFE explained	427
The Perfections of LIFE	ib.
L I F E E T E R N A L.
Vol. II.
W O O D W A R D.
Declared in Holy Scriptures	400
Truth of it proved from the Veracity of God	401
L I G H T.
Vol. II.
D E R H A M.
Its Usefulness	411
Its Swiftnefs	412
Its Extention	ib.
L I G H T of N A T U R E.
Vol. III.
J. CLARK.
How far fufficient to teach Men their Duty	301
Improved by Revelation	ib.
L I G H T natural, or Natural Reason.
Vol. IV.
B E R R I M A N.
The Defects of it to answer the Purposes of Religion	91
Labours under four Defects	ib.
	1st,

1 st , As to the Instances and Measures of our Duty	92
2 ^{dly} , As to the Rise of Evil	93
The Doctrine of Transmigration of Souls did not solve the Difficulties	94
The Doctrine of Fatal Necessity subversive of Religion; as also that of two oppo- site Principles	ib.
3 ^d Defect of Natural LIGHT is, that it gives no Assurance of Pardon	96
4 th Defect is taken from the Motives to O- bedience, which are defective by Natural LIGHT	97

M

M A L E S.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

More MALES born than Females	452
------------------------------	-----

M A R R I A G E.

Vol. I.

BRADFORD.

Objections against it answered	331
--------------------------------	-----

M A T T E R.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Has no Sensation	9
What	ib.
Not from Eternity	42
Allowing it to be eternal, yet Atoms of them- selves could not form a World	44
No Species of it can think	9

GASTRELL.

	Page.
MATTER not eternal	211
Motion not necessary to it	212

HARRIS.

Cogitation not essential to it	276
--------------------------------	-----

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

MATTER of the World not necessarily existing	89
--	----

HANCOCK.

Not eternal	205
Supposing MATTER eternal, we cannot give any Account of the Frame of the World, without the supposing a God	206
Motion not essential to it	210
Essence of it unknown	212
Spinoza's and Hobbes's Opinion of it false	214
The Motion of the finer Parts of it cannot produce Understanding, or any other Faculties of the Mind	214
	to 217

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

The Quantity of MATTER in the World cannot be called Evil	235
The Powers of MATTER	ib.
The Imperfection of those Laws of Motion which MATTER is subject to	236

GUR-

GURDON.

	Page.
Spinoza's Account of it absurd	331
Motion not essential to MATTER	343
Toland's Arguments to prove the Activity of MATTER, answered	ib.
Idea of MATTER without Motion, is not a partial Consideration of it	ib.
Its Divisibility no Proof that it is an active Being	344
That our Idea of MATTER always contains some Quality which necessarily supposes Motion, answered	345
Supposing all MATTER in Motion, this would not prove its Activity	346
There could be no Concretions of MATTER, supposing Motion essential to it	347
There could be no Variation as to the Quantity of Motion, if all MATTER was self-active	ib.
Another Reason to prove the Inactivity of MATTER is, that Bodies of equal Bulk weigh unequally	349
Exceptions against God's being the Mover of MATTER	352
As easy to conceive how an immaterial Substance may act upon MATTER, as how MATTER acts upon itself	354
Intelligence not essential to it	358
Nor does it arise from Figure and Motion	360
We conceive a real Difference between Intelligence and Figure	ib.
Unity of Thought could never arise from any compound Substance, such as MATTER.	362 is	M E-

MEDIATOR.

Page.

Vol. I.

BRADFORD.

A MEDIATOR generally expected 313

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Not unreasonable to believe a MEDIATOR should be appointed between God and Men 166An Objection drawn from the Dignity of the Person whom we believe to be our ME-
DIATOR, answered 167*Vol. III.*

The Notion of a MEDIATOR, general 518

M E N.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Not from Eternity 16

Infinite Generations of them contradictory to itself ib.

Contrary to Fact 17

The Origin of them not from the Stars 18

Not from Mechanism 21

Not from Chance 29

GASTRELL.

Nature of MAN 198

MEN all equal, supposing there is no God 235

May act what they think right, supposing there is no God 236

Religious MEN most happy 240

BRAD-

BRADFORD.

Page.

Considered as Sinners	307
Fallen MEN suspicious of God	318
By their Apostacy fallen into gross Ignorance of God	321
Fallen MEN find themselves indisposed to comply with the Divine Will	348
Unable to obtain Salvation by themselves	354
Their different Circumstances considered at the Day of Judgment	362

Vol. II.

TURNER.

MEN after their Fall must be in a State of Misery	279
--	-----

BUTLER.

Not from Eternity	365
Not formed in Time, by the casual Motion of the Parts of Matter	ib.
This proved from the Frame of our Bodies, and the Powers of our Souls	366
Ought to fear God because he is good	359

WOODWARD.

Have an Aversion to Annihilation	403
----------------------------------	-----

DERHAM.

A Survey of MAN	454
Of the Soul of MAN	ib.
Of their various Inclinations	ib.
Of the erect Posture of Man's Body	457
Of the Figure of MAN's Body	ib.
Of the Size of MAN's Body	ib.

	Page.
Of the Structure of the Parts of MAN'S Body	458
Of the Placing the Parts of MAN'S Body	ib.
Of the Provision of MAN'S Body against Evils	459
Of the Consent of the Parts of MAN'S Body	460
Of the Variety of MENS Faces, Voices, and Hand-writing	461

Vol. III.

L E N G.

MAN more particularly proves a God	152
More excellent than other Creatures	153
His outward Structure considered	ib.
Use of Speech peculiar to him	154
Mind and Reason of MAN related to some- thing above him	ib.
The Powers of his Mind free	155
Wisdom in MAN	156
Goodness in MAN	ib.
Obliged to enquire after the Will of God	169

J. CLARK.

Whence is it that MEN and other Animals are liable to Death	253
And whence is it that they are liable to Pain, &c.	255
What Right to eat inferior Creatures	257
Has no Right to abuse them	259
Of the distinct Powers and Faculties of MAN	273
Distinguished into Soul and Body	ib.
Of the Soul or Mind of MAN	ib.

O f

Page.

Of the Passions of MEN arising from the Body	275
Inclinations and Passions in MEN, abstracted- ly considered, are not Evil	276
The Consideration of MAN as a compound Creature	281
Whence MAN is capable of committing Sin, by abusing his Liberty	287
To this the Scripture ascribes the Sins of MEN	288
This Account agreeable to every MAN's own Experience	289
The Objection against MAN's being made a reasonable Creature, answered	ib.
The State of MANKIND as represented in the Gospel	300

GURDON.

MEN not always safe in acting according to their Opinions	320
Obliged to search into the Pretences of Re- velation	384

BURNET.

MAN made perfect both in Body and Mind	439
MENS natural Desires and Fears are suited to their respective Objects	444
That what all MEN naturally desire or fear hath a correspondent Being, and is fit to be desired and feared	ib.
MAN provided with all Things necessary to his Happiness	445
His Happiness considered as a rational Crea- ture	446

	Page.
Proper Means of his Happiness provided as a sociable Creature	447
His Happiness a rational Happiness	ib.
MEN ought to endeavour to be like God	449
Our Faculties to be employed to the End they were given for	450
Obliged to behave ourselves suitably to our several Relations	ib.
Only happy when acting by Reason	453
MAN governed as an understanding and free Creature	456
From the good or ill use MEN make of their Liberty, different Methods of Govern- ment	ib.
What necessary to MAN in a State of Na- ture	462
To be informed of his Happiness, and of the Nature of God	463
What the End and Happiness of MAN	465
How to be attained	467

M E S S I A H.

Vol. I.

STANHOPE.

Did exalt the Moral Law	442
Came when he was expected	482

Vol. II.

The Meanness of the Figure he made on Earth, a stumbling Block to the Jews , but no Exception against him	65 to 70
--	-------------

WHISTON.

MESSIAH the Aim of the old Prophecies	233
---------------------------------------	-----

Mrs-

	Page.
MESSIAH to arise from the Seed of David	264

WOODWARD.

Spoke of in Scripture as a Divine Person	387
Has the Divine Attributes given to him	389

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

His Descent promised to the Tribe of Judab	129
Shiloh allowed to be one Name of the MESSIAH	ib.
Understood so by the Antients	ib.
Appears in the constant Preference given to the Tribe of Judab	130
A twofold Estate of the MESSIAH foretold	170
The Notion of two MESSIAHS has no Foundation in Scripture	172
His Coming foretold to be before the utter Overthrow of the Jewish Temple and Polity	176
Two Methods made use of by Daniel , for settling the Time of the MESSIAH	183
1 st , That it should be in the Time of the fourth or Roman Kingdom	184
2 ^{dly} , That it should be within the Space of seventy Weeks	ib.
Messiah Nagid , or the Prince, a Title of the great Deliverer expected	ib.
Isaiab's Voice in the Wilderness does clearly relate to the Introduction of the MESSIAH	192
The Messenger in Malachi is the same with Isaiab's Voice in the Wilderness	ib.
And allowed by some Jews	ib.
	The

	Page.
The MESSIAH was to be a Priest	223
Was to give a new Law	227
To be a Prophet like Moses	228
Delivering God's Word as Moses did	229
And extending his Precepts to all Nations	ib.
MESSIAH prefigured by the Law	232

M I R A C L E S.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

A Proof of Revelation	134, 155
-----------------------	----------

S. CLARK.

The MIRACLES of Christ superior to those of Moses	419 to 426
---	------------

Vol. II.

Of MIRACLES in general	173
A MIRACLE may be done by a less Power than the Divine Omnipotence	173, 174
Not rightly to be defined to be that which is against the Course of Nature	174
How we are to distinguish them wrought by God from the Frauds of Evil Spirits	176
The Definition of a true MIRACLE	177
The Strength of Christ's	178
The Objection, that we prove MIRACLES by the Doctrine, and the Doctrine by the Miracles, answered	ib.
MIRACLES of Apollonius, &c.	ib.

HANCOCK.

— A Proof of a God	200
--------------------	-----

WOOD,

WOODWARD.

	Page.
———A Proof of the Gospel	385

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Destroy not the Use of Reason	98
-------------------------------	----

LENG.

What we are to understand by a MIRACLE	184
An Effect obvious to Sense	ib.
A supernatural Effect	ib.
Yet not necessarily an Effect of the immediate Power of God	185
Must be the Sign of somewhat	188
MIRACLES possible	ib.
Capable of Proof as other Facts	189
How to be distinguished	ib.
By their Greatness and Number	190
By their long Continuance	ib.
By their Tendency to Good	191
The Thing proved by them must be worthy of God	ib.
What Connection between Divine MIRACLES, and a Divine Commission	ib.
Veracity of God a necessary Attribute	192
Antient MIRACLES, how far an Evidence of the Doctrine of Scripture	196

GURDON.

The Possibility of them proved	385
Are a good Proof of a Divine Mission	386
Our Saviour's MIRACLES were no Effects of any Laws of Nature, unknown to Men,	be-

	Page.
because no Reason can be given, why no more of them are produced	386
Supposing them so, how could our Saviour know them	387
Giving Life to a dead Body cannot be done by any Agent inferior to God	388
MIRACLES of the Egyptian Magicians not real	ib.
No Proof that Apollonius raised a dead Person to Life	389
Apostles able to judge whether Christ came to Life again	ib.
The Apostles Testimony concerning the Gospel MIRACLES not to be suspected	404
The false MIRACLES of the following Centuries no Reason for suspecting the Gospel Miracles	409

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

How far they are of use in expounding Prophecy	102
--	-----

M O N S T E R S.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Whence they proceed	255
---------------------	-----

M O R A L I T Y.

Vol. I.

GASTREL.

What Degree of Evidence for it	223, 224
--------------------------------	----------

Vol.

Vol. II.Page.

S. CLARK.

Tends to the Good of the World 141

Vol. III.

LENG.

No perfect MORALITY where the first Principles of Religion are not entertained 120

Not between Man and Man 122

Human Actions depend upon Belief ib.

Moral Actions still more 123

MORALITY must respect God 125

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

The Method in which the Heathen Moralists deduced the Obligation to the particular Duties of MORALITY 281

Wherein the MORALITY of the Heathens was deficient ib.

The Manner in which the Duties of MORALITY are recommended by Revelation 283

M O R A L.

Vol. I.

HARRIS.

That there is no MORAL Good or Evil refuted 281

STANHOPE.

MORAL Service preferred to ritual 447

M O S E S.

Page.Vol. I.

KIDDER.

His Books are worthy of Belief 78

STANHOPE.

His Prophecies compared with those of Christ 426

A faithful Historian 429

M O T I O N.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Superadded to Matter cannot produce Sense 10

No determinate MOTION can beget Sense ibid.

Not eternal 42

Allowing it to be eternal could not form a
World 44

GASTRELL.

MOTION not essential to Matter 216

HARRIS.

MOTION not essential to Matter 274

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

MOTION of the World not necessary 89

Toland's Opinion of it confuted ib.

HANCOCK.

MOTION of Matter cannot produce Understanding 214*Vol.*

Vol. III.Page.

GURDON.

The Existence of it a Proof of a God	342
Causes of MOTION	ib.
MOTION not from an infinite Succession of Impulses	ib.
MOTION not essential to Matter	343
MOTION not essential to it, because,
1. There could be no such Thing as any Concretions of Matter	347
2. Because there could be no Variation as to the Quantity of it	ib.
Particular Self-Movers consistent with an universal Mover	354
The Existence of such particular Self-Movers possible	ib.
Thought does not arise from Figure and MOTION	360

MOTIVES.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

That are proper to influence an intelligent and Free-Agent	283
These MOTIVES suppose some Law	285

GURDON.

MOTIVES to Infidelity	320
-----------------------	-----

MYSTERIES,

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

In what Sense the MYSTERIES of the Gospel exceed our Comprehension	2
VOL. IV. A a	Our

	Page.
Our not comprehending MYSTERIES no just
Bar against our believing them	4, to 7
Ought to be believed	7
Not to be imputed to Priestcraft	15
That the requiring Mens Assent to mysterious
Points gives great Offence answered	16

N.

NATURE.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Course of it, what	174
--------------------	-----

HANCOCK.

Different Significations of NATURE	194
------------------------------------	-----

Vol. III.

LENG.

Abuse of the Word Nature	158
--------------------------	-----

NATURE HUMAN.

Vol. III.

LENG.

Corruption of it surprizing	177
—Not to be cured by Philosophy	ib.
(See Human Nature)

NATIONS.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The Reason of the Disperſion of NATIONS	35
---	----

OBLI-

O B L I G A T I O N S.

Page.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Moral OBLIGATIONS antecedent even to their being the Will of God	133
Yet are moreover the Will of God	140
Proved from a Consideration of God's attributes	ib.
From the Nature of God's Creation	ib.
From the Tendency of Morality to the Happiness of the World	141
Tho' incumbent on all rational Creatures antecedent to any Respect of Rewards and Punishments, yet must be attended with them	ib.

O M N I P R E S E N C E.

Vol. II.

H A N C O C K.

An Attribute of God	203
The Difficulty of conceiving it without Divisibility, is no greater than that of conceiving a finite Spirit	ib.

O P I N I O N S.

Vol. III.

G U R D O N.

Men not always safe in acting according to their OPINIONS	320
---	-----

P.

P A R A D I S E.

Vol. II.

J. CLARK.

Of PARADISE	164
-------------	-----

A a 2

P A-

P A R E N T S.

Page.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

- The original State of our first PARENTS 291
 The Punishment of the Transgression of our first PARENTS 293
 (See Transgression.)

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

- Hard to conceive how our first PARENTS could fall into Sin 4
 Must be by Mistake ib.
 Cause and Motive of that Mistake 5
 Our first PARENTS capable of Temptation to Sin, but in one Instance 6
 They complied with this out of a Principle of Duty ib.
 Why not preserved totally from Death after they were fallen 18
 A Necessity they should be told of the Certainty of Death, and of the Resurrection 19

P A S S I O N S.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

- The Notion of the PASSIONS explained 434
 Really belong to the Divine Nature ib.
 Are Modifications of the Will ib.
 The Reason of their different Names 435
 The Perfection of the PASSIONS in God 436

P E R-

P E R C E P T I O N.

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

Page.

Ideas of it not necessarily connected with those of Extension, Figure, &c. 215

P E R F E C T I O N S.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

PERFECTIONS of God 426
 —Of God considered as a Substance 427
 The Notions of a Substance explained ib.
 The several PERFECTIONS of Substance ib.
 The PERFECTIONS of God considered as a living Substance ib.
 —Notion of Life explained ib.
 The PERFECTIONS of Life ib.
 Life and Power the same thing ib.
 The PERFECTIONS of God, as a Substance with Sense 428
 —By Sense what ib.
 The PERFECTION of God in respect of this called his Happiness ib.
 The PERFECTIONS of God as a Substance with Reason ib.
 —By Reason, what ib.
 PERFECTIONS of the Divine Will 429
 —Of the Will explained ib.
 —The Holiness of God 431
 —The Veracity of God proved from his Holiness ib.
 —The Goodness of God proved from his Holiness 432
 —The Nature of Divine Goodness ib.

A a 3

—————His

	Page,
—His Justice, Mercy, Equity, Patience, only different Operations of Goodness	432
Sovereignty NO PERFECTION of God	433
THE PERFECTIONS of God, Rules to judge of his Works	437

PHILOSOPHERS.

Vol. III.

LENG.

Not qualified to cure the Corruption of Hu- man Nature	178
Deficient in Matters of Religion	179
They owned their Want of Revelation	180
Their Methods to oppose the Christian Religion	203

GURDON.

Have always allowed a moral Difference in Things	379
Even the Epicureans	380

Vol. IV

BURNET.

Their Knowledge owing to the Jews	73
--	----

PLANTS.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Why God made so many noxious	416
------------------------------	-----

POWER.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Infinite, what?	101
Cannot Work a Contradiction	ib.
Cannot destroy its own Being	ib.

I N D E X.

359

Page.

Can create Matter	101
Can create immaterial free cogitative Substances	102
Can indue a creature with a POWER of beginning Motion	104
Can indue a Creature with Liberty	ib.
What Degrees of POWER God may communicate to other Creatures we cannot know	173

P R E A C H I N G.

Vol. III.

GURDON.

Excellency of the Christian	398
-----------------------------	-----

P R Æ S C I E N C E.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

The Nature and Foundation of it	298
PRÆSCIENCE does not affect the Actions of free Beings	ib.
PRÆSCIENCE no just Reason for over-ruling the Faculties of Free Beings	ib.

P R E C E P T S.

Vol. II.

BRADFORD.

Objections against the Christian PRECEPTS of Temperance, Chastity, Self-Denial, and Mortification, answered	330
---	-----

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

Mosaic, (See Law)	211, to 227
Prefigure out the Gospel Benefits, and therefore to cease	232
A a 4	What

	Page.
What Grounds to suppose the antient Rites prefigured the Gospel Mysteries	233
Three which are drawn, 1. From the Usages of other Nations	ib.

P R O D I G I E S.

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

A Proof of a God	199
------------------	-----

P R E D I C T I O N S.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

Typical have the same Authority with the literal	101
Antient Predictions of the Messiah were de- livered at fundry Times	103
Therefore not at first so fully understood	ib.
The PREDICTION of the Seed of the Woman to bruise the Serpent's Head has a mystical Meaning besides literal	104
—— Might be in some Measure unfolded to our first Parents	105
Who could not but suppose some higher Meaning lay concealed	106
What meant by the Seed of the Woman	108
Who meant by the Sons and Daughters of Men	109
Lameck's Speech upon the Birth of Noah , im- ports some Improvement in raising the Fruits of the Earth	110
Which is reasonably understood to betoken greater Blessings—of which Noah might be reckoned as a Type of that Seed	111
	The

The Blessing of Shem is a farther Limitation of the Descent of the Blessed Seed	111
---	-----

P R O P H E T S.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The Promise of a PROPHE T like unto Moses , explained	55
The Wisdom of this Promise	57

BERRIMAN.

The Promise of a PROPHE T like unto Moses foretold	136
Which some have understood falsely of a Suc- cession of PROPHE TS	ib.
For there was not a constant Succession of PROPHE TS	137
Their Office for publick Benefit	138
The Text foretells a PROPHE T in the singu- lar	139
And one like unto Moses , which was a Cha- racter peculiar to the greatest PROPHE T of all	ib.
And one commissioned to speak the Word of God, which answers to the delivery of the Law by Moses	140
The Commination against those who disobey this PROPHE T, how fulfilled	141
The Threatning against false PROPHE TS, why added	142

P R O P H E C Y

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

A Proof of Revelation	134
A Proof

	Page.
A Proof of Revelation	153
S. CLARK.
PROPHECIES of Jesus compared with those of Moses &c.	427
Christian Interpretation of the PROPHECIES vindicated	470, to 477
Why the PROPHECIES relating to the Messiah obscure	471
Notwithstanding their Obscurity, they an- swered the ends God designed them for	477
What the End of PROPHECIES	ib.
Whether the PROPHECIES alledged from the Old Testament do truly belong to the Messiah	483
Whether fulfilled in Jesus	ib.
PROPHECY one Species of Miracles	489
PROPHECY well made out a proper motive of Faith	ib.

Vol. II.

PROPHECIES concerning Christ prove his Mis- sion	479
HIS OWN PROPHECIES further prove it	ib.

HANCOCK.

PROPHECY a Proof of a God	199
---------------------------	-----

WHISTON.

PROPHECIES Jewish use a Year for a Year	229
——— Use a Day for a Year	ib.
The Stile of both follow the Custom of the Age and Nation of each Prophet	230
Last Days signify the Days of the Messiah	ib.
Prophetic Numbers used with great Exactness	ib.
General

General Words signify the most remarkable in their kind	230
Great Difficulties already cleared, a Sign that the rest will be cleared hereafter	ib.
Prophetic stile enigmatical, but rational	ib.
—Stile distinct without double Senses	231
Messiah the grand Aim of the PROPHECIES	233
Some PROPHECIES concern his first, some his second Coming	234
PROPHECIES alledged by the Evangelists be- long solely to the Messiah	235, to 239
PROPHECIES oft use the past Tense for the future	239
Prophetic Stile often suited to the Time of the Accomplishment	ib.
Prophetic Stile often abrupt	240
PROPHECIES not understood sometimes, un- derstood by the Prophets themselves	242
That PROPHECY Gen. iii. 14, 15. of the Mes- siah's explained	ib.
That PROPHECY of the Deluge	245
PROPHECY concerning the Posterity of Ja- phet	247
PROPHECY concerning the Multiplication of Abraham's Posterity	ib.
PROPHECY, that in Abraham's Seed all Na- tions should be blessed	ib.
PROPHECY, that the Posterity of Abraham should possess the Land of Canaan	249
PROPHECY concerning the Birth of Isaac	250
PROPHECY of the Children of Israel's De- scend into Egypt and Stay there	ib.
PROPHECY concerning the Destruction of So- dom	251

	Page.
PROPHECY that the Posterity of Jacob should be more powerful than the Posterity of E-sau	251
PROPHECY concerning Joseph's Exaltation, &c.	253
PROPHECY concerning Pharaoh's Dreams	ib.
PROPHECY concerning the coming of Shiloh	ib.
PROPHECY that the Jews were to be happy when obedient, and miserable when disobedient	256
PROPHECY of a Star, or Scepter to arise out of the Posterity of Jacob	259
PROPHECY that the High Priest should continue in the Family of Phineas for ever	260
PROPHECY of a Prophet like unto Moses	261
PROPHECY concerning Jericho	262
PROPHECY of the Kingdom of the Messiah	ib.
PROPHECY of the Judgments against the House of Eli	263
PROPHECY that the Messiah was to rise from the Seed of David	264

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Destroy not the Use of Reason	98
-------------------------------	----

LENG.

Accomplishment of PROPHECIES delivered by Christ and his Apostles	205
---	-----

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The Necessity of them with respect to the Jews	53
4	The

The Time of our Saviour's coming prophesied	59, 60
Several PROPHECIES relating to the promised Saviour	62
The Reason of PROPHECY ceasing among the Jews	63
Scripture PROPHECIES rightly understood by us	64
The Reasons of it	ib.
The PROPHECIES of the Messias understood in their natural Meaning	66
PROPHECIES not fulfilled before Christ	70

BERRIMAN.

PROPHECY of the gathering of the People implies the Obedience of all Nations to the Messiah	133
PROPHECY of a Prophet like unto Moses considered	136, to 142
The Part of PROPHECY of Balaam considered, that concerns the Character of Christ	143
This PROPHECY not fulfilled in David	144
—May relate to him as a Type of a more illustrious Person	ib.
PROPHECY of Nations , 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c. how applicable to Solomon , and how to Christ	148
The Application to Christ in the New Testament may be vindicated from the Old	ib.
Particularly from the two Characters in the parallel Place in Chronicles from the secure Condition of the People; and from the Continuation of one King, without Successors thro' all Ages	149
	Julian's

	Page.
Julian's Objection that PROPHECY was ceased in the Church, how answered by St. Cyri	155
The PROPHECY of Haggai that the Messiah was to come before the Destruction of the Temple, not to be understood of the third Temple, which they expect to be built in the Days of the Messiah	178
Nor figuratively of the Christian Church as a Spiritual House	ib.
But literally of the Temple that was then erecting	ib.
As appears from a Consideration of the Place Objected that the Glory did not come whilst Zerubbabel's Temple stood, but after it was rebuilt by Herod	179
Answered, the Jewish Temple was reckoned to continue, so long as it was not destroyed by their Enemies	ib.
So that the second Temple reached from one Captivity to the other	ib.
Nay in the Stile of the Prophet, the Temple seems to be reputed one thro' the whole of its Duration before, and after the Captivity : the Words former and later belonging not to the House, but to the Glory of it	180
This Glory did not lie in the Magnificence of the building	ib.
Nor yet in its Duration, which was slight to answer such pompous Descriptions, or compensate for manifold Defects	181
This Glory must be greater than the ancient Shechinah	ib.
The Desire of all Nations is a Phrase alluding	ing

ing to the antient Descriptions of him, as coming for the Benefit of Mankind	181
The Jewish Interpretation of it, as meaning precious Things, confuted	ib.
Desire is a Word elsewhere used to express the Affection of a People to their King	182
And Words of like Import are applied to the Messiah by Malachi	ib.
The Ground of such Desire is the Place expected from him	ib.
And this being introduced by great Commotions, was not to give Place to any other Dispensation	ib.
Commotions fell out accordingly	183
Daniel's Prophecy of the seventy Weeks	184
The Desolation here spoken of is a more lasting one than that of Antiochus , and therefore must be that of the Romans , and accordingly is spoken of in the New Testament as still future	185, 186
The Benefits here promised, do point out the Offices of the Messiah	ib.
The most Holy could not be the Jewish Sanctuary	187
But either Heaven, or the Church, or rather Christ himself	ib.
Weeks here designed could not be Weeks of Days	188
—— But of Years, and those computed from a Royal Edict to rebuild Jerusalem	ib.
Several Doubts about the Method of computing these Weeks	ib.
But the Main of the Argument is not affected by them, since every Way they must conclude about the Time of Jesus	189
The

	Page.
The Expectation of the Jews at that Time, and for some Time after	189
The Unreasonableness of their forbidding a Calculation of the Times, which upon eve- ry Scheme must be expired	190
Christ's Coming not delayed upon Account of the Peoples Sins	ib.

P R O V I D E N C E.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

The continual Government of it	164
A constant PROVIDENCE proved by some Effects	175

W O O D W A R D.

A Proof of a God	375
------------------	-----

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

The necessary Methods of it upon the first Sin, considered	17
Some Methods of it necessary in respect of the Devil, who was the Instrument of drawing Mankind into Sin	20
The History of Moses agrees with this	ib.
The Method of PROVIDENCE after the first Sin	29
The first End of Providence in dealing with Sinners, is the Prevention of Sin	ib.
The necessary Methods of PROVIDENCE af- ter the Deluge, to encourage Mens Obe- dience, and preserve their Faith in the promised Saviour	32

PUNISH-

P U N I S H M E N T S.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Necessary to the Practice of Virtue	134
Being not distributed in this World, therefore there must be a future State	143
Eternal Rewards to the Good, eternal PUNISHMENTS to the Damned	170

WOODWARD.

The Heathen had no Certainty of them	380
--------------------------------------	-----

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

The Evil of it	307
God not the Author of it	ib.
PUNISHMENT threatned to Sinners in the Gospel	308
The Duration of it	309

BURNET.

The Duration of it considered	529
-------------------------------	-----

Q.

Q U A D R U P E D S.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

A Survey of them	462
Of their prone Posture	ib.
The Parts ministring thereto	ib.
The Use and Benefit of their prone Posture	ib.
Of the Heads of QUADRUPEDS	463
Of the Necks of QUADRUPEDS	ib.
Of the Stomachs of QUADRUPEDS	464

VOL. IV.

B b

Of

	Page.
Of the Heart of QUADRUPEDS	464
Its Situation	465
Not fastned to the Pericardium	ib.
The Difference between QUADRUPEDS and Men in the nervous Kind	ib.

R

R E A S O N.

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

What it approves or condemns we are obliged by God to do or not to do	226
---	-----

HARRIS.

Wherein it consists	279
Must be in God in the most perfect Manner	280

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

Difference between Things above and contrary to REASON	7 to 10
Requiring our Assent to Things above REASON, does not take away the Use of REASON in religious Matters	10

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

To judge of Religion	50 to 55
Objection against human REASON being corrupted, answered	80
Texts of Scripture against using human REASON in religious Matters, examined	86 to 94

The

The Corruption of it cannot be proved to be the natural Consequence of Adam's Fall	81
The Use of REASON enjoined in Matters of Religion	94
A proper Judge in all Disputes both natural and divine	96
Use of REASON not superseded by the Helps from Scripture, Faith, Church, or the Spirit of God	97
Miracles destroy not the Use of REASON	98
Nor Prophecies	ib.
What is meant by being above REASON	99
Two Cases wherein REASON must submit to Faith	100

L E N G.

REASON of Man related to something above him	154
Many Properties of it	155 to 158
REASON of the same Kind in all	168

BURNET.

By REASON what	428
The Rule of REASON, the Natures and Rea- sons of Things	464
When REASON said to be right	ib.
How far it discovers natural Religion	465
The Nature of God discoverable by REA- SON	ib.
REASON not sufficient to reform the World	500

RECORDS.

Vol. I.

STANHOPE.

The Method of transmitting the Christian RECORDS affords us greater Assurance of their Purity than those used for the Conveyance of the Jewish Records 439 to 441

REDEEMER and REDEMPTION.

Vol. II.

TURNER.

- God's Wisdom in the REDEMPTION of Man 273
- The Necessity of a REDEEMER 279
- REDEMPTION by Christ has Respect to the Sins of all Mankind 302
- Supposes Misery to have been our Portion without it ib.
- Which Misery must have been in a State of Death 303
- REDEMPTION of human Nature considered 306
- The Necessity of our REDEEMER's taking our Nature upon him 307
- Angels could not redeem us ib.
- This Method of our REDEMPTION vindicates the Righteousness of God's punishing Adam's Sin by the Mortality of all Mankind 308
- God's Glory manifest, if we consider what Christ has done and suffered in our Nature, in order to the Accomplishment of our REDEMPTION ib.
- Christ's Resurrection another Proof of our REDEMPTION 312
- Christ redeemed us, as he is the Son of God 313
- Christ's

I N D E X.

373

Page.

Christ's Ascension into Heaven, necessary to our REDEMPTION 314

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

Promised 22
The Nature of the REDEMPTION ib.
A Means of preventing Sin ib.
Explained to our first Parents ib.
Sacrifices appointed in Remembrance of it 23

BERRIMAN.

It was believed the Redemption of the Messiah should be wrought at the Season of the Jewish Festivals 225
—— But the Festival continued in Memory of his Redemption, would be no longer a Mosaic Festival, but the typical Completion of it 226

R E L A T I O N S.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

The RELATION of Things considered 442
Every Cause proportioned to its Effect ib.
No Effect to be produced above its Cause ib.
No living Creature produced by meer Matter and Motion 443
Nothing in material Generation but Matter. ib.
RELATION between natural Faculties and their Objects. 444
Every Faculty must have an Object ib.

RELIGION.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Requires nothing to be believed contrary to Reason	4
Does not disquiet us with Fears of Damnation	5
Advantageous to us in a single Capacity	6
Good for Society	7

GASTRELL.

What	198, 219
Designed to make us happy	229
The Defect of a regular Practice of RELIGION, and the Consequences of it leads us to acknowledge a future State	231
The Truth of it, from a Comparison of it with Irreligion	234
Objections against it answered	246

BRADFORD.

The Credibility of the Christian	203
What it teaches us concerning God	323
——— Concerning our selves	324.

STANHOPE.

The Truth and Excellency of the Christian	416
---	-----

Vol. II.

The Christian requires nothing to be believed repugnant to right Reason	1
The Perfection of the Christian, in Points of Practice	53
1 st , In regard to our Neighbour, in the loving and forgiving him	53 to 58
	1 2 ^{dly} ,

2dly , In regard to ourselves	58 to 62
The Christian more for the Glory of God, and Good of Mankind, than could have been by such Models as the Enemies of it by their respective Principles have been led to erect in its stead	62

S. CLARK.

Christian RELIGION only to be esteemed a Divine Revelation	159
Has all the Marks of a Divine Revelation	ib.
Practical Duties of the Christian RELIGION are agreeable to our natural Notions of God, and perfective of the Happiness of Men	160
The Motives of it are most suitable to the Wisdom of God, and answerable to the natural Expectations of Men	161
The Manner and Circumstances with which the Christian RELIGION enjoins the Du- ties, and urges the Motives before men- tioned, are agreeable to Reason	162
Doctrines of the Christian RELIGION agree- able to Reason	163
	to 172
An Objection drawn from the Christian RE- LIGION not being in Fact universal, an- swered	168
Christian RELIGION sufficiently proved	182

BUTLER.

Nothing in the Matter of the Christian RE- LIGION shameful	326
Nothing shameful in the Practice of it	327

	Page
RELIGION tends to both publick and private Happinefs	328
Conduces to Peace of Mind	330
Arms us against the Fears of Death and fu- ture Punishment	331 to 336

WOODWARD.

The Christian RELIGION discovers many Truths necessary to our Pardon and Peace	377
——— Discovers the Nature, &c. of God	ib.
——— Promises supernatural Aids	381
——— Lays a Foundation of Comfort in all Conditions	ib.
The Rewards of the Christian RELIGION a Proof of its Original	400

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Revealed, the more it is examined, the more it will gain Belief	71
--	----

LENG.

Principles of it concern all Mankind to be fa- tisfied about	110
Sufficient Reason to believe the Principles of it	112
Unreasonable to persuade others against the Principles of RELIGION, for him who is not himself convinced that they are false	115
Few so convinced	ib.
Unreasonable in respect of God and Men	116
Unreasonable to make RELIGION the Subject of Ridicule	117
Plea for this Sort of Ridicule, answered	ib.

All Societies of Men have ever professed the Principles of Religion	126
Universal Consent in the first Principles of RELIGION, not from human Art	132
Suspicion of this without Foundation, in Point of History	133
Or antient Tradition	134 to 138
The same Suspicion absurd in Way of Reason and Argument	139
Evidences of the Christian Religion	200
The wonderful Manner of its Propagation	ib.
Freed from Suspicion of Imposture	201
Marvellous Effects of the Christian Doctrine in the Lives of Christians	202
Methods of Heathen Philosophy to oppose it	203

GURDON.

The pretended Difficulties in natural and revealed RELIGION no Excuse for Infidelity	313
If any Prejudices were allowable they would certainly be on the Side of RELIGION	ib.
—— Because nothing but such a Belief can carry a Man through the Miseries of Life	314
Epicurus own'd this	ib.
And by all other Atheists in their Account of the first Introduction of RELIGION	ib.
RELIGION lays no Restraints upon us, but for our Advantage	315
—— Really sets the Mind easy from the Fears of a future State	317

BURNET.

What meant by it	421
	Natural

	Page.
Natural RELIGION, what	464
Substance of natural Religion, consists in several Particulars	465
How far discoverable by Reason	ib.

Vol. IV.

True RELIGION, what	51
To preserve which, was one great End of God's Judgments on the Egyptians	ib.
Several Methods taken from Time to Time for the Conveyance of true RELIGION to other Nations besides the Jews	71

B E R R I M A N.

That System of RELIGION which is revealed in Scripture, the most reasonable	99
---	----

R E P E N T A N C E.

Vol. I.

B R A D F O R D.

Accepted by God, through the Death of Christ	366
Perfected by the Assistance of the Holy Spirit	361

Vol. II.

T U R N E R.

Cannot be alone a sufficient Atonement for Sins committed against God	289
This Principle is disagreeable to the Sentiments of the Enemies of Christianity	297
REPENTANCE not allowed in the Offences committed against human Laws	ib.
God has declared his Sentiments against it	299

I N D E X.

379

Page.

It can have little or nothing of the true Nature of Atonement in it	300
It cannot satisfy the Justice of an offended God	ib.
Necessary	317
Is all that is possible in our fallen State Accepted through Christ's Mediation	318
Shall not have its Reward until we shall be restored to a Capacity of perfect Obedience	ib.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

Cannot itself procure Pardon	96
------------------------------	----

R E P T I L E S.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

The Motion of them	478
The Poison of them	ib.
—— Useful to themselves and others	479

R E S P I R A T I O N.

Vol. II.

D E R H A M.

The grand Act of animal Life	434
The Parts concerned therein	ib.
Its Defect in the Fœtus in the Womb	435
In amphibious Creatures	ib.
In some Animals in the Winter	ib.

RESUR-

RESURRECTION.

Page.

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Doctrine of it considered under any human Explication, not a Fundamental of Christianity 36

GURDON.

Disciples Judges whether Christ rose again' 389

BURNET.

The Necessity of one 493

REVELATION.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

What meant by it 124
The Possibility of it ib.
Expediency of it 125
The Certainty of it 127
Its moral Evidence ib.
Natural Proof of it, from Speech and common Notions 129
Traditionary Proof of it 130
Supernatural Proof of REVELATION 133
What are the Characters of it 134
Must be proved by Signs ib.
Must be worthy of God 135
Not contradictory to moral Good and Evil ib.
How to judge of the Truth of it 137
Its subject Matter worthy of God 138
Matter of REVELATION in the Old and
New Testament 140
Matter of it worthy of God 150
Success a Proof of it 155
The

Page.

The Order of it	163
The several Ways by which God revealed himself	164
Several Periods of it	170
Reasons why God revealed himself gradually	173
Perfection of the Gospel REVELATION	176
No Proof of any other REVELATION	177
No Need of any other	178

BRADFORD.

Qualifications requisite towards the receiving a Divine REVELATION	297
--	-----

BLACKHALL.

The Christian sufficient to persuade Men	365
A standing REVELATION may be sufficient	366
A written REVELATION, how said to be of Divine Authority	367
How we may be assured that the Writer of it was an honest Man	368
— A Man may be sure of a REVELATION made to himself	370

STANHOPE.

The Christian is better attested than the Jewish	419
---	-----

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

A Divine REVELATION necessary for the Recovery of Mankind	155
Agreeable to Reason to expect one	ib.
To deny the Use of REVELATION unreasonable	ib.
The Necessity of it	157
God

	Page.
God not obliged to afford Men a REVELATION	158
Want of Universality, no Objection against the Truth of a REVELATION	ib.
The Christian Religion a Divine REVELATION	159
Marks of a REVELATION	ib.
Christian is proved to be from God, from the Miracles of Christ	172
Divine Authority of the Christian REVELATION, proved by the exact Completion of the Prophecies concerning Christ	179

BUTLER.

The Possibility of a Divine REVELATION	368
The Gospel a Divine REVELATION	ib.

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Possible	10
The Way of proving the Christian REVELATION, must be the same as other antient Matters of Fact are proved	11
Upon such a Trial it will appear to be true	12
And consequently Divine.	ib.
Truth of it to be judged by Reason	54

LENG.

Every Man who believes a God, and a Providence, is obliged to enquire whether he has made any REVELATION	165
Not impossible for God to reveal his Will	171
Not incredible	173
Men generally persuaded of some REVELATION	ib.

Page.

REVELATION not unnecessary	176
The Want of it owned by the Philosophers	180
The Fallacy of those who think REVELATION unnecessary	ib.
Every Man's Duty to endeavour to distinguish true REVELATION from pretended	182
There is a true REVELATION	183

J. CLARK.

REVELATION necessary from the Deficiency of Morality	282
Teaches Men their Duty farther than the Light of Nature	301

GURDON.

REVELATION capable of a rational Proof	385
An Objection against REVELATION considered	391
The best Way of teaching the World	394
Why not universal	400
God not obliged to make any REVELATION	ib.
Christian REVELATION is to be universal	402
Why not preached in America and China	403
The Christian REVELATION sufficiently proved	404

BURNET.

Natural REVELATION, what	465
Several REVELATIONS necessary in a State of Purity	482
One concerning Food	ib.
Another Marriage	484
Another Language	488
Necessity of various REVELATIONS	495

	Page.
A REVELATION necessary before the Coming of Christ	499
This proved by the Circumstances of the World	ib.
Several Things necessary to their Happiness wanted	ib.
Their Ignorance and Vice considered	500
The Notions of the World to be reformed by REVELATION	501
The Characters of such a REVELATION	511
Several other Characters	512
Christianity a Divine REVELATION	515

Vol. IV.

Some REVELATION necessary, relating to the Preservation of Mankind from Death	18
A REVELATION necessary to tell them of the Certainty of Death	19
Another to assure them of a Resurrection	ib.
Several REVELATIONS necessary to preserve the Memory of the promised Saviour	28
The REVELATION of the Deluge necessary	32
Several REVELATIONS after the Deluge necessary	33
Several REVELATIONS necessary on the Calling of Abraham	37
Remarks on those REVELATIONS	40
A REVELATION necessary at the Time of the Coming of Jesus , both for Jews and Gentiles	85

BERRIMAN.

Accounts for the Origin of Evil by the Abuse of Liberty	95
---	----

Page.

No Method of Acceptance certain but by RE- VELATION	96
The Want of REVELATION shewn by shew- ing the Authority of Men without it to be objected against, as also Tradition	97, 98
Objection against REVELATION from the Immoralities of Christians answered	99

R I G H T.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Hobbes's Original of RIGHT absurd	135
--	-----

S.

S A B B A T H.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

A Proof of Revelation	123
-----------------------	-----

S A C R I F I C E S.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

A Proof of Revelation	132
-----------------------	-----

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

Of the Nature and Use of them	30
-------------------------------	----

SACRIFICE of Christ a perfect Satisfaction for the Sins of Men	34
---	----

SACRIFICE of Christ made on the Cross	36
---------------------------------------	----

S. CLARK.

Not unreasonable to believe that God would appoint a SACRIFICE for Sin	166
---	-----

Vol. III.

Page.

BURNET.

The World had a Notion of the Necessity of an Expiation by SACRIFICE	526
---	-----

Vol. IV.

Appointed in Remembrance of a Redeemer	23
Reasons of the Institution of SACRIFICES	24
Appointed to give a Sense of Death	ib.
In Remembrance of a Deliverance from it, by the SACRIFICE of a promised Re- deemer	ib.
As a Seal of a Covenant	26

BERRIMAN.

SACRIFICES not sufficient for Pardon upon the Foot of natural Light	96
The Use of, whether instituted by God	112
Appears to have been from the Time of Man's Apostacy, and acceptable if offered by Faith	113
SACRIFICE was not expressed in the original Covenant with the Jews	216
Were to cease in the Days of the Messiah af- ter he had made himself a SACRIFICE for Sin	224
Whether the SACRIFICES on the great Day of Expiation were designed to atone for Sins in general	231
Their Atonement figurative	232
SACRIFICES under the Law of different Kinds	250
_____ And

I N D E X.

387

Page.

- And had different Views, tho' all had something expiatory 250
- Yet the Atonement made was not proper but symbolical, nor did extend to all Cases ib.
- But foreshewed the proper Atonement made by Christ 251

S A C R A M E N T S.

Vol. I.

STANHOPE.

The Christians do not support the Notion of the Acceptableness of a ritual Service more than an inward 448

S A L V A T I O N

WILLIAMS.

The ordinary Means of SALVATION sufficient for SALVATION 191 &c.

Vol. II.

TURNER.

That SALVATION which the Gospel teaches displays much better the Wisdom, Justice, Goodness, Holiness of God, than any other way Mankind has Knowledge of 281

Gospel Account of it considered 305

SALVATION of Men by the Covenant of Grace is conditional ib.

S A T I S F A C T I O N.

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

Doctrine of it plainly delivered in the New Testament 29, to 40

Cc 2 Carries

	Page.
Carries no such disagreement to the Revelations of the Old Testament	41, to 43
Not repugnant to Reason	45

S A V I O U R.

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

Why the Promise of a SAVIOUR was so darkly expressed	27
Because universally known in Moses's Time	ib.
Several Revelations necessary to preserve the Memory of the promised SAVIOUR	28
Necessary to know the Time of his Coming, &c.	ib.
What Means were made use of for the Preservation of the Faith of the promised SAVIOUR	54
The Time of our SAVIOUR's Coming prophesied	59-60
Characters by which the SAVIOUR was to be known	60
The promised SAVIOUR to be a King	61
————— To be a Priest	ib.
The Benefit of these Offices to extend to all Nations	62
Several other Prophecies relating to the promised SAVIOUR	ib.
The Notion of a SAVIOUR universally known	74
The World was universally prepared for his Coming	ib.
Then was the proper Time for his coming	ib.
That the promised SAVIOUR is come, this shewn by the Expiration of the Prophecies	ib.
Jesus Christ the promised SAVIOUR	ib.
His

His Agreement with the first Promise of a SAVIOUR shewn	75
The Predictions of the Time of a promised SAVIOUR fulfilled in Jesus Christ	82

SCRIPTURE.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

The Matter of it proved to be true	141
By its Credibility	142
By its self Agreement	143
Its Agreement with other Authors	145
To be preferred to other Authors	ib.
Of divine Inspiration	146
The Matter of it of divine Inspiration	ib.
Books of it of divine Inspiration	156
Writers of it inspired	ib. 159
SCRIPTURE worthy of inspired Authors	161
The Books of it proved to be the same that were wrote by the Apostles	162
SCRIPTURE shuts up all Revelation with the Gospel Revelation	179
SCRIPTURES a Rule of Faith	180
Every Man is to judge of them for himself	182
To be searched by Diligence and Impartiality	183
Concerning the Perspicuity and Difficulties of them	185
Rules to be observed in searching the SCRIP- TURES	187

BRADFORD.

Represent Christ as the Expiator of all Men, viz. those who lived before and after	306
--	-----

BLACKHALL.

Are a Revelation sufficient to persuade Men	371
---	-----

	Page.
Gives us sufficient Directions what to do	ib.
The Motives sufficient to persuade us to do what is required	ib.
Sufficient Reason to convince us of the Truth, Authority and Doctrines of them	373
Reason to believe the Books were written by those whose Names they bear	374
——— Authors in their Relations of Matter of Fact from a Consideration of the Nature, &c. of the Matters recorded	379 to 385
The Authors were capable of writing the Truth	ib.
Were under strong Obligations to write the Truth	386 to 389
Confirmation given by God to the Truth of the SCRIPTURES	389
No intrinsic Evidence of Falshood in the Gospel History.	393
If the Matters of Fact recorded in the New Testament are true, its Doctrines are divine	394
None of its Doctrines incredible	401

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

The Authcrity of them	181
-----------------------	-----

WOODWARD.

Many Truths revealed in SCRIPTURE of great Importance to our Happiness	377
Appear to be the Word of God	382
Speak of the Messiah as a divine Person	387
Prove an eternal Life	400
Are the Word of God	401

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

Not to be wrested to be agreeable to any particular System	7
To be interpreted by a Knowledge of Languages, Idioms, Customs, &c.	ib.
SCRIPTURES proved to be of divine Authority	12
The Matter of them divine	ib.
1. Some Things in them which Men could not invent as Miracles and Prophecies	13
Or such as Men would not if they could, as the Precepts of the Gospel, &c.	ib.
——— Though they could and would invent them, yet could not believe them, as the Rewards and Punishments	ib.
Not of diabolical Invention	14
Books of SCRIPTURE of divine Authority	15
The Writers of them wanted no Knowledge	16
Nor Veracity	18
More Reason to believe the Authors of the New Testament than the Authors of any other antient Book	20
The New Testament would be authentick, though we did not certainly know the several Writers	21
Not corrupted	ib.
Disagreement between the Samaritan and Jewish Pentateuch , not material	22
Objection from the Variety of Canons of SCRIPTURE considered	ib.
Christianity not affected by it	23
The Authority of the New Testament Writers considered barely as Historians	24

	Page.
Objection that Anastafius had a Design to alter all the four Gospels, answered	24
The SCRIPTURE the same since his Time as before	25
Not corrupted by the great Variety of Copies	27
Great Number of various Readings is a Confirmation of the Truth of the Text	28
Objection that the SCRIPTURES are obscure, answered	30
Variety of Interpretations put upon SCRIPTURE, no Objection against them	ib.
The SCRIPTURES are more plain than other Writings	31
Instances of it	ib.
Clear in necessary Points	ib.
To whom, and why the SCRIPTURE is difficult	32
Why so many Controversies in Religion, answered	34
The main Points of revealed Religion are clear and uncontested	35
Religious Disputes do not affect the Ground of Religion in general, nor Christianity in particular	ib.
Modern Systems are no Fundamentals of Christianity	36
SCRIPTURE to be judged of by Reason	54
Easier to be understood now by us than by the Christians of the earliest Times	78
Several Texts against using human Reason in Religious Matters examined	86 to 94
Enjoins the Use of Reason in Matters of Religion	94

L E N G.

	Page.
SCRIPTURE a Record both of Miracles and Doctrines	196
Better attested than any human History	198

J. CLARK.

SCRIPTURE Representations of the present Circumstances of Mankind, and the Me- thod of God's dealing with them, no Ob- jection against the System of the moral World	267
SCRIPTURES a miscellaneous Book	269
The general Design of the SCRIPTURES to recommend Morality	ib.
Suppose God as the Governor of the World	ib.
Do not treat of God in a philosophical Man- ner	270
The SCRIPTURE Use of Tropes and Figures	ib.
Alludes to particular Rights and Customs	271
From not observing the foregoing Rules, have arisen so many Misrepresentations of SCRIPTURE	272

BURNET.

The Credibility of the SCRIPTURE History proved	497
--	-----

Vol. IV.

A History of Providence	2
Various Dispensations of it owing to Sin	2
A Key to understand many SCRIPTURES	86

BERRIMAN.

Authority is a good Rule for interpreting SCRIPTURE, when inforced by Miracles, &c.	101
---	-----

S E L F - E X I S T E N C E.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

The Idea of a self-existent Being	87
SELF-EXISTENCE included in the Idea of a God	88

S E N S A T I O N.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Not inherent in Matter	8
Nor the Result of any Modification of it	ib.

S E N S E.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

By SENSE what	428
---------------	-----

S E N S E S.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Of the five SENSES in general	422
Of the SENSE of Seeing	ibid.
— Of Hearing	427
— Of Smelling	431
— Of Taste	432
— Of Feeling	433

S E R-

S E R P E N T.

Page.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Of the Tranfaction of the SERPENT 293

Vol. IV.

BURNET.

Temptation of him explained	7
Who meant by the SERPENT	ib.
Curse of the SERPENT explained	21
Bruising his Head explained	ib.

S H I L O H.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

One of the Names of the Messiah	129
The gathering of the People is by some understood to be of the People of Israel , and that to Judab , not to Sbilob	132

S I N.

Vol. I.

BRADFORD.

The Nature of it	307
Consequences of it	308
How Men were drawn into the Commission of it	309

Vol. II.

TURNER.

The State of SIN and Happiness incompatible	279
SIN of Adam brought Death and SIN into the World	280
	God

	Page.
God cannot consistent with his Honour, Holiness, and the Reason of his Laws pardon SIN without any Expiation	282
Arbitrary Remission of Sin is disagreeable to the eternal Obligation of the first Law	ib.
Followed by the many bad Consequences	283
Destroys the Necessity of a future State	ib.
Not to be reconciled with the Necessity of Holiness in Men	284
Dishonourable to the Holiness of God	285
Makes the Damnation of Sinners rather arbitrary than righteous	286
Founded on the mistaken Notion of the Justice of God	288
What meant by the Expiation of SINS	289
The Necessity of Expiation	291
The Ends to which Expiation, or Atonement are directed	292
What necessary to make up such Atonement, viz. Punishment of SIN by the Death of the Expiator	293
This Notion confirmed by its Usefulness to solve the Objections brought against it	294
Punishment due to, and misery to be expected from all personal Iniquities, as well as from the SIN of Adam	302

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Of the SIN of our first Parents	290
Of the Infection of SIN	299
—Chiefly the Example, Authority, or Persuasion of others	ib.
Of Temptations to SIN	305
SIN not of God	ib.
The	The

The moral Impoffibility of preventing Sin	Page. ib.
Of the Confequences of Sin	306

BURNET.

Without Sin no Death, nor Mifery, nor future State	457
The firft Sinner liable to Destruction	ib.
What neceffary upon the firft SIN	458
The firft Sinner capable of Prefervation	ib.
What means of Government neceffary upon the firft SIN	459

Vol. IV.

The Origin of it	3
The Time when it began	ib.
It arofe from our firft Parents before they had Children	ib.
Hard to conceive how our firft Parents could fall into SIN	4
It muft have arifen from Miftake in fome Thing, that had been commanded, or forbid by Revelation	ib.
The Caufe of that Miftake	5
The Motive to it	6
The Effects of the firft SIN confidered	10
Why God did not prevent it	16
Ham's Sin confidered	34

S I N G U L A R I T Y.

Vol. III.

GURDON.

An Affection of it one Motive to Infidelity	320
---	-----

SMELLING

Page.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Its Instrument	432
The admirable Use of it to many Creatures	ibid.

SOLOMON.

Vol. IV.

BERRIMAN.

A most eminent Type of Christ	147
-------------------------------	-----

SOUL.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Immaterial	8
------------	---

BRADFORD.

Endued with Liberty	305
---------------------	-----

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Immaterial	103
Immortal	146

BUTLER.

The Powers of it a Proof of a God	366
-----------------------------------	-----

WOODWARD.

The Faculties of it prove a God	376
---------------------------------	-----

DERHAM.

The SOUL of a Man considered	454
Of its various Inclinations	ib.
The Inventive Power of the SOUL	455
	Vol.

Vol. III.Page.

J. CLARK.

The Power of it	274
The Dispositions of it	275
The Passions and Inclinations of it, abstractly considered, are not evil	276
All Evil arises from Mens abusing these Dis- positions and Passions	ib.

GURDON.

The SOUL not the same in different Indivi- duals	355
---	-----

Human SOULS immaterial, but not self-ex- istent	425
--	-----

S O U N D.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Its Necessity and Uses	431
------------------------	-----

S P A C E.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Of infinite SPACE	93
-------------------	----

S P I R I T S.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Animal thro' the Muscles and Nerves cannot beget Sense	10
No Action nor Percussion of them can create Sense	11
	Vol.

Vol. II.

Page.

S. CLARK.

Evil SPIRITS may work Miracles 176

HANCOCK.

SPIRIT, its Effence as much known as the Effence of Matter 212A SPIRIT may be united to an organical
Body 113

S T A T E.

Vol. I.

GASTREL.

A Future certain 232

The Happiness in a Future STATE, only for the Good 234*Vol. II*

S. CLARK.

A Future STATE necessary 143

An Argument for a Future STATE drawn from Men's natural Desire of Immortality 147From Men's Judgment of their own Actions *ib.*From Man's being an accountable Creature *ib.*S T A T E, Future.Vol. III.

LENG.

Believed by others besides the Vulgar 130

Oldest Philosophers believed it 131

J. CLARK.

Happiness and Misery of it expressed in general Terms 309

A STATE of NATURE.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

Page.

Not a State of War	448
All Things in common	ib.
A State of Perfection	462
A Distinction necessary, of a pure and corrupted STATE of Nature	ib.
What necessary to Man in a STATE of Nature	ib.
The Means of Knowledge in a STATE of Nature	ib.
In Things that were the proper Objects of Reason, natural Reason sufficient	463
In Things out of the Reach of Reason, supernatural necessary	464

S U B S T A N C E.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Spinoza's Opinion concerning one only SUBSTANCE, confuted	90 to 95
SUBSTANCE or Effence of the Self-existent Being incomprehensible	92

Vol. III.

BURNET.

God considered as a SUBSTANCE	427
SUBSTANCE, what	ib.
The Perfections of SUBSTANCE	ib.

VOL. IV.

D d

TASTE.

T

	Page.
T A S T E.
Vol. II.
D E R H A M.
The Nerves administering to it	433
The Situation of it	ib.
Consent thereof with other Senses	ib.

T E S T A M E N T, New.Vol. IV.

B E R R I M A N.

Why said to be a better Covenant than the Old	126
--	-----

T E S T I M O N Y.

Vol. III.

L E N G.

Advantageous Difference of Divine and Hu- man	195
--	-----

T E A C H E R S.

Vol. II.

S. C L A R K.

Necessity of them to teach Men their Duty	149
The best Heathen TEACHERS of Morality could not reform the World	151
Because they were very few	ib.
And ignorant of some necessary Doctrines, viz. of the Manner how God was to be worshipped	152
In what Method God would be reconciled to Men	ib.
And of other Doctrines	153

What

What they did know, they were not able to explain clearly	153
What they could clearly prove, they had not sufficient Authority to enforce	154

T H I N G S.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

There are eternal Differences of THINGS	123
They are absurd who deny it	124
The Will of God is determined by these Differences of THINGS	125
All rational Creatures are obliged to govern themselves by the same Rule	126
Proved from the original Nature of THINGS	ib.
And from the Sense wicked Men have of their being under such an Obligation	127
And from Mens Judgment upon their own past Actions, and Actions of others	128
Moral Obligations deduced from hence	ib.
As Piety towards God	ib.
Justice towards Men	129
Universal Benevolence	131
Sobriety towards our Selves.	132
All THINGS that are done in the World, are done either by God himself, or by created intelligent Beings	174

HANCOCK.

A Difference between THINGS	197
-----------------------------	-----

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Unequal Distribution of them in this Life	306
---	-----

THINKING.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Not a Quality of Matter

Page.

105

TRADITION.

Vol. I.

KIDDER.

Christian TRADITION as unexceptional as that of the Jews

77

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

The Jewish Reasons of the Unexceptionableness of their TRADITION, answered

434 to 439

TRINITY.

Vol. II.

STANHOPE.

The Doctrine of it delivered in the New Testament

17, 18

Not repugnant to the natural Reason of the Greeks

27

Vol. III.

IBBOT.

The Doctrine of it considered under an human Explication, is not a fundamental Doctrine of Christianity

36

TRANSGRESSION.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

Of the Punishment threatened to the TRANS-
GRESSION of our first Parents

293

The

Page.

The natural Consequences of inflicting such Punishment	294
The Account of it agreeable to the natural Notions we have of God	ib.

T R E E of K N O W L E D G E.

Vol. III.

J. CLARK.

The Reasonableness of the Prohibition of it	291
This Prohibition the Occasion of the Sin of our first Parents	292

T R U T H S.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Religious, Men hindered from understanding by Carelessness	148
By Prejudices	ib.
By sensual Appetites	149
By vicious Habits	ib.

W O O D W A R D.

Many TRUTHS of great Importance to our Peace, are revealed in the Holy Scriptures, which could not be known by the Light of Nature	377
--	-----

Vol. III.

L E N G.

Sincerity recommended in the Search of it	118
---	-----

TYPES.

Vol. IV

BURNET.

The Probability of them	Page. 54
-------------------------	--------------------

V

VEGETABLES.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Their Variety, Beauty, Use, &c.	480
---------------------------------	-----

VIRTUE.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

The Stoical Opinion of the Self-sufficiency of VIRTUE to its own Happiness	144
---	-----

VISION.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

One Way of Revelation	165
What	ib.

VOICE.

Vol. I.

WILLIAMS.

One Way of Revelation	167
-----------------------	-----

UNDERSTANDING.

Vol. III.

BURNET.

Distinguished into Knowledge and Wisdom	428
---	-----

WILL.

W I L L.

Vol. I.

GASTRELL.

Page.

Idea of it not necessarily connected with those Ideas of Extension, Figure, &c. 215, 216

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Willing not a Quality of Matter 105
Determined by the last Judgment of the Understanding 110

Vol. III.

BURNET.

The Perfection of the Will explained 429
Will and Freedom the same Thing ib.

W I N D S.

Vol. II.

DERHAM.

Their Usefulness 410

W I S D O M.

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

Why God's Wisdom is not so clearly seen in the Government of the moral as in the Fabrick of the natural World. 145

Vol. III.

LENG.

WISDOM not the Result of Matter and Motion 159

BURNET.

Distinguished into Speculative and Practical	Page. 428
--	---------------------

WITCHES.

Vol. II.

HANCOCK.

A Proof of a God	199
------------------	-----

WORLD.

Vol. I.

BENTLEY.

Frame of it a Proof of a God	38
—— Not eternal	39
—— A Mark of divine Wisdom	59
Why not bigger? answered	41
Other Objections answered	65

GASTRELL.

Not made by Matter and Motion	212
Impossible for it to be eternal without the eternal Existence of a God	ib.
Not necessarily existing	218

Vol. II.

S. CLARK.

The material WORLD cannot be the first and original Being	89
Form of it not necessary	ib.
Nor its Motion	ib.
Philosophers Opinions concerning the Eternity of it	92
The Creation of it	163

HANCOCK.

H A N C O C K.

	Page.
The Frame of it a Proof of a God	192
Not from Chance	206
Not produced by former Qualities	207
———by a Plaftic Nature	208
The Form of the WORLD not eternal	ib.
Was created	209

W O O D W A R D.

The Frame of the WORLD proves a God	374
-------------------------------------	-----

Vol. III.

L E N G.

The Frame of it a Proof of a God	148
The Magnitude of the Creation	ib.
The Number and Variety of Creatures	ib.
Exquisite Minutenefs of Parts	ib.
The Beauty and Regularity of every Species	149
The harmonious Correspondence of each Part of Nature to other	ib.
Curious Structure of Animals prove a God	150
Formation of the feveral Organs of Senfati- tion	151
Provision for all the Senses of Animals prove a God	152
Man more particularly proves a God	ib.

J. C L A R K.

The Epicurean Objections againft it arife from Ignorance	224
Modern Objections arife from the fame Cause	225
The Difficulty of judging of the Goodnefs of the System of the WORLD	229

	Page.
The true Method. of judging of the Goodness of such a System	230
The Phænomena of the Material WORLD in general accounted for	236
Of the Planetary System accounted for	237
——— Of the Earth's Motions accounted for	ib.
——— Of the Planets Motions	238
The whole System considered by the same Rules	ib.
The particular Law by which the Planetary System is governed	239
All the Evils that arise from hence, shewn to be only natural Imperfection	ib.
Whence the Irregularities of any Part of this System proceed	240
Objections against the Earth	ib.
With regard to the animate Part of it	ib.
Objection against the unequal Division of Land and Water, answered	244
——— Concerning the Inequality of the Earth's Surface, answered	245
——— Concerning Heaths and Deserts	246
——— Against the Produce of the Earth, answered	252
——— Against the animal Part of the Earth, considered	253
——— Of the Heathen Moralists against the present Constitution and Government of the moral WORLD	263
The Weakness of the Epicurean Arguments against it	264
The Weakness of the Academicks	ib.
Objections of the Moderns against the System of the moral WORLD	265

Defects

Defects and Irregularities in the modern WORLD, not inconsistent with the natural Notions we have of God	265
--	-----

GURDON.

The Frame of the WORLD cannot have its Existence from Necessity	372
Because no Compound Being, such as the WORLD is, can have necessary Existence	ib.
Because there are evident Marks of an ar- bitrary Disposal in it	373
Nothing but Will could determine the Mag- nitude of the Earth &c.	373
Design proved from the Earth's Motion	374
The Signatures of Wisdom which appear in those Parts of the WORLD we are ac- quainted with are Proofs of its being the Effect of some wise Being	375
This proved from the annual Motion of the Earth	ib.
From the Provision that is made for all Ani- mals	ib.
Our Ignorance in the Use of some Things, no Reason for denying the Uses of others, which we do know	376

BURNET.

The immaterial part of it created	425
What Notions we are to form of the Crea- tion of the WORLD, considering it as made by an absolutely perfect Being	437
What meant by Creation, and the WORLD	ib.
The WORLD the Effect of God's Power	ib.

	Page.
The WORLD how made	437
The Novelty of it shewn	ib.
More WORLDS probable	438
The WORLD not made by the meer Will of God without Reason	ib.
The Knowledge, Wisdom, Truth, and Goodness of God, Rules to judge of the Creation of the WORLD	ib.
From his Knowledge, we may conclude God made every Thing perfect in its Kind	439
Particularly Man	ib.
From his Wisdom, that he made nothing in vain	440
All Things suited in all Respects to their fe- veral Ends and different Climates	441
The WORLD considered as the Effect of the Goodness of God	444 to 448
What Notions we are to form of the Govern- ment of the WORLD, considering it as governed by an absolutely perfect Being	450
God's Holiness in the Government of the WORLD	453
A View of the Government of the WORLD, considered in a State of Corruption	489
What necessary to the Government of it in this Case	490
Different Methods, as the Natures of Things are altered	ib.
How far they are altered, and what Method necessary in that Alteration	ib.
The Notions of the WORLD to be reformed by Revelation	503
The Manners of the WORLD to be reformed by Revelation	505

W O R S H I P.

Vol. I.

STANHOPE.

	Page.
Spiritual WORSHIP more acceptable to God than Ceremonial	444 to 449

E R-

E R R A T A.

- VOL. II. pag. 195. l. 5. for Arguments, read Parts.
Vol. III. p. 221. l. 31. for end, r. tend.
Vol. IV. p. 44. l. 26. r. The Credibility of the History of the Children of Israel. P. 173. l. 32--33. for of that, r. to be.
-

